knaves, all, believe none of us Go thy ways to a nunnery Where's your father? 135

Oph At home, my lord

Ham Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in his own house Farewell.

Oph O! help him, you sweet heavens! 140

Ham If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny

Get thee to a nunnery go, farewell Or if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool, for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them To a nunnery, go, and quickly too Farewell 148

Oph O heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham I have heard of your paintings too well enough, God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another you jig, you amble and you lisp, and mumble God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance Go to I'll no more on't, it hath made me mad I say, we will have no more marriages, those that are married already, all but one, shall live, the rest shall keep as they are To a nunnery, go [Exit]

Oph O! what a noble mind is here o'erthrown

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword, 160

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observ'd of all observers, quite, quite down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched, 164
That suck'd the honey of his music's vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh,
That unmatch'd form and feature of brown youth 168

Blasted with ecstasy O! woe is me,
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS

King Love! his affections do not that way tend,

Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little, 172

Was not like madness There's something in his soul

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood,
And, I do doubt, the hatch and the disclose

Will be some danger, which for to prevent, 176
I have in quick determination

Thus set it down he shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute

Haply the seas and countries different 180
With variable objects shall expel

This something-settled matter in his heart, Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself What think you on't?

Pol It shall do well but yet do I believe 185
The origin and commencement of his grief

Sprung from neglected love How now, Ophelia!

You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said,
We heard it all My lord, do as you please, 189

But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him

To show his griefs let her be round with him, 192
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear

Of all his conference If she find him not,
To England send him, or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King It shall be so 196
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go

[Exit.]

SCENE II — A Hall in the Castle

Enter HAMLET and certain Players

Ham Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue, but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently for in the very torrent, tempest, and—as I may say—whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness O! it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a pass on to tatters, to very rags to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise I would have such a fellow whipp'd for o'er-doing Termagant, it out-herods Herod pray you, avoid it 17

First Play I warrant your honour

Ham Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor suit the action to the word, the word to the action, with this special observance that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature, for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature, to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure Now, thus overdone, or come tardy off thought make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve, the censure of which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others O! there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably 40

First Play I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us

Ham O! reform it altogether And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them, for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered, that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it Go, make you ready [Exit] Players.

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work? 52

Pol And the queen too, and that presently

Ham Bid the players make haste

[Exit] POLONIUS.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros } We will, my lord. 56

Gul }
[Exit] ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ham What, ho! Horatio!

Enter HORATIO

Hor Here, sweet lord, at your service

Ham Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation cop'd withal 60

Hor O' my dear lord —

Ham Nay do not think I flatter,
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast but thy good spirits To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd? 64

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice
And could of men distinguish, her election 69 Hath seal'd thee for herself, for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing,
A man that fortune's buffets and rewards 72 Hast ta'en with equal thanks, and bless'd are those Whose blood and judgment are so well commungled

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please Give me that man 76

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay in my heart of heart,
As I do thee Something too much of this

There is a play to-night before the king, 80
One scene of it comes near the circumstance
Which I have told thee of my father's death

I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul 84
Observe mine uncle, if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,

It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul 88

As Vulcan's stithy Give him heedful note,
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming

Hor Well, my lord 92
If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft

Ham They are coming to the play, I must be idle

Get you a place 96

Danish march A Flourish Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-STERN, and Others

King How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham Excellent, I' faith, of the chameleon's dish I eat the air, promise-crammed, you cannot feed capons so 100

King I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet, these words are not mine

Ham No, nor mine now [To POLONIUS]
My lord, you played once i' the university, you say? 105

Pol That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor

Ham And what did you enact? 108

Pol I did enact Julius Cæsar I was killed
i' the Capitol, Brutus killed me

Ham It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there Be the players ready? 112

Ros Ay, my lord, they stay upon your patience

Queen Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by
me 116

Ham No, good mother, here's metal more attractive

Pol [To the KING] O ho! do you mark that?

Ham Lady, shall I lie in your lap? 120 [Lying down at OPHELIA's feet]

Oph No, my lord

Ham I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph Ay, my lord

Ham Dost thou think I meant country matters?

Oph I think nothing, my lord 125

Ham That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs

Oph What is my lord? 128

Ham Nothing

Oph You are merry, my lord

Ham Who, I?

Oph Ay, my lord 132

Ham O God, your only jig-maker What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours 136

Oph Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord

Ham So long? Nay, then, let the devil wear black for I'll have a suit of sables O heavens!
die two months ago, and not forgotten yet?

Then there's a hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year, but, by r lady, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby horse, whose epitaph is, 'For, O' for, O' the hobby-horse is forgot' 146

Hautboys play The dumb-show enters

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly the Queen embracing him, and he her She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck lays him down upon a bank of flowers she, seeing him asleep, leaves him Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her The dead body is carried away The Poisoner wooies the Queen with gifts, she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love [Exeunt]

Oph What means this, my lord? 149

Ham Marry, this is murther mallecho, it means mischief

Oph Belike this show imports the argument of the play

Enter Prologue

Ham We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel, they'll tell all 153

Oph Will he tell us what this show meant?
Ham Ay, or any show that you'll show him, be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means 157

Oph You are naught, you are naught I'll mark the play

Pro For us and for our tragedy, 160
 Here stooping to your clemency,
 We beg your hearing patiently

Ham Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring? 164

Oph 'Tis brief, my lord.
Ham As woman's love

Enter two Players, King and Queen.

P King Full thirty times hath Phæbus' cart gone round 167

Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orb'd ground,
 And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen About the world have times twelve thirties been,
 Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands Unite commutual in most sacred bands 172

P Queen So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done!

But, woe is me! you are so sick of late, 175

So far from cheer and from your former state,

That I distrust you Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must,

For women's fear and love holds quantity, 180

In neither ought, or in extremity

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know,

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear

Where little fears grow great, great love grows

there 184

P King Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too

My operant powers their functions leave to do

And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,

Honour'd, lov'd, and haply one as kind 188

For husband shalt thou—

P Queen O! confound the rest

Such love must needs be treason in my breast

In second husband let me be accurst

None wed the second but who kill'd the first 192

Ham [Aside] Wormwood, wormwood

P Queen The instances that second marriage

move,

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love

A second time I kill my husband dead, 196

When second husband kisses me in bed

P King I do believe you think what now you

speak

But what we do determine oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory, 200

Of violent birth, but poor validity

Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,

But fall unshaken when they mellow be

Most necessary 'tis that we forget 204

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt,

What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose

The violence of either grief or joy 208

Their own enactures with themselves destroy,

Where joy most revels grief doth most lament,
 Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident
 This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange, That even our love should with our fortunes change, 213

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove

Wher love lead fortune or else fortune love

The great man down, you mark his favourite flies 216

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,

For who not needs shall never lack a friend

And who in want a hollow friend doth try 220

Directly seasons him his enemy

But, orderly to end where I begun,

Our wills and fates do so contravert run

That our devices still are overthrown, 224

Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own

So think thou wilt no second husband wed,

But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead

P Queen Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light! 228

Sport and repose lock from me day and night!

To desperation turn my trust and hope!

An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!

Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 232

Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!

Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,

If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham If she should break it now! 236

P King 'Tis deeply sworn Sweet, leave me

here awhile

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep [Sleeps]

P Queen Sleep rock thy brain

And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit]

Ham Madam, how like you this play? 241

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham O! but she'll keep her word 244

King Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest, no offence i' the world 248

King What do you call the play?

Ham The Mouse-trap Marry, how? Tropi-cally This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna Gonzago is the duke's name, his wife, Baptista You shall see anon, 'tis a knavish piece of work but what of that? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwring 257

Enter Player as Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph You are a good choros, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying 261

Oph You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge 264

Oph Still better, and worse

Ham So you must take your husbands

Begin, murderer, pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come, the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge 269

Luc Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing
Confederate season, else no creature seeing Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected, Thy natural magic and dire property, 274
On wholesome life usurp immediately

[Pours the poison into the Sleeper's ears] Ham He poisons him i' the garden for s estate His name s Gonzago, the story is extant, and writ in very choice Italian You shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife 280

Oph The king rises
Ham What! frighted with false fire?
Queen How fares my lord?
Pol Give o'er the play 284
King Give me some light away!
All Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all except HAMLET and HORATIO]
Ham Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play, 288 For some must watch, while some must sleep

So runs the world away
Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor Half a share
Ham A whole one, I 296
For thou dost know, O Damon dear, This realm dismantled was Of Jove himself, and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock. 300

Hor You might have rimed Ham O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound Didst perceive?

Hor Very well, my lord 304
Ham Upon the talk of the poisoning?
Hor I did very well note him.

Ham Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders! 308

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, behke he likes it not, perdy
Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN
Gul Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you 313

Ham Sir, a whole history
Gul The king, sir,—

Ham Ay, sir, what of him? 316 Gul Is in his retirement marvellous dis-tempered Ham With drink, sir?

Gul No, my lord, rather with choler 320 Ham Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor, for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler 324

Gul Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair

Ham I am tame, sir, pronounce 328 Gul The queen, your mother, in most great affection of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham You are welcome 331 Gul Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment, if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business 337

Ham Sir, I cannot Gul What, my lord?

Ham Make you a wholesome answer, my wn't's diseased, but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command, or, rather, as you say, my mother therefore no more, but to the matter my mother, you say,— 344

Ros Then, thus she says your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration

Ham O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart 349

Ros She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed

Ham We shall obey, were she ten times our mother Have you any further trade with us?

Ros My lord, you once did love me Ham So I do still, by these pickers and stealers 356

Ros Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend 360

Ham Sir, I lack advancement Ros How can that be when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark? 364

Ham Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows',— the proverb is something musty

Enter Players, with recorders

O! the recorders let me see one To withdraw with you why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Gul O! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly

Ham I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe? 373

Gul My lord, I cannot.
Ham I pray you

Gul Believe me, I cannot. 376
Ham I do beseech you.

Gul I know no touch of it, my lord

Ham 'Tis as easy as lying, govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music Look you, these are the stops

Gul But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony, I have not the skill 385

Ham Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me You would play upon me, you would seem to know my stops, you would pluck out the heart of my mystery, you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass, and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me

Enter POLONIUS

God bless you, sir!

Pol My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently

Ham Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol It is backed like a weasel.

Ham Or like a whale?

Pol Very like a whale

Ham Then I will come to my mother by and by. [Aside] They fool me to the top of my bent. [Aloud] I will come by and by 409

Pol I will say so

[Exit]

Ham By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends

[Exeunt all but HAMLET]

'Tis now the very witching time of night, When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world now could I drink hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother

O heart! lose not thy nature, let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom, Let me be cruel, not unnatural, 420

I will speak daggers to her, but use none,

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites,

How in my words soever she be shent, To give them seals never, my soul, consent!

[Exit]

SCENE III—A Room in the Castle

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN

King I like him not, nor stands it safe with us To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you, I your commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you. The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow Out of his lunacies

Gul We will ourselves provide Most holy and religious fear it is

To keep those many many bodies safe

That live and feed upon your majesty

Ros The single and peculiar life is bound With all the strength and armour of the mind

To keep itself from noyance, but much more

That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest

The lives of many. The cease of majesty

Does not alone, but, like a gulf doth draw

What's near it with it, it is a massy wheel,

Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd, which, when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence,

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage,

For we will fetters put upon this fear,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros }

Gul }

We will haste us

Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN

Enter POLONIUS

Pol My lord, he's going to his mother's closet

Behind the arras I'll convey myself

To hear the process, I'll warrant she'll tax him home,

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,

'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'er-

hear

This speech, of vantage Fare you well, my liege

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed

And tell you what I know

King

Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit POLONIUS.]

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven,

36

It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,

A brother's murder! Pray can I not,

Though inclination be as sharp as will

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent,

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,

Is there not ram enough in the sweet heavens

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what's in prayer but this two-fold force, 48

To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,

Or pardon'd, being down? Then, I'll look up;

My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer

Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder'?

That cannot be, since I am still possess'd

Of those effects for which I did the murder,

My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.

May one be pardon'd and retain the offence?

In the corrupted currents of this world

Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,

And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buys out the law, but 'tis not so above,

60

There is no shuffling, there the action lies

In his true nature, and we ourselves compell'd

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults

To give in evidence. What then? what rests?

Try what repentance can. What can it not?

Yet what can it, when one can repent?

O wretched state! O bosom black as death!

O limed soul, that struggling to be free

68

Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay,

Bow, stubborn knees, and heart with strings of steel

Be soft as snaws of the new-born babe.

All may be well. [Retires and kneels]

Enter HAMLET

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying,
And now I'll do't and so he goes to heaven,
And so am I reveng'd. That would be scann'd
A villain kills my father, and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send To heaven
Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge
He took my father grossly, full of bread,
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May,
And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?

But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis heavy with him. And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No
Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid hent,

When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,
Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed,
At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't,
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays Thus physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit]

The KING rises and advances

King My words fly up, my thoughts remain below
Words without thoughts never to heaven go [Exit]

SCENE IV —The QUEEN's Apartment

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him,
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with.
And that your Grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here. 4
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!
Queen. I'll warrant you,
Fear me not. Withdraw, I hear him coming POLONIUS hides behind the arras
Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter? 8 Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked
tongue 12

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife,

And,—would it were not so!—you are my
mother 16

Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down, you shall not budge,

You go not, till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you 20

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!

Ham. [Draws.] How now! a rat? Dead, for a ducat, dead!

[Makes a pass through the arras
Pol. [Behind.] O! I am slain. 24

Queen. O me! what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay, I know not 'tis it the king?

Queen. O! what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good
mother, 28

As kill a king, and marry with his brother

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word
[Lifts up the arras and discovers POLONIUS [To POLONIUS.] Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!

I took thee for thy better take thy fortune, 32
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger

Leave wringing of your hands peace! sit you down,

And let me wring your heart, for so I shall if it be made of penetrable stuff, 36

If damned custom have not brass'd it so

That it is proof and bulwark against sense

Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act 40
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty, Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love
And sets a blister there, makes marriage vows
As false as dicers' oaths, O! such a deed 45

As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul, and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words, heaven's face doth glow, Yea, this solidity and compound mass, 49

With trustful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act

Queen. Ay me! what act,
That roars so loud and thunders in the index?

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this; 53

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers
See, what a grace was seated on this brow, Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself, 56

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command,
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill,
A combination and a form indeed, 60

Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man
This was your husband look you now, what follows.

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear, 64
Blasting his wholesome brother Have you eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love, for at your age 68
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment, and what judgment

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
Else could you not have motion, but sure, that sense 72

Is apoplex'd, for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice, 75
To serve in such a difference What devil was't
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense 80
Could not so mope

O shame! where is thy blush? Rebelious hell.
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, 84
And melt in her own fire proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge, Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will

Queen O Hamlet! speak no more,
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul, 89
And there I see much black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct

Ham Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed, 92
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty,—

Queen. O! speak to me no more,
These words like daggers enter in mine ears,
No more, sweet Hamlet!

Ham A murderer, and a villain,
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe 97
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings,
A cut-purse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole, 100
And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings.
You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure? 104

Queen. Alas! he's mad!

Ham Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by The important acting of your dread command?
O! say

Ghost Do not forget this visitation 109
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits,
O! step between her and her fighting soul, 112 Concert in weakest bodies strongest works Speak to her, Hamlet

Ham How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas! how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy 116
And with the incorporeal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep,
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrescences, 120
Starts up and stands an end O gentle son!
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience Whereon do you look?

Ham On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares! 124

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable Do not look upon me,

Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects then what I have to do 128
Will want true colour, tears perchance for blood

Queen To whom do you speak this?

Ham Do you see nothing there?

Queen Nothing at all, yet all that is I see

Ham Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen No, nothing but ourselves

Ham Why, look you there! look, how it steals away, 133

My father, in his habit as he liv'd,
Look! where he goes, even now, out at the portal

Queen This is the very coinage of your brain 136

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music. It is not madness 141

That I have utter'd bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word, which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace, Lay not that flattering unction to your soul, 145
That not your trespass but my madness speaks,
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within, 148
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven, Repent what's past, avoid what is to come,
And do not spread the compost on the weeds
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue, 152

For in the fatness of these pursy times

Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,

Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain. 156

Ham. O! throw away the worse part of it,
And live the purer with the other half
Good night, but go not to mine uncle's bed, Assume a virtue, if you have it not. 160

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery, 164

That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence, the next more easy,
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And master ev'n the devil or throw him out 169
With wondrous potency Once more, goodnight

And when you are desirous to be bless'd, I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord, 172

[Pointing to POLONIUS]

I do repent but heaven hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and thus with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister
I will bestow him, and will answer well 176
The death I gave him So, again, good-night.
I must be cruel only to be kind
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
One word more, good lady

Queen What shall I do? 180

Ham Not this, by no means, that I bid you do Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed,
Pinch wanton on your cheek, call you his mouse,
And let him for a pair of reechy kisses, 184
Or padding in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness, But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know, 188

For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy, 192

Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down 196

Queen Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me

Ham I must to England, you know that? 198

Queen Alack!

I had forgot 'tis so concluded on 201 Ham There's letters seal'd, and my two schoolfellows,

Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate, they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery Let it work, 205
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petar and it shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines 208
And blow them at the moon O 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet.

This man shall set me packing,
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room 212
Mother, good-night. Indeed this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you. 216
Good-night, mother

[Exeunt severally, HAMLET dragging in the body of POLONIUS.]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN

King There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves

You must translate, 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?

Queen [To ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDEN-STERN] Bestow this place on us a little while 4

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN]

Ah! my good lord, what have I seen to-night.

King What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier In his lawless fit, 8
Behind the arras hearing something stir, Whips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat! a rat!'
And, in his brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King O heavy deed! 12

It had been so with us had we been there
His liberty is full of threats to all,
To you yourself, to us, to every one
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence 17 Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man but so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit, 20
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life Where is he gone?

Queen To draw apart the body he hath kull'd, 24

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure he weeps for what is done

King O Gertrude! come away 28

The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch
But we will ship him hence and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill, Both countenance and excuse Ho! Guilden-stern! 32

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN

Friends both, go join you with some further aid Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd
him

Go seek him out, speak fair, and bring the body into the chapel I pray you, haste in this 37

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN]
Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends,
And let them know both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done so, haply, slander,
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter, 41
As level as the cannon to his blank Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,

And hit the woundless air O! come away, 44
My soul is full of discord and dismay [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same

Enter HAMLET

Ham Safely stowed.

Ros } [Within] Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

Gul }
Ham What noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O! here they come 4

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN

Ros What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham Do not believe it.

Ros Believe what?

Ham That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge! what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end he keeps them like an ape, in the corner of his jaw, first mouthed, to be last swallowed when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again

Ros I understand you not, my lord.

Ham I am glad of it a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear

Ros My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king

Ham The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Gul A thing, my lord!

Ham Of nothing bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after

Ham. At supper

King At supper! Where?

Ham Not where he eats, but where he is eaten a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service, two dishes, but to one table that's the end

King Alas, alas!

Ham A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King What dost thou mean by this?

Ham Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar

King Where is Polonius?

Ham In heaven, send thither to see if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby

King [To some Attendants] Go seek him there

Ham He will stay till you come

[Exeunt Attendants]

King Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,

Which we do tender, as we deeply grieve For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence

With fiery quickness therefore prepare thyself, The bark is ready, and the wind at help The associates tend, and every thing is bent For England.

Ham For England!

King Ay, Hamlet

Ham Good

King So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes

Ham I see a cherub that sees them But, come, for England! Farewell, dear mother King Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham My mother father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh, and so, my mother Come, for England!

King Follow him at foot, tempt him with speed aboard

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.

Away! for every thing is seal'd and done

That else leans on the affair pray you, make haste

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN]

And England if my love thou hold'st at aught,—

As my great power thereof may give thee sense,

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red

After the Danish sword, and thy free awe

Pays homage to us,—thou mayst not coldly set

Our sovereign process, which imports at full,

By letters conjuring to that effect,

The present death of Hamlet Do it, England,

For like the hectic in my blood he rages,

And thou must cure me Till I know 'tis done,

Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun.

[Exit.]

SCENE III —Another Room in the Same

Enter KING, attended

King I have sent to seek him, and to find the body

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him

He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,

Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes,

And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,

But never the offence To bear all smooth and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem

Deliberate pause diseases desperate grown

By desperate apphance are reliev'd,

Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ

How now! what hath befall'n?

Ros Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,

We cannot get from him.

King But where is he?

Ros Without, my lord, guarded, to know your pleasure

King Bring him before us.

Ros Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN

King Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

SCENE IV — A Plain in Denmark

Enter FORTINBRAS, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching

For Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king, Tell him that, by his licence, Fortinbras Claims the conveyance of a promis'd march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye,
And let him know so

Cap I will do't, my lord.

For Go softly on.

[Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Soldiers]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, &c

Ham Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap They are of Norway, sir

Ham How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap Against some part of Poland.

Ham Who commands them, sir?

Cap The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras

Ham Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,

Or for some frontier?

Cap Truly to speak, and with no addition,

We go to gain a little patch of ground

That hath in it no profit but the name

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it

Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole

A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee

Ham Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats

Will not debate the question of this straw

This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without

Why the man dies I humbly thank you, sir

Cap God be wi' you, sir

Ros Will't please you go, my lord?

Ham I'll be with you straight Go a little before

[Exeunt all except HAMLET]

How all occasions do inform against me,

And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,

If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

Sure he that made us with such large discourse,

Looking before and after, gave us not

That capability and god-like reason

To fust in us unus'd Now, where't it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple

Of thinking too precisely on the event,

A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,

And ever three parts coward, I do not know

Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do', 44 Sith I have cause and will and strength and means

To do't Examples gross as earth exhort me

Witness this army of such mass and charge

Led by a delicate and tender prince,

Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd

Makes mouths at the invisible event,

Exposing what is mortal and unsure

To all that fortune, death and danger dare,

52 Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great

Is not to stir without great argument,

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw

When honour's at the stake How stand I then,

That have a father kill'd, a mother stam'd,

57 Excitements of my reason and my blood,

And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see

The imminent death of twenty thousand men,

8 That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,

61 Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot

Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,

Which is not tomb enough and continent

64 To hide the slain? O! from this time forth,

My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit]

SCENE V — Elsinore A Room in the Castle

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen I will not speak with her

Gent She is importunate, indeed distract

Her mood will needs be pitied

Queen What would she have?

Gent She speaks much of her father, says she hears

There's tricks i' the world, and hems, and beats her heart,

Spurns unavailingly at straws, speaks things in doubt,

That carry but half sense her speech is nothing,

Yet the unshaped use of it doth move

8 The hearers to collection, they aim at it,

And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts,

Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,

Indeed would make one think there might be thought,

12 Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily

Hor 'Twere good she were spoken with, for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds

Queen Let her come in [Exit Gentleman.]

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,

17 Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss

So full of artless jealousy is guilt,

It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Gentleman, with OPHELIA

Oph Where is the beauteous majesty of

Denmark?

Queen How now, Ophelia!

Oph How should I your true love know

From another one?

24 By his cockle hat and staff,

And his sandal shoon.

Queen Alas! sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

28 He is dead and gone, lady

He is dead and gone

At his head a grass-green turf,

At his heels a stone.

O, ho!

Queen Nay, but Ophelia,—Oph Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,— 36

Enter KINGQueen Alas! look here, my lord.Oph Larded with sweet flowers Which bewept to the grave did go With true love showers 40*King* How do you, pretty lady?Oph Well, God ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table! 45*King* Conceit upon her father*Oph* Pray you, let's have no words of this, but when they ask you what it means, say you thisTo-morrow is Saint Valentine's day
All in the morning betime
And I a maid at your window
To be your Valentine
Then up he rose and down'd his clothes,
And down'd the chamber door
Let in the maid, that out a maid Never departed more. 56*King* Pretty Ophelia!Oph Indeed, la! without an oath, I'll make an end on'tBy Gis and by Saint Charity Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do't if they come to't
By Cock they are to blame
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis'd me to wed
So would I ha' done by yonder sun, An thou hadst not come to my bed. 64*King* How long hath she been thus? 67*Oph* I hope all will be well. We must be patient but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him in the cold ground. My brother shall know of it and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come my coach! Goodnight, ladies, good-night, sweet ladies, goodnight, good-night. [Exit] 76*King* Follow her close, give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit HORATIO]O! this is the poison of deep grief, it springs All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude!When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions. First, her father slain, Next, your son gone, but he most violent author 80Of his own just remove the people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,For good Polonius' death, and we have done but greenly,In hugger-mugger to inter him poor Ophelia Divided from herself and her fair judgment, 85 Without the which we are pictures, or mere beastsLast, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France, 88
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death, Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd, 92
Will nothing stick our person to arraign
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude! this,
Like to a murdering-piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.]Queen

Alack! what noise is this?

Enter a Gentleman.King Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door 97
What is the matter?*Gen*Save yourself, my lord,
The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, 101 O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord,And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, 104
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, 'Choose we, Laertes shall be king!' Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,

Laertes shall be king, Laertes king! 108

Queen How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs!

King The doors are broke [Noise within.]Enter LAERTES, armed Danes followingLaer Where is the king? Sirs, stand you all without 112*Danes* No, let's come in.Laer I pray you, give me leave.Danes We will, we will

[They retire without the door]

Laer I thank you keep the door. O thou vile king!

Give me my father

Queen Calmly, good Laertes 116*Laer* That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,Cries cuckold to my father, brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother*King*

What is the cause, Laertes,

That thy rebellion looks so giant-like? 121

Let him go, Gertrude, do not fear our person

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, 125

Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go, Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer Where is my father?King Dead.Queen But not by him*King* Let him demand his fill. 128*Laer* How came he dead? I'll not be juggled withTo hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation. To this point I stand, 132
That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes, only I'll be reveng'd
Most thoroughly for my father

King Who shall stay you?
Laer My will, not all the world 136
And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge, 140
That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?

Laer None but his enemies.
King Will you know them then?
Laer To his good friends thus wide I'll open my arms, 144

And like the kind life-rendering pelican, Repeat them with my blood.

King Why, now you speak
Like a good child and a true gentleman
That I am guiltless of your father's death, 148
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment pierce
As day does to your eye

Danes [Within] Let her come in.
Laer How now! what noise is that? 152

Re-enter OPHELIA.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt,
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight, Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! 157
O heavens! is't possible a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love, and where 'tis fine 160
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves

Oph. They bore him barefaced on the bier
Hey non nonny nonny hey nonny 164
And in his grave rain'd many a tear —

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
It could not move thus 168

Oph You must sing, a-down a-down,
And you call him a-down-a.

O how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter 172

Laer This nothing's more than matter

Oph There's rosemary, that's for remembrance, pray, love, remember and there is pansies, that's for thoughts 176

Laer A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted

Oph There's fennel for you, and columbines, there's rue for you, and here's some for me, we may call it herb of grace o' Sundays. O! you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy, I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died. They say he made a good end, — 185

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy

Laer Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,

She turns to favour and to prettiness 188

Oph And will he not come again?
And will he not come again?
No no he is dead 192
Go to thy death bed,
He never will come again.
His beard was as white as snow
All flaxen was his poll,
He is gone he is gone 196
And we cast away moan
God ha mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls! I pray God God be w' ye! [Exit] 201

Laer Do you see this, O God?
King Laertes, I must common with your grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, 204
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and
me

If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours, 208
To you in satisfaction, but if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content

Laer Let this be so 212
His means of death, his obscure burial,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call't in question.

King So you shall, 217
And where the offence is let the great axe fall.
I pray you go with me [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same

Enter HORATIO and a Servant

Hor What are they that would speak with
me?

Serv Sailors, sir they say, they have letters for you

Hor Let them come in [Exit Servant].
I do not know from what part of the world 4
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet

Enter Sailors

First Sail God bless you, sir

Hor Let him bless thee too

Sec Sail He shall, sir, an't please him There's a letter for you, sir,—it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England,— if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is 12

Hor Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very war-like appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour, in the grapple I boarded them on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy, but they knew what they did I am to do a good turn for them Let the king have the letters I have sent, and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter These good fellows will bring thee where I am Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England of them I have much to tell thee Farewell

He that thou knowest thine 32

HAMLET

Come, I will give you way for these your letters, And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same

Enter KING and LAERTES

King Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he which hath your noble father slain 4 Pursu'd my life

Laer It well appears but tell me Why you proceeded not against these feats, So crimeful and so capital in nature, As by your safety, wisdom, all things else, 8 You mainly were stirr'd up

King O! for two special reasons, Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsnew'd, But yet to me they are strong The queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks, and for myself,— 12 My virtue or my plague, be it either which,— She's so conjunctive to my life and soul, That as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but by her The other motive, 16 Why to a public count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bear him, Who, dipping all his faults in their affection, Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone, 20

Convert his gyves to graces, so that my arrows, Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, And not where I had aim'd them. 24

Laer And so have I a noble father lost, A sister driven into desperate terms, Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age 28 For her perfections But my revenge will come

King Break not your sleeps for that, you must not think

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull That we can let our beard be shook with danger And think it pastime You shortly shall hear more, 33

I lov'd your father, and we love ourself, And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

Enter a Messenger

How now! what news?

Mess Letters, my lord, from Hamlet This to your majesty, this to the queen 37 King From Hamlet who brought them?

Mess Sailors, my lord, they say, I saw them not

They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them 40

Of him that brought them.

King Laertes, you shall hear them Leave us [Exit Messenger]

High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return HAMLET

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back? 49

Or is it some abuse and no such thing?

Laer Know you the hand?

King 'Tis Hamlet's character 'Naked', And in a postscript here, he says, 'alone 52 Can you advise me?

Laer I'm lost in it, my lord But let him come

It warms the very sickness in my heart, That I shall live and tell him to his teeth, 56 'Thus diddest thou'

King If it be so, Laertes,

As how should it be so? how otherwise?

Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer Ay, my lord,

So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace 60

King To thine own peace If he be now return'd,

As checking at his voyage and that he means No more to undertake it, I will work him To an exploit, now ripe in my device, 64 Under the which he shall not choose but fall, And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe, But even his mother shall uncharge the practice And call it accident

Laer My lord, I will be rul'd, 68

The rather, if you could devise it so

That I might be the organ.

King It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much, And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality 72 Wherein, they say, you shine, your sum of parts Did not together pluck such envy from him As did that one, and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege

Laer What part is that, my lord? 76

King A very riband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too, for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears Than settled age his sables and his weeds, 80 Importing health and graveness. Two months since

Here was a gentleman of Normandy—

I've seen myself, and serv'd against, the French, And they can well on horseback, but this gallant 84

Had witchcraft in't, he grew into his seat, And to such wondrous doing brought his horse, As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd

With the brave beast, so far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer A Norman was't?

King A Norman.

Laer Upon my life, Lamord.

King The very same

Laer I know him well, he is the brooch indeed

And gem of all the nation

King He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report

For art and exercise in your defence,

And for your rapier most especially,

That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed

If one could match you, the scimmers of their nation,

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,

If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his

Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy

That he could nothing do but wish and beg

Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.

Now, out of this,—

Laer What out of this, my lord?

King Laertes, was your father dear to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,

A face without a heart?

Laer Why ask you this?

King Not that I think you did not love your

father,

But that I know love is begun by time,

And that I see, in passages of proof,

Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.

There lives within the very flame of love

A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it,

And nothing is at a like goodness still,

For goodness, growing to a plumsy,

Dies in his own too-much. That we would do,

We should do when we would, for this 'would'

changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many

As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents,

And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift sigh,

That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer,

Hamlet comes back what would you undertake

To show yourself your father's son in deed

More than in words?

Laer To cut his throat i' the church

King No place, indeed, should murder sanc-tuarize,

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good

Laertes,

Will you do this, keep close within your chamber

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home,

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,

And set a double varnish on the fame

The Frenchman gave you, bring you, in fine,

together,

And wager on your heads he, being remiss,

Most generous and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse the foils, so that, with ease

Or with a little shuffling, you may choose

A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice

Requite him for your father

Laer

I will do't,

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.

I bought an unction of a mountebank,

So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,

Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,

Collected from all simples that have virtue

Under the moon, can save the thing from death

That is but scratch'd withal, I'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,

It may be death.

King

Let's further think of this,

Weigh what convenience both of time and

means

May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,

And that our drift look through our bad performance

'Twere better not assay'd, therefore this project

Should have a back or second, that might hold,

If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see,

We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning

I ha't

When in your motion you are hot and dry,—

As make your bouts more violent to that end,—

And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar'd

him

A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,

If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,

Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter QUEEN

How now, sweet queen!

Queen One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow your sister's drown'd,

Laertes

Laer Drown'd! O, where?

Queen There is a willow grows aslant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream,

There with fantastic garlands did she come,

Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,

But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds

Clambering to hang, an envious siver broke,

When down her weedy trophies and herself

Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up,

Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes,

As one incapable of her own distress,

Or like a creature native and indu'd

Unto that element, but long it could not be

Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,

Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay

To muddy death

Laer.

Alas! then, she is drown'd?

Queen

Drown'd,

Laer

Too much of water hast thou, poor

Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears, but yet

It is our trick, nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will, when these are gone

The woman will be out. Adieu my lord!
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that thus folly douts it. [Exit King]
Let's follow, Gertrude
How much I had to do to calm his rage! 193
Now fear I thus will give it start again.
Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I — A Churchyard

Enter two Clowns, with spades and mattock

First Clo Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Sec Clo I tell thee she is, and therefore make her grave straight the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial 5

First Clo How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

Sec Clo Why, 'tis found so

First Clo It must be se offendendo, it cannot be else. For here lies the point if I drown myself wittingly it argues an act, and an act hath three branches, it is, to act, to do, and to perform. argal, she drowned herself wittingly

Sec Clo Nay, but hear you, Goodman delver—

First Clo Give me leave. Here lies the water, good here stands the man, good if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes, mark you that? but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself. argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life 21

Sec Clo But is this law?

First Clo Ay, marry, is't, crowner's quest law 24

Sec Clo Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman she should have been buried out o' Christian burial 27

First Clo Why, there thou sayest, and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers, they hold up Adam's profession. 34

Sec Clo Was he a gentleman?

First Clo A' was the first that ever bore arms

Sec Clo Why, he had none 37

First Clo What! art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged, could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee, if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

Sec Clo Go to 43

First Clo What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Sec Clo The gallows-maker, for that frame outlives a thousand tenants 48

First Clo I like thy wit well, in good faith, the gallows does well, but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill, now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church. argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again, come.

Sec Clo Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter? 56

First Clo Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

Sec Clo Marry, now I can tell.

First Clo To t

Sec Clo Mass, I cannot tell. 60

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO at a distance

First Clo Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating, and, when you are asked this question next, say, 'a grave-maker' the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, fetch me a stoup of liquor

[Exit Second Clown]

First Clown digs, and sings

In youth, when I did love did love

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O! the time for a my behave, 68

O! methought there was nothing meet

Ham Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making? 72

Hor Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness

Ham 'Tis e'en so, the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense 76

First Clo

But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me unti the land,

As if I had never been such. 80

[Throws up a skull]

Ham That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once, how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-offices, one that would circumvent God, might it not? 86

Hor It might, my lord.

Ham Or of a courtier, which could say, 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not? 92

Hor Ay, my lord.

Ham Why, e'en so, and now my Lady Worm's, chapless, and knocked about the mazard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with 'em? mine ache to think on't.

A pick-axe, and a spade a spade, 100

For and a shrouding sheet

O! a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull]

Ham. There's another, why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quilllets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his re-cognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries, is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyance of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha? 120

Hor Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham Is not parchment made of sheep-skims?

Hor Ay, my lord, and of calf-skims too 123

Ham They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sir?

First Clo Mine, sir,

O! a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet. 128

Ham I think it be thine, indeed, for thou hast in't.

First Clo You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours, for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine 134

Ham Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine 'tis for the dead, not for the quick, therefore thou liest

First Clo 'Tis a quick lie, sir, 'twill away again, from me to you

Ham What man dost thou dig it for? 140

First Clo For no man, sir

Ham What woman, then?

First Clo For none, neither

Ham Who is to be buried in't? 144

First Clo One that was a woman, sir, but, rest her soul, she's dead

Ham How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it, the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker? 153

First Clo Of all the days i' the year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras. 156

Ham How long is that since?

First Clo Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that, it was the very day that young Hamlet was born, he that is mad, and sent into England 161

Ham Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

First Clo Why, because he was mad, he shall recover his wits there, or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there. 166

Ham Why?

First Clo 'Twill not be seen in him there, there the men are as mad as he. 169

Ham How came he mad?

First Clo Very strangely, they say

Ham How strangely?

First Clo Faith, e'en with losing his wits. 172

Ham Upon what ground?

First Clo Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years. 176

Ham How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

First Clo Faith, if he be not rotten before he die,—as we have many pocky corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in,—he will last you some eight year or nine year, a tanner will last you nine year

Ham Why he more than another? 184

First Clo Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now, this skull hath lain you i' the earth three-and-twenty years 190

Ham Whose was it?

First Clo A whoreson mad fellow's it was whose do you think it was?

Ham Nay, I know not 194

First Clo A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester

First Clo E'en that 200

Ham Let me see —[Takes the skull]—Alas! poor Yorick. I knew him, Horatio, a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his back a thousand times, and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chapfallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come, make her laugh at that. Prithce, Horatio, tell me one thing

Hor What's that my lord? 216

Ham Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor E'en so

Ham And smelt so? pah! 220

----- [Puts down the skull]

Hor E'en so, my lord

Ham To what base uses we may return Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole? 225

Hor 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so

Ham No, faith, not a jot, but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it, as thus. Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust, the dust is earth, of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Impetuous Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away 236

O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw. But soft! but soft! aside here comes the king

Enter Priests, &c, in procession the Corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following,
KING, QUEEN, their Traus, &c

The queen, the courtiers who is that they follow?
240

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken
The corse they follow did with desperate hand Fordo its own life, 'twas of some estate Couch we awhile, and mark 244

[Retiring with HORATIO

Laer What ceremony else?

Ham That is Laertes,

A very noble youth mark

Laer What ceremony else?

First Priest Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd 248

As we have warrantise her death was doubtful, And, but that great command o'ersways the order,

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd
Till the last trumpet, for charitable prayers, 252

Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on
her,

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home

Of bell and burial 256

Laer Must there no more be done?

First Priest No more be done
We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing a requiem, and such rest to her

As to peace-parted souls

Laer Lay her i' the earth, 260
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! I tell thee, churchly priest,

A murthering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling

Ham What! the fair Ophelia? 264

Queen Sweets to the sweet farewell!
[Scattering flowers

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's
wife,

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,

And not have strew'd thy grave

Laer O! treble woe 268
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense

Depriv'd thee of Hold off the earth awhile, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms

[Leaps into the grave
Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made, 274

To o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

Ham [Advancing] What is he whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow 277

Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them
stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane [Leaps into the grave

Laer The devil take thy soul! 280 [Grapples with ham.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat,
For though I am not splenetic and rash
Yet have I in me something dangerous, 284
Which let thy wisdom fear Away thy hand!

King Pluck them asunder

Queen Hamlet! Hamlet!

All Gentlemen,—

Hor Good my lord, be quiet [The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave

Ham Why, I will fight with him upon this theme 288

Until my eyelids will no longer wag

Queen O my son! what theme?

Ham I lov'd Ophelia forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love, 292
Make up my sum What wilt thou do for her?

King O! he is mad, Laertes

Queen For love of God, forbear him

Ham 'Swounds, show me what thou'lt do Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself? 297

Woo't drink up esel? eat a crocodile?

I'll do't Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave? 300

Be buried quick with her, and so will I
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground, Singeing his pate against the burning zone, 304

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I'll rant as well as thou

Queen This is mere madness
And thus a while the fit will work on him,
Anon, as patient as the female dove, 308

When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,
His silence will sit drooping

Ham Hear you, sir,
What is the reason that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever but it is no matter, 312
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew and dog will have his day

King I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him. [Exit HORATIO

[To LAERTES] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech, 316

We'll put the matter to the present push.
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.

This grave shall have a living monument
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see 320

Till then, in patience our proceeding be
[Exeunt

SCENE II — A Hall in the Castle

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO

Ham So much for this, sir now shall you see the other,

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor Remember it, my lord?

Ham Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting 4

That would not let me sleep, methought I lay Worse than the mutines in the bulboes Rashly,—
And prais'd be rashness for it, let us know,

Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well When our deep plots do pall, and that should teach us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will

Hor That is most certain

Ham Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them, had my desire, Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
To mine own room again, making so bold—
My fears forgetting manners—to unseal
Their grand commission, where I found,

Horatio,

O royal knavery! an exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reasons Importing Denmark's health, and England's
too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grudging of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor Is't possible?

Ham Here's the commission read it at more leisure

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

Hor I beseech you.

Ham Being thus be-netted round with vil-lanes,—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains
They had begun the play,—I sat me down,
Devil'd a new commission, wrote it fair,
I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?

Hor Ay, good my lord

Ham An earnest conjuration from the king,
As England was his faithful tributary, As love between them like the palm should flourish,

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a comma 'twixt their amities,
And many such-like 'As'es of great charge,
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd

Hor How was this seal'd?

Ham Why, even in that was heaven ordinant

I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal,
Folded the writ up in form of the other,
Subscrib'd it, gave't th' impression, plac'd it safely,
The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent Thou know'st already

Hor So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham Why, man, they did make love to this employment

They are not near my conscience, their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow
'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes Between the pass and fell-incensed points
Of mighty opposites

Hor Why, what a king is this!

Ham Does it not, thinks't thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my
mother,

Popp'd i' between the election and my hopes,
Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience

To quit him with this arm? and is't not to be damn'd

To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil?

Hor It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there
Ham It will be short the interim is mine,

And a man's life's no more than to say 'One,'
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself,

For, by the image of my cause, I see

The portraiture of his I'll count his favours

But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me into a towering passion.

Hor Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRIC

Os Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark

Ham I humbly thank you, sir [Aside to HORATIO] Dost know this water-fly?

Hor [Aside to HAMLET] No, my good lord

Ham [Aside to HORATIO] Thy state is the more gracious, for 'tis a vice to know him He hath much land, and fertile let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess 'tis a chough, but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt

Os Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty

Ham I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit Your bonnet to his right use, 'tis for the head

Os I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot

Ham No, believe me, 'tis very cold, the wind is northerly

Os It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed

Ham But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion

Os Exceedingly, my lord, it is very sultry, as 'twere, I cannot tell how But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham I beseech you, remember—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his hat]

Os Nay, good my lord, for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes, believe me an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing, indeed to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see 117

Ham Sir his definement suffers no perdition in you, though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article, and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror and who else would trace him his umbrage, nothing more 128

Os Your lordship speaks most infailibly of him 128
Ham The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Os Sir?
Hor Is it not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really 133

Ham What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Os Of Laertes? 136

Hor His purse is empty already, all's golden words are spent

Ham Of him, sir
Os I know you are not ignorant— 140

Ham I would you did, sir, in faith, if you did it would not much approve me. Well, sir

Os You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is— 144

Ham I dare not confess that lest I should compare with him in excellence but, to know a man well, were to know himself 147

Os I mean, sir, for his weapon, but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he is unfellowed

Ham What's his weapon?

Os Rapier and dagger 152

Ham That's two of his weapons but, well

Os The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses against the which he has imputed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit 160

Ham What call you the carriages?

Hor I knew you must be edified by the marginal, ere you had done

Os The carriages, sir, are the hangers 164

Ham The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides, I would it might be hangers till then. But, on six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages, that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imputed,' as you call it?

Os The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits, he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer 176

Ham How if I answer no?

Os I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham Sir, I will walk here in the hall, if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing and the king hold his purpose I will win for him an I can if not I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits 185

Os Shall I re deliver you so?

Ham To this effect, sir, after what flourish your nature will 188

Os I commend my duty to your lordship

Ham Yours, yours [Exit OSRIC] He does well to commend it himself, there are no tongues else for's turn 192

Hor This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head

Ham He did comply with his dug before he sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions, and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out 202

Enter a Lord.

Lord My lord his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall, he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time 207

Ham I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure if his fitness speaks mine is ready now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now

Lord The king, and queen, and all are coming down 213

Ham In happy time

Lord The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play 217

Ham She well instructs me [Exit Lord.]

Hor You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham I do not think so, since he went into France, I have been in continual practice, I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart, but it is no matter 224

Hor Nay, good my lord,—

Ham It is but foolery, but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman 228

Hor If your mind dislike any thing, obey it, I will forestal their repair hither, and say you are not fit 231

Ham Not a whit, we defy augury, there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come, if it be not to come, it will be now, if it be not now, yet it will come the readiness is all. Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes? Let be. 238

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants with foils, &c

King Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The KING puts the hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET]

Ham Give me your pardon, sir, I've done you wrong,

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd

With sore distraction What I have done, 244

That might your nature, honour and exception

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away, 248

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it

Who does it then? His madness If 't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd, 252

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house, 257

And hurt my brother

Laer I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge, but in my terms of honour 260

I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace,

To keep my name ungor'd But till that time,

I do receive your offer'd love like love, 265

And will not wrong it

Ham I embrace it freely,

And will this brother's wager frankly play

Give us the foils Come on

Laer Come, one for me 268

Ham I'll be your foil, Laertes, in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,

Stick fiery off indeed

Laer You mock me, sir

Ham No, by this hand 272

King Give them the foils, young Osric

Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager?

Ham Very well, my lord,

Your Grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side

King I do not fear it, I have seen you both,

But since he is better'd, we have therefore odds

Laer This is too heavy let me see another

Ham This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

Osr Ay, my good lord 280

[They prepare to play]

King Set me the stoups of wine upon that table

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire 284

The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath,

And in the cup a union shall he throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn Give me the cups, 288

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without,

The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

'Now the king drinks to Hamlet!' Come, begin,

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye 293

Ham Come on, sir

Laer Come, my lord [They play

One

No

Judgment.

Osr A hit, a very palpable hit

Laer Well, again

King Stay give me drink Hamlet, this pearl is thine, 296

Here s'to thy health Give him the cup

[Trumpets sound and cannon shot off within]

Ham I'll play this bout first, set it by awhile

Come—[They play] Another hit, what say

you?

Laer A touch, a touch, I do confess 300

King Our son shall win

Queen He's fat, and scant of breath

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows,

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet

Ham Good madam!

King Gertrude, do not drink 304

Queen I will, my lord, I pray you, pardon

me

King [Aside] It is the poison'd cup! it is too late

Ham I dare not drink yet, madam, by and by

Queen Come, let me wipe thy face 308

Laer My lord, I'll hit him now

King I do not think't

Laer [Aside] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience

Ham Come, for the third, Laertes You but dally,

I pray you pass with your best violence 312

I am afraid you make a wanton of me

Laer Say you so? come on [They play

Osr Nothing, neither way

Laer Have at you now

[LAERTES wounds HAMLET, then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and

HAMLET wounds LAERTES

King Part them! they are incens'd

Ham Nay, come, again [The QUEEN falls

Osr Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor They bleed on both sides. How is it,

my lord?

Osr How is it, Laertes?

Laer Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osric, 320

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery

Ham How does the queen?

King She swoonds to see them bleed.

Queen No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet! 323

The drink, the drink I am poison'd [Dies

Ham O villain! Ho! let the door be lock'd

Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls

Laer It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain,

No medicine in the world can do thee good, 328
In thee there is not half an hour of life,
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me, lo! here I lie, 332
Never to rise again Thy mother's poison'd
I can no more The king, the king's to blame Ham The point envenom'd too!—

Then, venom, to thy work [Stabs the KING
All Treason! treason! 337 King O! yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion,—is thy union here? 340
Follow my mother [KING dies

Laer He is justly serv'd
It is a poison temper'd by himself
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me! [Dies

Ham Heaven make thee free of it! I follow
thee 346

I am dead, Horatio Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act, 349
Had I but time,—as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest,—O! I could tell you—
But let it be Horatio, I am dead, 352
Thou liv'st, report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied

Hor Never believe it,
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane

Ham As thou'rt a man, 356
Give me the cup let go, by heaven, I'll have't.
O God! Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart, 360
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story

[March afar off, and shot within What war-like noise is this?

Osr Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, 364

To the ambassadors of England gives This war-like volley

Ham O! I die, Horatio,
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit
I cannot live to hear the news from England, 368
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras he has my dying voice,
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited—The rest is silence [Dies

Hor, Now cracks a noble heart. Good-night, sweet prince, 373

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?

[March within.

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and Others

Fort Where is this sight?

Hor What is it ye would see? 376

If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search Fort This quarry cries on havoc O proud death!

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot 380
So bloodily hast struck?

First Amb The sight is dismal,
And our affairs from England come too late
The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, 384
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you 387
He never gave commandment for their death
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view, 392
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world How these things came about so shall you hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters, 396
Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook Fall'n on the inventors' heads, all this can I Truly deliver

Fort Let us haste to hear it, 400
And call the noblest to the audience
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune,
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite
me 404

Hor Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more

But let this same be presently perform'd, Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mis-chance 408

On plots and errors happen.

Fort Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally and, for his passage, 412

The soldiers' music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him
Take up the bodies such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss
Go, bid the soldiers shoot 417

[A dead march Exeunt, bearing off the bodies, after which a peal of ordnance is shot off

ACT I

SCENE I.—A Room of State in KING LEAR'S Palace

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND

Kent I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall

Glo It did always seem so to us, but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most, for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety

Kent Is not this your son, my lord? 8

Glo His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent I cannot conceive you. 12

Glo Sir, this young fellow's mother could, whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed Do you smell a fault? 16

Kent I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper

Glo But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund? 26

Edm No, my lord

Glo My Lord of Kent remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm My services to your lordship

Kent I must love you, and sue to know you better 32

Edm Sir, I shall study deserving

Glo He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Sennet Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELLA, and Attendants.

Lear Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester 36

Glo I shall, my liege

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EDMUND]

Lear Meantime we shall express our darker purpose

Give me the map there Know that we have divided

In three our kingdom, and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age, 41 Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, 44
 We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, 48
 Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,—

Since now we will divest us both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state,— 52

Which of you shall we say doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend

Where nature doth with merit challenge Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first. 56

Gon Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter,

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty, Beyond what can be valu'd, rich or rare, No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour, 60

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found, A love that makes breath poor and speech unable,

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor [Aside] What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent. 64

Lear Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads, We make thee lady to thine and Albany's issue

Be this perpetual What says our second daughter, 69
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak Reg I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love, 73
Only she comes too short that I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys Which the most precious square of sense possesses 76
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love
Cor [Aside] Then, poor Cordelia!
And yet not so, since, I am sure, my love's
More richer than my tongue 80
Lear To thee and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom,
No less in space, validity, and pleasure, Than that conferr'd on Goneril Now, our joy, 84
Although our last not least, to whose young love
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interest'd, what can you say to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak Cor Nothing, my lord 89
Lear Nothing?
Cor Nothing
Lear Nothing will come of nothing speak
again 92
Cor Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth I love your majesty
According to my bond, nor more nor less Lear How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little, 96
Lest you may mar your fortunes
Cor Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me I Return those duties back as are right fit, Obey you, love you, and most honour you 100
Why have my sisters husbands if they say
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed, That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care and duty
Sure I shall never marry like my sisters, 105
To love my father all Lear But goes thy heart with this?
Cor Ay, good my lord
Lear So young, and so untender? 108
Cor So young, my lord, and true
Lear Let it be so, thy truth then be thy dower
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate and the night, 112
By all the operation of the orbs
From whom we do exist and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood, 116
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom 120
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,

As thou my sometime daughter Kent Good my liege,— Lear Peace, Kent!
Comenot between the dragon and his wrath 124
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest On her kind nursery Hence, and avoid my sight!
So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her! Call France Who stirs? 128
Carl Burgundy Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest the third,
Let pride which she calls plainness, marry her
I do invest you jointly with my power, 132
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects That troop with majesty Ourselves by monthly course,
With reservation of a hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode 136 Make with you by due turn Only we shall retain
The name and all th' addition to a king,
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours which to confirm, 140
This coronet part between you Kent Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow d,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,— Lear The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft 145
Kent Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart be Kent unmannerly When Lear is mad What wouldst thou do, old
man? 148
Thinkst thou that duty shall have dread to
speak
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound
When majesty falls to folly Reserve thy state,
And, in thy best consideration, check 152
This hideous rashness answer my life my judgment
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least,
Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound Reverbs no hollowness
Lear Kent, on thy life, no more
Kent My life I never held but as a pawn 157 To wage against thine enemies, nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear Out of my sight!
Kent See better, Lear, and let me still remain 160
The true blank of thine eye
Lear Now, by Apollo,— Kent Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain
Lear O vassal! miscreant!
[Laying his hand on his sword Alb } Dear sir, forbear 164
Corn }
Kent Do,
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease Revoke thy gift,
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou dost evil.

Lear Hear me, recreant! 169
On thine allegiance, hear me!
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,—
Which we durst never yet,—and, with stram'd pride 172

To come betwixt our sentence and our power,—
Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,—
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision 176
To shield thee from diseases of the world,
And, on the sixth, to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom if, on the tenth day following

Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd 182

Kent Fare thee well, king, sith thus thou wilt appear,

Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here [To CORDELIA] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid, 185

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!
[To REGAN and GONERIL] And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

That good effects may spring from words of
love. 188

Thus Kent, O princes! bids you all adieu, He'll shape his old course in a country new
[Exit]

'Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants

Glo Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear My Lord of Burgundy, 92
We first address toward you, who with this king Hath nvall'd for our daughter What, in the least,

Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?

Bur Most royal majesty, 196
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd, Nor will you tender less

Lear Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us we did hold her so But now her price is fall'n Sir, there she stands 200

If aught within that little-seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your Grace, She's there, and she is yours

Bur I know no answer 204

Lear Will you, with those infirmities she owes,

Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,

Take her, or leave her?

Bur Pardon me, royal sir, 208
Election makes not up on such conditions

Lear Then leave her, sir, for, by the power that made me,

I tell you all her wealth.—[To FRANCE.] For you, great king,
I would not from your love make such a stray

To match you where I hate, therefore, beseech
you 213

To avert your liking a more worthier way
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd Almost to acknowledge hers

France This is most strange, 216

That she, who even but now was your best object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle 220
So many folds of favour Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree

That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection Fall into taint which to believe of her, 224
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Could never plant in me

Cor I yet beseech your majesty—
If for I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend, 228

I'll do 't before I speak—that you make known
It is no vicious blot nor other foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour,
But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking

Lear Better thou 236
Hadst not been born than not to have pleas'd me better

France Is it but this? a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do? My Lord of Burgundy, What say you to the lady? Love is not love 241
When it is mingled with regards that stand Aloof from the entire point Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry

Bur Royal Lear 244
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy

Lear Nothing I have sworn, I am firm 248 Bur I am sorry, then, you have so lost a
father

That you must lose a husband
Cor Peace be with Burgundy!

Since that respects of fortune are his love, 252
I shall not be his wife France Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor,

Most choice, forsaken, and most lov'd, despis'd!
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon

Be it lawful I take up what's cast away 256 Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France 260
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me

Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind
Thou lovest here, a better where to find. 264

Lear Thou hast her, France, let her be thine, for we

Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again, therefore be gone Without our grace, our love, our benison 268
Come, noble Burgundy

[Flourish Exeunt LEAR, BURGUNDY, CORN-WALL, ALBANY, GLOUCESTER, and Attendants

France Bid farewell to your sisters

Cor The jewels of our father, with wash'd
eyes

Cordelia leaves you I know you what you are, 272

And like a sister am most loath to call Your faults as they are nam'd Use well our father

To your professed bosoms I commit him

But yet, alas! stood I within his grace, 276

I would prefer him to a better place

So farewell to you both

Reg Prescribe not us our duties

Gon Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
At fortune's alms, you have obedience scanted, And well are worth the want that you have wanted. 282

Cor Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides,

Who covers faults, at last shame them derides
Well may you prosper!

France Come, my fair Cordelia

[Exit FRANCE and CORDELIA

Gon Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both I think our father will hence to-night 288

Reg That's most certain, and with you, next month with us

Gon You see how full of changes his age is, the observation we have made of it hath not been little he always loved our sister most, and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly

Reg 'Tis the infirmity of his age, yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself 297

Gon The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash, then, must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them 303

Reg Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment

Gon There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him Pray you, let us hit together if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us. 310

Reg We shall further think on't.

Gon We must do something, and I the heat
[Exeunt

SCENE II — A Hall in the EARL OF GLOUCESTER'S Castle

Enter EDMUND, with a letter

Edm Thou, Nature, art my goddess, to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me, 4
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines

Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?

When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true, 8
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?

Who in the lusty stealth of nature take More composition and fierce quality, 12

Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,

Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,

Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then,

Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land 16

Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund

As to the legitimate Fine word, 'legitimate!'

Well, my legitimate if this letter speed,

And my invention thrive, Edmund the base 20

Shall top the legitimate — I grow, I prosper,

Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter GLOUCESTER

Glo Kent banished thus! And France in choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! 24

Confin'd to exhibition! All this done

Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?

Edm So please your lordship, none

[Putting up the letter

Glo Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter? 29

Edm I know no news, my lord

Glo What paper were you reading?

Edm Nothing, my lord 32

Glo No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself Let's see, come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles 37

Edm I beseech you, sir, pardon me, it is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'er-read, and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'er-looking 41

Glo Give me the letter, sir

Edm I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame 45

Glo Let's see, let's see

Edm I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue 49

Glo This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times, keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny who sways, not as it ha'h power but as it is suffered Come to me, that of this I may speak more If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, EDGAR — Hum!

Conspiracy! 'Sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue —My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it?' 64

Edm It was not brought me, my lord, there's the cunning of it, I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet 65

Glo You know the character to be your brother's? 69

Edm If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his, but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 72

Glo It is his

Edm It is his hand, my lord, but I hope his heart is not in the contents

Glo Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business? 77

Edm Never, my lord, but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue 82

Glo O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! Go, sirrah, seek him, I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain! Where is he? 87

Edm I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger 98

Glo Think you so?

Edm If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction, and that without any further delay than this very evening 104

Glo He cannot be such a monster—

Edm Nor is not, sure

Glo —to his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out, wind me into him, I pray you, frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution 114

Edm I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal 114

Glo These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us, though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide in cities, mutinies, in countries, discord, in palaces, treason, and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction there's son against father, the king falls from bias of nature, there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all rumous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'Tis strange! [Exit] 129

Edm This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars, as if we were villains by necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion, knaves, thieves, and treachers by spherical predominance, drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. 'Sfoot! I should have been that I am had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar— 149

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy, my cue is villainous melancholy with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! Fa, sol, la, mi

Edg How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in? 156

Edm I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses

Edg Do you busy yourself with that? 160

Edm I promise you the effects he writes of succeed unhappily, as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent, death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities, divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles, needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what 168

Edg How long have you been a sectary astronomical? 172

Edm Come, come, when saw you my father last? 172

Edg The night gone by Edm Spake you with him?

Edg Ay, two hours together

Edm Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance? 179

Edg None at all

Edm Beshink yourself wherein you may have offended him, and at my entreaty forbear his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay 185

Edg Some villain hath done me wrong

Edm That's my fear. I pray you have a contentment forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower, and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go, there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed. 192

Edg Armed, brother!

Edm Brother, I advise you to the best, go armed, I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you, I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it, pray you, away.

Edg Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm I do serve you in this business 200

[Exit EDGAR]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms
That he suspects none, on whose foolish honesty

My practices ride easy! I see the business 204
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit
All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. [Exit]

SCENE III.—A Room in the DUKE OF ALBANY'S Palace

Enter GONERIL and OSWALD her Steward

Gon Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw Ay, madam

Gon By day and night he wrongs me every hour 4

He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That sets us all at odds. I'll not endure it.
His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us

On every trifle. When he returns from hunting
I will not speak with him: say I am sick. 9

If you come slack of former services,
You shall do well, the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw He's coming, madam, I hear him. 12

[Horns within]

Gon Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows, I'd have it come to question

If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, 16
Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities
That he hath given away! Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again, and must be used 20
With checks as flatteries, when they are seen abusing.

Remember what I have said

Osw Well, madam

Gon And let his knights have colder looks among you,

What grows of it, no matter, advise your fellows so. 24

I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak. I'll write straight to my sister
To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse, my good intent

May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness. Now, banish'd

Kent, 4

If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,

So may it come, thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants

Lear Let me not stay a jot for dinner, go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant] How now! what art thou? 10

Kent A man, sir

Lear What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent I do profess to be no less than I seem, to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise, and says little, to fear judgment, to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear What art thou? 19

Kent A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king

Lear If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou? 24

Kent Service

Lear Whom wouldst thou serve?

Kent You

Lear Dost thou know me, fellow? 28

Kent No, sir, but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master Lear What's that?

Kent Authority. 32

Lear What services canst thou do?

Kent I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly, that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me is diligence. 38

Lear How old art thou?

Kent Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing, I have years on my back forty-eight. 42

Lear Follow me, thou shalt serve me. If I like thee no worse after dinner I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knave? my fool? Go you and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant]

Enter OSWALD

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter? 48

Osw So please you,—

Lear What says the fellow there? Call the clotpole back. [Exit a Knight] Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep. How now! where's that mongrel? 53

Re-enter Knight.

Knight He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear Why came not the slave back to me when I called him? 57

Knight Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear He would not!
Knight My lord, I know not what the matter is, but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter

Lear Ha! sayest thou so?
Knight I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined him away

Lear No more of that, I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her [Exit an Attendant]
 Go you, call hither my fool. [Exit an Attendant]

Re-enter OSWALD

O! you sir, you, come you hither, sir Who am I, sir?

Osw My lady's father

Lear 'My lady's father!' my lord's knave you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw I am none of these, my lord, I beseech your pardon

Lear Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?
[Striking him]

Osw I'll not be struck, my lord

Kent Nor tripped neither, you base football player [Tripping up his heels]

Lear I thank thee, fellow, thou servest me, and I'll love thee

Kent Come, sir, anise, away! I'll teach you differences away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry, but away! Go to, have you wisdom? so

[Pushes OSWALD out]
Lear Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee there's earnest of thy service

[Gives KENT money]

Enter Fool

Fool Let me hire him too here's my coxcomb [Offers KENT his cap]

Lear How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool Surrah, you were best take my coxcomb

Kent Why, fool?

Fool Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly there, take my coxcomb

Why, this fellow has banished two on s daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will if thou follow him thou must needs wear my coxcomb

How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear Why, my boy?

Fool If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself There s mine, beg another of thy daughters

Lear Take heed, surrah, the whip

Fool Truth s a dog must to kennel, he must be whipped out when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear A pestilent gall to me!

Fool [To KENT] Surrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear Do

Fool Mark it, nuncle —

Have more than thou showest,

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest,

Ride more than thou goest,

Learn more than thou trowest,

Set less than thou throwest,

Leave thy drink and thy whore,

And keep in-a-door,

And thou shalt have more

Than two tens to a score

Kent This is nothing, fool

Fool Then 'tis like the breath of an unfe'd lawyer, you gave me nothing for't Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear Why, no, boy, nothing can be made out of nothing

Fool [To KENT] Prithce, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to he will not believe a fool

Lear A bitter fool!

Fool Dost thou know the difference my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear No, lad, teach me

Fool That lord that counsell'd thee

To give away thy land,

Come place him here by me,

Do thou for him stand

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear,

The one in motley here,

The other found out there

Lear Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool All thy other titles thou hast given away, that thou wast born with

Kent This is not altogether fool, my lord

Fool No, faith, lords and great men will not let me, if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and ladies too they will not let me have all fool to myself, they'll be snatching

Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns

Lear What two crowns shall they be?

Fool Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg

When you clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away

If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so

Lear When were you wont to be so full of songs, surrah? 187

Fool I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers, for when thou gavest them the rod and puttest down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep 192

And I for sorrow sung
That such a king should play bo peep,

And go the fools among 195

Prithce, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie I would fain learn to lie

Lear An you lie, surrah, we'll have you whipped 199

Fool I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool, and yet I would not be thee, nuncle, thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle here comes one o' the parings 208

Enter GONERIL

Lear How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown 211

Fool Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning now thou art an O without a figure I am better than thou art now, I am a fool, thou art nothing [To GONERIL] Yes forsooth, I will hold my tongue, so your face bids me, though you say nothing

Mum, mum,

He that keeps nor crust nor crumb, 220

Weary of all, shall want some

That's a shealed peascod [Pointing to LEAR

Gon Not only, sir, this your all licens'd fool 224

But other of your | solent retinue

Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth 228

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots Sir,

I had thought, by making thus well known unto 232

you,

To have found a safe redress, but now grow 235 fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and done,

That you protect this course, and put it on

By your allowance, which if you should, the 238 fault

Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses 242

sleep,

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal,

Might in their working do you that offence,

Which else were shame, that then necessity 245

Will call discreet proceeding

Fool For you throw, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,

That it had it head bit off by it young

So out went the candle, and we were left dark- 248 ling

Lear Are you our daughter?

Gon I would you would make use of your 252 good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away
These dispositions which of late transform you 245

From what you rightly are

Fool May not an ass know when the cart 248 draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love thee

Lear Does any here know me? This is not 252

Lear

Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are 255

his eyes?

Either his notion weakens, his discernings

Are lethargied Ha! waking? 'tis not so 258

Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool Lear's shadow

Lear I would learn that, for, by the marks 262 of sovereignty, knowledge and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters 265

Fool Which they will make an obedient 268

father

Lear Your name fair gentlewoman?

Gon This admiration, sir, is much o' the 272 favour

Of other your new pranks I do beseech you 275

To understand my purposes aright

As you are old and reverend, should be wise 278

Here do you keep a hundred knights and 282

squires,

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd, and bold,

That this our court, infected with their man- 285

ners,

Shows like a riotous inn epicurism and lust 288

Make it more like a tavern or a brothel

Than a grac'd palace The shame itself doth 292

speak

For instant remedy be then desir'd

By her that else will take the thing she begs,

A little to disquantity your train, 295

And the remainder, that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your age,

Which know themselves and you

Lear Darkness and devils! 298

Saddle my horses, call my train together 302

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee

Yet have I left a daughter

Gon You strike my people, and your dis- 305 order d rabble

Make servants of their betters 308

Enter ALBANY

Lear Woe, that too late repents,

[To ALBANY] O! sir, are you come?

Is it your will? Speak, sir Prepare my horses

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,

More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a 312

child,

Than the sea-monster

Alb Pray, sir, be patient

Lear [To GONERIL] Detested kite! thou 315

liest

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know, 318

And in the most exact regard support

The worships of their name O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!

Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of 322

nature

From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gall O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, 295

And thy dear judgment out Go, go, my people Alb My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you

Lear It may be so, my lord
Hear, Nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend 300
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase,
And from her derogate body never spring 304
A babe to honour her! If she must teem, Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth, 308
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks,
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is 312
To have a thankless child! Away, away! [Exit Alb Now gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon Never afflict yourself to know the cause,
But let his disposition have that scope 316
That dotage gives it.

Re enter LEAR

Lear What! fifty of my followers at a clap, Within a fortnight?

Alb What's the matter sir?
Lear I'll tell thee [To GONERIL] Life and death! I am ashamed 320
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce
Should make thee worth them Blasts and fogs upon thee!

Th' untented woundings of a father's curse 324
Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes, Beweept this cause agun, I'll pluck ye out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay Yea is it come to this? 328
Let it be so I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails She'll flay thy wolfish visage Thou shalt find That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think 333

I have cast off for ever, thou shalt, I warrant thee [Exit LEAR, KENT, and Attendants
Gon Do you mark that?

Alb I cannot be so partial, Goneril, 336
To the great love I bear you —

Gon Pray you, content What, Oswald, ho!
[To the Fool] You sir, more knave than fool, after your master

Fool Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! tarry, and take the fool with thee 341

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter, 344
If my cap would buy a halter,
So the fool follows after

[Exit

Gon This man hath had good counsel. A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep 348
At point a hundred knights, yes, that on every dream,

Each buzz, each fancy each complaint, dishke,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy Oswald, I say! 352

Alb Well, you may fear too far

Gon Safer than trust too far
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister, 356
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have shew'd the unfitness, —

Re-enter OSWALD

How now, Oswald!
What! have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw Ay, madam 360

Gon Take you some company, and away to horse

Inform her full of my particular fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own
As may compact it more Get you gone 364 And hasten your return [Exit OSWALD] No, no, my lord,

This ruly gentleness and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom 368

Than prais'd for harmful mildness

Alb How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well

Gon Nay, then — 372
Alb Well, well, the event [Exeunt

SCENE V — Court before the Same

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool

Lear Go you before to Gloucester with these letters Acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know than comes from her demand out of the letter If your diligence be not speedy I shall be there before you 5

Kent I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter [Exit

Fool If a man's brains were in's heels, were't not in danger of kibes? 9

Lear Ay, boy Fool Then I prithee, be merry, thy wit shall not go slipshod 12

Lear Ha ha, ha!

Fool Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly, for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell 17

Lear What canst tell, boy?

Fool She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on's face? 21

Lear No

Fool Why to keep one's eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into 25

Lear I did her wrong,— Fool Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell? 28
Lear No
Fool Nor I neither, but I can tell why a snail has a house
Lear Why? 32
Fool Why, to put his head in, not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case
Lear I will forget my nature So kind a father! Be my horses ready? 37 Fool Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason 40
Lear Because they are not eight?
Fool Yes, indeed thou wouldst make a good fool.
Lear To take it again perforce! Monster in gratitude! 45
Fool If thou wert my fool nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time Lear How's that? 48
Fool Thou shouldst not have been old before thou hadst been wise Lear O! let me not be mad, not mad, sweet
 heaven,
 Keep me in temper, I would not be mad! 52

Enter Gentleman

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent Ready, my lord

Lear Come, boy

Fool She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure, 56
 Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter [Exit]

ACT II

SCENE I—A Court within the Castle of the
EARL OF GLOUCESTER

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting

Edm Save thee, Curan

Cur And you, sir I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him to-night 5

Edm How comes that?

Cur Nay, I know not You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments? 9

Edm Not I pray you, what are they?

Cur Have you heard of no likely war toward,
 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany? 12

Edm Not a word

Cur You may do then, in time Fare you well, sir [Exit] 16

Edm The duke be here to-night! The better!
 best! 16

This weaves itself perforce into my business
 My father hath set guard to take my brother,
 And I have one thing, of a queasy question
 Which I must act. Briefness and fortune work!
 Brother, a word, descend brother, I say! 21

Enter EDGAR

My father watches O sir! fly this place,
 Intelligence is given where you are hid,
 You have now the good advantage of the
 night 24

Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither, now, 't the night, 't the haste,

And Regan with him, have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? 28 Advise yourself

Edg I am sure on't, not a word

Edm I hear my father coming, pardon me,
 In cunning I must draw my sword upon you, Draw, seem to defend yourself, now 'quit you well 32

Yield,—come before my father Light, ho!
 here!

Fly, brother Torchés! torches! So, farewell.

[Exit EDGAR] Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

Of my more fierce endeavour I have seen drunkards [Wounds his arm] 36

Do more than thus in sport Father! father!
 Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches

Glo Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, 40

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand auspicious mistress But where is he?

Glo Look, sir, I bleed

Edm Look, sir, I bleed

Glo Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm Fled this way, sir When by no means he could— 44

Glo Pursue him, ho! Go after [Exit some Servants] 'By no means' what?

Edm Persuade me to the murder of your lordship,

But that I told him, the revenging gods

'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend,

Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond 49

The child was bound to the father, sir, in fine,

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood

To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, 52

With his prepared sword he charges home

My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm

But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits

Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter, 56

Or whether gasted by the noise I made,

Full suddenly he fled.

Glo Let him fly far

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught,

And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master, 60

My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night

By his authority I will proclaim it,

That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murderous coward to the stake, 64
He that conceals him, death

Edm When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him nigh to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: he replied, 68
'Thou unpossessing bastard' dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,— 72

As thus I would, ay, though thou didst produce
My very character,—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice
And thou must make a dullard of the world, 76
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it?

Glo Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter? I never got him 80

[Tucket within]
Hark! the duke's trumpets: I know not why he comes

All ports I'll bar, the villain shall not 'scape, The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom 84
May have due note of him, and of my land, Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants

Corn How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,— 88
Which I can call but now,—I have heard strange news

Reg If it be true, all vengeance comes too short

Which can pursue the offender: How dost, my lord?

Glo O! madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd 92

Reg What! did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?

Glo O! lady, lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg Was he not companion with the riotous knights 96

That tend upon my father?

Glo I know not, madam, 'tis too bad, too bad

Edm Yes, madam he was of that consort Reg No marvel then though he were ill affected, 100

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues
I have this present evening from my sister Been well-inform'd of them, and with such cautions 104

That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there

Corn Nor I, assure thee, Regan Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father

A child-like office

Edm 'Twas my duty, sir 108
Glo He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn Is he pursu'd?

Glo Ay, my good lord

Corn If he be taken he shall never more 112
Be fear'd of doing harm, make your own purpose,

How in my strength you please: For you,
Edmund,

Whose virtue and obedience doth thus instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours 116
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need,
You we first seize on.

Edm I shall serve you, sir,

Truly, however else

Glo For him I thank your Grace

Corn You know not why we came to visit
you,— 120

Reg Thus out of season, threading dark-ey'd
night

Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some prize, Wherein we must have use of your advice
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister, 124
Of differences, which I best thought it fit To answer from our home, the several messengers

From hence attend dispatch: Our good old
friend,

Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow 128
Your needful counsel to our businesses,
Which craves the instant use

Glo I serve you, madam

Your Graces are right welcome [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally

Osw Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?

Kent Ay

Osw Where may we set our horses? 4

Kent I' the mire

Osw Prithce, if thou lovest me, tell me

Kent I love thee not

Osw Why, then I care not for thee 8

Kent If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me

Osw Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not 12

Kent Fellow: I know thee

Osw What dost thou know me for?

Kent A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats, a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave, a lily-liver'd action-taking knave, a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, fimsal rogue, one-trunk-inheriting slave, one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou demiest the least syllable of thy addition 26

Osw Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee! 29

Kent What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue, for, though it be night, yet the moon shines. I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you. [Drawing his sword] Draw, you whoreson, cullionly, barber-monger, draw

Osw Away! I have nothing to do with thee

Kent Draw, you rascal, you come with letters against the king, and ake vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks draw, you rascal, come your ways

Osw Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent Strike, you slave, stand, rogue, stand, you neat slave, strike

Osw Help, oh! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND with his rapier drawn

Edm How now! What's the matter?

[Parting them]

Kent With you, Goodman boy, if you please come, I'll flesh ye, come on, young master

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants

Glo Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?

Corn Keep peace, upon your lives

He dies that strikes again What is the matter?

Reg The messengers from our sister and the king

Corn What is your difference? speak.

Osw I am scarce in breath, my lord

Kent No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour

You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee a tailor made thee

Corn Thou art a strange fellow, a tailor make a man?

Kent Ay, a tailor, sir a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours o' the trade

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd at suit of his grey beard,— Kent Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him. Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn Peace, surrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent Yes, sir, but anger hath a privilege.

Corn Why art thou angry?

Kent That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain Which are too intrinse t' unloose, smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel, Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods, Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks

With every gale and vary of their masters,

Knowing nought, like dogs, but following

A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,

I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot

Corn What! art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo How fell you out? say that

Kent No contraries hold more antipathy

Than I and such a knave

Corn Why dost thou call him knave? What is his fault?

Kent His countenance likes me not Corn No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers

Kent Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain

I have seen better faces in my time

Than stands on any shoulder that I see

Before me at this instant

Corn This is some fellow,

Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb

Quite from his nature he cannot flatter, he,

An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth

An they will take it, so, if not, he's plain

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends

Than twenty sully-ducking observants,

That stretch their duties nicely

Kent Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,

Under the allowance of your grand aspect,

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire

On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn What mean'st by this?

Kent To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave, which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Osw I never gave him any

It pleas'd the king his master very late

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction,

When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,

Tripp'd me behind, being down, insulted, rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man,

That worthied him, got praises of the king

For him attempting who was self-subdu'd,

And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,

Drew on me here again.

Kent None of these rogues and cowards

But Ajax is their fool

Corn Fetch forth the stocks!

Yousubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you.

Kent Sir, I am too old to learn,

Call not your stocks for me, I serve the king,

On whose employment I was sent to you,

You shall do small respect, show too bold malice

Against the grace and person of my master,

Stocking his messenger

Corn Fetch forth the stocks! As I have life and honour, 140

There shall he sit till noon

Reg Till noon! Till night, my lord, and all night too

Kent Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so

Reg Sir being his knave I will 144

Corn This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo Let me beseech your Grace not to do so
His fault is much, and the good king his master 148

Will check him for't your purpos'd low correction

Is such as basest and contemn'd'st wretches
For pilferings and most common trespasses
Are punish'd with the king must take it ill, 152

That he, so slightly valu'd in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd

Corn I'll answer that

Reg My sister may receive it much more worse

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted, 156
For following her affairs Put in his legs

[KENT is put in the stocks.]
Come, my good lord, away

[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER and KENT]
Glo I am sorry for thee, friend, as the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition all the world well knows 160
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd I'll entreat for thee

Kent Pray, do not, sir I have watch'd and travell'd hard,

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels 164
Give you good morrow!

Glo The duke is to blame in this, 'twill be ill taken [Exit]

Kent Good king, that must approve the common saw,

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st 168
To the warm sun

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter Nothing almost sees miracles

But misery I know 'tis from Cordelia, 172
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd

Of my obscured course, and shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give 176 Losses their remedies All weary and o'erwatch'd

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging

Fortune, good night, smile once more, turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps]

SCENE III — A Part of the Heath

Enter EDGAR

Edg I heard myself proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free, no place,

That guard, and most unusual vigilance, 4
Does not attend my taking While I may 'scape

I will preserve myself, and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape

That ever penury, in contempt of man, 8 Brought near to beast, my face I'll grime with filth,

Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,

And with presented nakedness outface
The winds and persecutions of the sky 12

The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who with roaring voices,

Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary,

And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,

Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity Poor Turlygood! poor
Tom! 20

That's something yet Edgar I nothing am. [Exit]

SCENE IV — Before GLOUCESTER's Castle

KENT in the stocks

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger

Gent As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove

Kent Hail to thee, noble master! 4

Lear Ha! Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent No, my lord

Fool Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks

Lear What's he that hath so much thy place mistook 12

To set thee here?

Kent It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter

Lear No

Kent Yes 16

Lear No, I say

Kent I say, yea

Lear No, no, they would not

Kent Yes, they have 20

Lear By Jupiter, I swear, no

Kent By Juno, I swear, ay

Lear They durst not do't, They could not, would not do't, 'tis worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage 24

Resolve me, with all modest haste which way Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,

Coming from us.

Kent My lord, when at their home

I did commend your highness' letters to them,

Ere I was risen from the place that show'd 29
My duty kneeling, there came a reeking post, Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth

From Goneril his mistress salutations, 32
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read on whose contents They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse,

Commanded me to follow, and attend 36
The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks
And meeting here the other messenger, Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,—

Being the very fellow which of late 40
Display'd so saucily against your highness,— Having more man than wit about me,—drew
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries Your son and daughter found thus trespass worth 44

The shame which here it suffers Fool Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way

Fathers that wear rags 48
Do make their children blind,

But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind

Fortune, that arrant whore, 52

Ne'er turns the key to the poor

But for all this thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year

Lear O! how this mother swells up toward 56

my heart, Hystericapassio! down thou climb'st sorrow!

Thy element's below Where is this daughter?

Kent With the earl, sir here within

Lear Follow me not, stay here [Exit

Gent Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent None

How chance the king comes with so small a number? 64

Fool An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent Why, fool? 67

Fool We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' the winter All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men, and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stunk Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it, but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after

When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form, 80

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry, the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly 84

The knave turns fool that runs away,

The fool no knave, perdy

Kent Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOUCESTER.

Lear Deny to speak with me! They are sick!
they are weary,

They have travell'd hard to-night! Mere fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.

Fetch me a better answer

Glo My dear lord, 92

You know the fiery quality of the duke,

How unremovable and fix'd he is

In his own course

Lear Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery! what quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester, 97

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his

wife

Glo Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so

Lear Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man? 100

Glo Ay, my good lord

Lear The king would speak with Cornwall, the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her service 103

Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!

Fiery! the fiery duke! Tell the hot duke that—

No, but not yet, may be he is not well

Infirmity doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound, we are not ourselves 108

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the

mund

To suffer with the body I'll forbear,

And am fall'n out with my more headier will,

To take the indispos'd and sickly fit 112

For the sound man Death on my state! [Looking on KENT] Wherefore

Should he sit here? This act persuades me

That this remotion of the duke and her

Is practice only Give me my servant forth. 116

Go, tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with them

Now, presently bid them come forth and hear

me,

Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum

Till it cry sleep to death 120

Glo I would have all well betwixt you

[Exit

Lear O, me! my heart, my rising heart! but,

down!

Fool Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' the paste alive, she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried, 'Down, wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, battered his hay 128

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER,

and Servants

Lear Good morrow to you both

Corn Hail to your Grace!

[KENT is set at liberty]

Reg I am glad to see your highness.

Lear Regan, I think you are, I know what reason

88 I have to think so if thou shouldst not be glad,

Gg

I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, 133 Sepulchring an adultress — [To KENT] O! are you free?
 Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
 Thy sister's naught. O Regan! she hath tied 136 Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here [Points to his heart]
 I can scarce speak to thee, thou'lt not believe With how depriv'd a quality — O Regan!
 Reg I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope 140
 You less know how to value her desert
 Than she to scant her duty Lear Say, how is that?
 Reg I cannot think my sister in the least Would fail her obligation. If, sir, perchance 144
 She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
 'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
 As clears her from all blame
 Lear My curses on her!
 Reg O, sir! you are old, 148
 Nature in you stands on the very verge Of her confine. You should be rul'd and led By some discretion that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray you That to our sister you do make return, 153
 Say, you have wrong'd her, sir Lear Ask her forgiveness?
 Do you but mark how this becomes the house
 'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old, 156 Age is unnecessary on my knees I beg [Kneeling] That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food
 Reg Good sir, no more, these are unsightly tricks
 Return you to my sister
 Lear [Rising] Never Regan 160
 She hath abated me of half my train Look'd black upon me, struck me with her
 tongue,
 Most serpent-like, upon the very heart
 All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall 164
 On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
 You taking airs, with lameness!
 Corn Fie, sir, fie!
 Lear You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
 Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty, 168
 You fen-suck'd fogs drawn by the powerful sun,
 To fall and blast her pride!
 Reg O the blest gods! So will you wish on me,
 When the rash mood is on 172 Lear No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse
 Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness. Her eyes are fierce, but thine
 Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee 176
 To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
 To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
 And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt Against my coming in, thou better know'st 180
 The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
 Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude,

Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
 Wherein I thee endow'd
 Reg Good sir, to the purpose 184
 Lear Who put my man i' the stocks?
 [Tucket within]
 Corn What trumpet's that?
 Reg I know't, my sister's, this approves her letter,
 That she would soon be here. Is your lady come?
 Enter OSWALD
 Lear This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd
 pride 188
 Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows
 Out, varlet, from my sight!
 Corn What means your Grace?
 Lear Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
 Thou dost not know on't. Who comes here?
 O heavens, 192
 Enter GONERIL
 If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
 Allow obedience, if yourselves are old, Make it your cause, send down and take my part!
 [To GONERIL] Art not ashamed to look upon this beard? 196
 O Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?
 Gon Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?
 All's not offence that indiscretion finds
 And dotage terms so
 Lear O sides! you are too tough, Will you yet hold? How came my man i' the stocks? 201
 Corn I set him there, sir, but his own disorders
 Deserv'd much less advancement.
 Lear You! did you?
 Reg I pray you, father, being weak, seem so
 If, till the expiration of your month, 205
 You will return and sojourn with my sister, Dismissing half your train, come then to me
 I am now from home, and out of that provision Which shall be needful for your entertainment
 Lear Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd!
 No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
 To wage against the enemy o' the air, 212
 To be a comrade with the wolf and owl, Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her!
 Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took
 Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and squire-like, pension beg
 To keep base life afoot. Return with her!
 Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
 To this detested groom. [Pointing at OSWALD]
 Gon At your choice, sir 220 Lear I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad
 I will not trouble thee, my child, farewell
 We'll no more meet, no more see one another, But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my laughter 224
 Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,

Which I must needs call mine thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood But I'll not chide
thee, 228

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove Mend when thou canst, be better at thy leisure 232

I can be patient, I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights

Reg Not altogether so
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome Give ear, sir, to my sister, 236

For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does

Lear Is this well spoken?
Reg I dare avouch it, sir what! fifty followers? 240

Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger

Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,

Should many people, under two commands, 244
Hold amity? 'Tis hard, almost impossible

Gon Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from
mine?

Reg Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you 248

We could control them If you will come to
me,—

For now I spy a danger,—I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty, to no more Will I give place or notice 252

Lear I gave you all—

Reg And in good time you gave it Lear Made you my guardians, my deposi-taries,

But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number What! must I come to
you 256

With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so?

Reg And speak't again, my lord, no more with me

Lear Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd,

When others are more wicked, not being the worst 260

Stands in some rank of praise. [To GONERIL]
I'll go with thee

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon Hear me, my lord
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five, 264

To follow in a house, where twice so many Have a command to tend you?

Reg What need one?

Lear O! reason not the need, our basest beggars

Are in the poorest things superfluous 268
Allow not nature more than nature needs,

Man's life is cheap as beast's Thou art a lady,
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, 272

Which scarcely keeps thee warm But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both! 276

If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water-drops, 280

Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things,— What they are yet I know not,—but they shall be 284

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep,
No, I'll not weep

I have full cause of weeping, but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws 288

Or ere I'll weep O fool! I shall go mad [Exeunt LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and Fool

Corn Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm [Storm heard at a distance

Reg This house is little the old man and his people

Cannot be well bestow'd 292

Gon 'Tis his own blame, hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly Reg For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,

But not one follower
Gon So am I purpos'd. 296

Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn Follow'd the old man forth. He is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo The king is in high rage
Corn Whither is he going?

Glo He calls to horse, but will I know not whither 300

Corn 'Tis best to give him way, he leads himself

Gon My lord, entreat him by no means to stay

Glo Alack! the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle, for many miles about 304
There's scarce a bush.

Reg O! sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors,

He is attended with a desperate train, 308
And what they may incense him to, being apt

To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear Corn Shut up your doors, my lord, 'tis a wild night

My Regan counsels well come out o' the storm.
[Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Heath

A storm, with thunder and lightning Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting

Kent Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent One minded like the weather, most unquietly

Kent I know you Where's the king?

Gent Contending with the fretful elements
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, 5
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease, tears his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage, 8 Catch in their fury, and make nothing of,
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch, 12

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbattered he runs,
And bids what will take all

Kent But who is with him?

Gent None but the fool, who labours to out-jest 16

His heart-struck injuries

Kent Sir, I do know you,
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd 20
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall,

Who have—as who have not, that their great stars

Thron'd and set high—servants, who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations Intelligent of our state, what hath been seen, 25

Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne

Against the old kind king, or something deeper Whereof perchance these are but furnishings, 29

But true it is, from France there comes a power Into this scatter'd kingdom, who already,

Wise in our negligence, have secret feet 32

In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner Now to you

If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find 36

Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow

The king hath cause to plain
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding, 40

And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you

Gent I will talk further with you

Kent No, do not
For confirmation that I am much more 44

Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains If you shall see Cordeha,—

As doubt not but you shall,—show her this ring,

And she will tell you who your fellow is 48
That yet you do not know Fie on this storm!

I will go seek the king

Gent Give me your hand Have you no more to say?

Kent Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet, 52

That, when we have found the king,—in which your pain

That way, I'll this,—he that first lights on him Holla the other [Exeunt severally

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath

Storm still

Enter LEAR and Fool

Lear Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!

You sulphurous and thought-executing fires 4
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts, Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder

Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once

That make ingrateful man! 9

Fool O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door

Goodnuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing, here's a night pities neither wise man nor fool

Lear Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire! spout, rain! 14

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire are my daughters
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness,

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription then, let fall

Your horrible pleasure, here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man 20

But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join'd

Your high-engender'd battles gainst a head
So old and white as this O! O! 'tis foul 24

Fool He that has a house to put his head in has a good head-piece

The cod-piece that will house
Before the head has any 28

The head and he shall house
So beggars marry many

The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make 32

Shall of a corn cry woe
And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass 36

Enter KENT

Lear No, I will be the pattern of all patience,
I will say nothing

Kent Who's there?

Fool Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece, that's a wise man and a fool 41

Kent Alas! sir, are you here? things that love night

Love not such nights as these, the wrathful skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark, 44

And make them keep their caves. Since I was man
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder, Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard, man's nature cannot carry 48

The affliction nor the fear
Lear Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, Find out their enemies now Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes, 52 Unwhipp'd of justice, hide thee, thou bloody hand,

Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue
That art incestuous, carst, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming 56 Hast practis'd on man's life, close pent-up guilts,

Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace I am a man
More sinn'd against than sinning

Kent Alack! bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel, 61 Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest,

Repose you there while I to this hard house,—
More harder than the stone whereof 'tis rais'd,—
Which even but now, demanding after you, 65
Denied me to come in, return and force
Their scant courtesy

Lear My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy How dost, my boy? Art cold? 68

I am cold myself Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious Come, your hovel

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart 72
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool

He that has a little tiny wit,
With hey ho the wind and the rain,
Must make content with his fortunes fit, 76
Though the rain it raineth every day

Lear True, my good boy Come, bring us to this hovel [Exeunt LEAR and KENT]

Fool This is a brave night to cool a courtesan I'll speak a prophecy ere I go 80

When priests are more in word than matter,
When brewers mar their malt with water,

When nobles are their tailors' tutors,
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors, 84

When every case in law is right,
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight,

When slanders do not live in tongues,
Nor cutpurses come not to throngs, 88

When usurers tell their gold in the field,
And bawds and whores do churches build,

Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion 92

Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make, for I live before his time. [Exit.]

SCENE III — A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND

Glo Alack, alack! Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house, charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him

Edm Most savage, and unnatural! 7

Glo Go to, say you nothing There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night,
'tis dangerous to be spoken, I have locked the letter in my closet These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home, there's part of a power already footed, we must incline to the king I will seek him and privily relieve him, go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived If he ask for me, I am ill and gone to bed If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund, pray you, be careful. 21

[Exit]

Edm This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke

Instantly know, and of that letter too
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses, no less than all 25
The younger rises when the old doth fall. [Exit]

SCENE IV — The Heath Before a Hovel

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool

Kent Here is the place, my lord, good my lord, enter

The tyranny of the open night's too rough For nature to endure [Storm still.]

Lear Let me alone.

Kent Good my lord enter here

Lear Wilt break my heart? 4

Kent I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter

Lear Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin so 'tis to thee,
But where the greater malady is fix'd, 8

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear,
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,

Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free

The body's delicate, the tempest in my mind 12
Doth from my senses take all feeling else

Save what beats there Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand

For lifting food to 't? But I will punish home 16
No, I will weep no more In such a night

To shut me out! Pour on, I will endure.
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!

Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,— 20

O! that way madness lies, let me shun that,
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here,

Lear Prithce, go in thyself, seek thine own ease

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder 24 On things would hurt me more But I'll go in [To the Fool] In, boy, go first You houseless poverty,— Nay, get thee in I'll pray, and then I'll sleep [Fool goes in]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are, 28
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en 32
Too little care of this Take physic, pomp, Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just 36

Edg [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the hovel]

Fool Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit

Help me! help me!

Kent Give me thy hand Who's there? 40

Fool A spirit, a spirit he says his name a poor Tom Kent What art thou that dost grumble there in the straw?

Come forth

Enter EDGAR disguised as a madman

Edg Away! the foul fiend follows me! 44
Through the sharp hawthorn blow the winds
Hum! go to thy cold bed and warm thee

Lear Didst thou give all to thy two daughters?

And art thou come to this? 48

Edg Who gives anything to poor Tom?
whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bod and quagmire, that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew, set ratsbane by his porridge, made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold O! do de, do de, do de Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting and taking! O poor Tom's some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes There could I have him now, and there, and there again, and there

Lear What! have his daughters brought him to this pass? [Storm still] Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed 65

Lear Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent He hath no daughters, sir 68

Lear Death, traitor! nothing could have subdu'd nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.

Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? 72 Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters

Edg Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo! 76

Fool This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen

Edg Take heed o' the foul fiend Obey thy parents, keep thy word justly, swear not, commit not with man's sworn spouse set not thy sweet heart on proud array Tom's a-cold. 82

Lear What hast thou been?

Edg A servingman proud in heart and mind, that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her, swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman out-paramoured the Turk false of heart light of ear, bloody of hand, hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness dog in madness lion in prey Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind, says suum, mun ha no nonny Dolphin my boy my boy, sessa! let him trot by [Storm still]

Lear Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies Is man no more than this? Consider him well Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated, thou art the thing itself, unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare forked animal as thou art Off, off, you lendings! Come, unbutton here 112

[Tearing off his clothes] Fool Prithce, nuncle, be contented, 'tis a naughty night to swim in Now a little fire in a wide field were like an old lecher's heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body cold Look!
here comes a walking fire 117

Enter GLOUCESTER with a torch

Edg This is the foul fiend Hlibbertgibbet he begins at curfew and walks till the first cock, he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip, muldews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth. 122

Switthold footed thrice the old
He met the night mare and her nine-fold,
Bid her alight

And her troth plight,
And aroint thee, witch about thee!

Kent How fares your Grace? 128

Lear What's he?

Kent Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo What are you there? Your names?

Edg Poor Tom, that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water, that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets, swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog, drinks the green mantle of the standing pool, who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stock-punished, and imprisoned, who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,

141

But mice and rats and such small deer
Have been Tom's food for seven long year

Beware my follower Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend

145

Glo What! hath your Grace no better company?

Edg The prince of darkness is a gentleman,
Modo he's call'd, and Mahu

Glo Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,

That it doth hate what gets it.

150

Edg Poor Tom's a-cold

Glo Go in with me My duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters' hard commands

Though their injunction be to bar my doors, 154
And let this tyrannous might take hold upon
you,

Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out 156
And bring you where both fire and food is ready

Lear First let me talk with this philosopher
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent Good my lord, take his offer, go into the house

160

Lear I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban

What is your study?

Edg How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear Let me ask you one word in private Kent Importune him once more to go, my lord,

165

His wits begin to unsettle

Glo Canst thou blame him? [Storm still His daughters seek his death. Ah! that good Kent,

He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!
Thou sayst the king grows mad, I'll tell thee,

169

I am almost mad myself I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood, he sought my life,
But lately, very late, I lov'd him, friend, 172
No father his son dearer, true to tell thee,

[Storm continues The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your Grace,—
Lear O! cry you mercy, sir, Noble philosopher, your company

176

Edg Tom's a-cold

Glo In, fellow, there, into the hovel keep thee warm.

Lear Come, let's in all

Kent This way, my lord.

Lear With him,

I will keep still with my philosopher 180

Kent Good my lord, soothe him, let him take the fellow

Glo Take him you on.

Kent Sirrah, come on go along with us

Lear Come, good Athenian

Glo No words, no words hush.

Edg Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still, Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man, 187
[Exeunt

SCENE V — A Room in GLOUCESTER'S Castle

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND

Corn I will have my revenge ere I depart his house

Edm How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of Corn I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death, but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself

Edm How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France O heavens!
that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn Go with me to the duchess

Edm If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand

Corn True, or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension

Edm [Aside] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood

Corn I will lay trust upon thee, and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love [Exeunt

SCENE VI — A Chamber in a Farmhouse adjoining the Castle

Enter GLOUCESTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glo Here is better than the open air, take it thankfully I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can I will not be long from
you

Kent All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience The gods reward your kindness! [Exit GLOUCESTER.

Edg Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman! 12

Lear A king, a king!

Fool No, he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son, for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him. 16

Lear To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hizzing in upon 'em,— Edg The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool, He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear It shall be done, I will arraign them straight

[To EDGAR] Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer, 24

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here Now, you she foxes! 25

Edg Look, where he stands and glares! wantest thou eyes at trial, madam? 26

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me,— 28

Fool Her boat hath a leak, And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee

Edg The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring Croak not, black angel, I have no food for thee

Kent How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd 36

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions? 37

Lear I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence

[To EDGAR] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place, 40

[To the Fool] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, 41

Bench by his side [To KENT] You are o' the commission, 42

Sit you too

Edg Let us deal justly

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd? 44

Thy sheep be in the corn, And for one blast of thy minikin mouth. Thy sheep shall take no harm. 45

Purr! the cat is grey

Lear Arraign her first, 'tis Goneril I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father 48

Fool Come hither, mistress Is your name Goneril? 53

Lear She cannot deny it

Fool Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool

Lear And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim 56

What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape? 60

Edg Bless thy five wits!

Kent O pity! Sir, where is the patience now That you so oft have boasted to retain? 61

Edg [Aside] My tears begun to take his part so much, 62

They'll mar my counterfeiting

Lear The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me 64

Edg Tom will throw his head at them

Avaunt, you curs! 68

Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite, Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim, Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,

Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail, Tom will make them weep and wail For, with throwing thus my head, Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled. 76

Do de, de, de Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns Poor Tom, thy horn is dry 79

Lear Then let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? [To EDGAR] You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred, only I do not like the fashion of your garments you will say, they are Persian attire, but let them be changed 88

Kent Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile 89

Lear Make no noise, make no noise, draw the curtains so, so, so We'll go to supper i' the morning so, so, so 92

Fool And I'll go to bed at noon. 92

Re-enter GLOUCESTER

Glo Come hither, friend where is the king my master? 93

Kent Here, sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gone 96

Glo Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms, 97

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him. There is a litter ready lay him in't, 100

And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet 101

Both welcome and protection Take up thy master 102

If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss Take up, take up, 104

And follow me, that will to some provision Grive thee quick conduct 105

Kent Oppress'd nature sleeps This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews, 108

Which, if convenience will not allow, 109

Stand in hard cure — [To the Fool] Come, help to bear thy master, 110

Thou must not stay behind

Glo Come, come, away

[Exeunt KENT, GLOUCESTER, and the Fool, bearing away LEAR]

Edg When we our betters see bearing our woes, 112

We scarcely think our miseries our foes 113

Who alone suffers suffers most i' the mind, Leaving free things and happy shows behind, 114

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'er-skip, 115

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellow-ships 116

How light and portable my pain seems now, When that which makes me bend makes the king bow, 117

He chideth as I father'd. Tom, away! Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray 120

When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee, 121

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee. 122

What will hap more to-night, safe'scape the king!
Lurk, lurk [Exit

SCENE VII — A Room in GLOUCESTER's Castle

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND,
and Servants

Corn Post speedily to my lord your husband show him this letter the army of France is landed Seek out the traitor Gloucester

[Exeunt some of the Servants

Reg Hang him instantly 4

Gon Pluck out his eyes

Corn Leave him to my displeasure Edmund, keep you our sister company the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation we are bound to the like Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us Farewell, dear sister farewell, my Lord of Gloucester 13

Enter OSWALD

How now? Where's the king?

Osw My Lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence

Some five or six and thirty of his knights, 16
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate,
Who with some other of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him toward Dover, where they boast

To have well-armed friends

Corn Get horses for your mistress 20

Gon Farewell, sweet lord, and sister

Corn Edmund, farewell.

[Exeunt GONERIL, EDMUND, and

OSWALD

Go seek the traitor Gloucester, Punish him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other Servants

Though well we may not pass upon his life 24
Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame but not control Who's there?
The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOUCESTER.

Reg Ingrateful fox! 'tis he 28

Corn Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo What mean your Graces? Good my friends, consider

You are my guests do me no foul play, friends

Corn Bind him, I say [Servants bind him

Reg Hard, hard. O filthy traitor!

Glo Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none. 33

Corn To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find— [REGAN plucks his beard

Glo By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard 36

Reg So white, and such a traitor!

Glo Naughty lady,

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee I am your host

With robbers' hands my hospitable favours 40

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth

Corn And what confederacy have you with the traitors 44

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?

Speak

Glo I have a letter guessingly set down, 48
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd

Corn

Cunning.

Reg And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo To Dover

Reg Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril— 52

Corn Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer
that

Glo I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course

Reg Wherefore to Dover? 55

Glo Because I would not see thy cruel nails Pluck out his poor old eyes, nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up, 60

And quench'd the stelled fires,
Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that durn time, Thou shouldst have said, 'Good porter, turn the key,' 64

All cruels else subscrib'd but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn See't shalt thou never Fellows, hold the chair

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot. 68

Glo He that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help! O cruel! O ye gods!

[GLOUCESTER's eye put out

Reg One side will mock another, the other
too

Corn. If you see vengeance—

First Serv Hold your hand, my lord

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child, 73
But better service have I never done you

Than now to bid you hold

Reg How now, you dog!

First Serv If you did wear a beard upon your chin, 76

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! [Draws

First Serv Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger [Draws They fight

CORNWALL is wounded

Reg Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus! [Takes a sword and runs at him behind

First Serv O! I am slain. My lord, you have one eye left 81

To see some mischief on him. O! [Dies

Corn Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now? 84
Glo All dark and comfortless Where's my son Edmund?
 Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature
 To quit this horrid act

Reg Out, treacherous villain!
 Thou call'st on him that hates thee, it was he
 That made the overture of thy treasons to us, 89
 Who is too good to pity thee

Glo O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd.
 Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him! 92

Reg Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover [Exit one with GLOUCESTER.]
 How is t, my lord? How look you?

Corn I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady

Turn out that eyeless villain throw this slave
 Upon the dunghill Regan, I bleed apace 97
 Untimely comes this hurt Give me your arm

[Exit CORNWALL led by REGAN]
Sec Serv I'll never care what wickedness I do
 If this man come to good

Thrd Serv If she live long, 100
 And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
 Women will all turn monsters

Sec Serv Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam

To lead him where he would his roguish madness 104

Allows itself to any thing Thrd Serv Go thou, I'll fetch some flax, and whites of eggs,

 To apply to his bleeding face Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally]

ACT IV

SCENE I—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg Yet better thus, and known to be contemptu'd,
 Than still contemn'd and flatter'd To be worst,
 The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
 Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear 4
 The lamentable change is from the best,
 The worst returns to laughter Welcome, then,
 Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace
 The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst Owes nothing to thy blasts But who comes here? 9

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an old Man.
 My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!
 But that thystrangemutations make us hate thee,
 Life would not yield to age

Old Man O my good lord! 12
 I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant,
 These fourscore years

Glo Away, get thee away, good friend, be gone, Thy comforts can do me no good at all, 16
 Thee they may hurt

Old Man You cannot see your way,

Glo I have no way, and therefore want no eyes,

I stumbled when I saw Full oft 'tis seen,
 Our means secure us, and our mere defects 20
 Prove our commodities Ah! dear son Edgar,
 The food of thy abused father's wrath,
 Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
 I'd say I had eyes again

Old Man How now! Who's there? 24
Edg [Aside] O gods! Who is t can say, 'I am at the worst?'

I am worse than e'er I was Old Man 'Tis poor mad Tom Edg [Aside] And worse I may be yet, the worst is not,

So long as we can say, 'This is the worst' 28
Old Man Fellow, where goest?

Glo Is it a beggar-man?
Old Man Madman and beggar too

Glo He has some reason, else he could not beg

I the last night's storm I such a fellow saw, 32
 Which made me think a man a worm my son Came then into my mind, and yet my mind
 Was then scarce friends with him I have heard more since

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods, 36
 They kill us for their sport

Edg [Aside] How should this be?
 Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow, Angering itself and others — [To GLOUCESTER,]

Bless thee, master!
Glo Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man Ay, my lord

Glo Then, prithee, get thee gone If, for my sake, 42

Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
 I'll the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love,
 And bring some covering for this naked soul 44
 Who I'll entreat to lead me

Old Man Alack, sir! he is mad

Glo 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure,
 Above the rest be gone 48

Old Man I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have, Come on't what will [Exit]

Glo Surrah naked fellow,— Edg Poor Tom's a cold. [Aside] I cannot daub it further 52

Glo Come hither, fellow
Edg [Aside] And yet I must. Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed

Glo Know'st thou the way to Dover? 55
Edg Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path

Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once of lust, as Obidicut, Hobbididance, prince of dumbness Mahu, of stealing Modo, of murder, and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women So, bless thee, master! 64

Glo Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens plague

Have humbled to all strokes that I am wretched Makes thee the happier heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, 68
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly,

So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover? 72

Edg Ay, master

Glo There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep,
Bring me but to the very brim of it, 76
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear
With something rich about me, from that place
I shall no loading need.

Edg Give me thy arm
Poor Tom shall lead thee [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Before the DUKE OF ALBANY'S
Palace

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND

Gon Welcome, my lord, I marvel our mild husband

Not met us on the way [Enter OSWALD] Now, where's your master?

Osw Madam, within, but never man so chang'd

I told him of the army that was landed, 4
He smil'd at it I told him you were coming His answer was, 'The worse' of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot, 8
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out What most he should dislike seems pleasant to
him

What like offensive

Gon [To EDMUND] Then, shall you go no further

It is the cowish terror of his spirit 12
That dares not undertake, he'll not feel wrongs Which tie him to an answer Our wishes on the way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother,

Hasten his musters and conduct his powers 16
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands This trusty servant Shall pass between us, ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf, 20
A mistress's command Wear this, spare speech, [Giving a favour

Decline your head this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air
Conceive, and fare thee well. 24

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloucester!

[Exit EDMUND

O! the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman's services are due
My fool usurps my bed.

Osw Madam, here comes my lord [Exit

Enter ALBANY

Gon I have been worth the whistle

Alb O Goneril! 29
You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind

Blows in your face I fear your disposition
That nature, which contemns its origin, 32
Cannot be border'd certain in itself,
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her maternal sap, perforce must wither

And come to deadly use 36

Gon No more the text is foolish

Alb Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile,

Filth's savour but themselves What have you done?

Tigers, not daughters what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man, 41
Whose reverence the head lugg'd bear would lick, Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madded

Could my good brother suffer you to do it? 44
A man a prince, by him so benefited!

If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come, 48

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,

Like monsters of the deep

Gon Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs,

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning 52 Thine honour from thy suffering, that not know'st

Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
land, 56

With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats, Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest
'Alack! why does he so?'

Alb See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend 60
So horrid as in woman

Gon O vain fool!

Alb Thou chang'd and self-cover'd thing, for shame,

Be-monster not thy feature Were't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood, 64

They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones, howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee

Gon Marry, your manhood—Mew! 68

Enter a Messenger

Alb What news?

Mess O! my good lord, the Duke of Corn-wall's dead,

Slam by his servant, going to put out

The other eye of Gloucester

Alb Gloucester's eyes! 72

Mess A servant that he bred, thril'd with remorse

Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master, who, thereat enrag'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell d him
dead, 76
But not without that harmful stroke, which since

Hath pluck'd him after

Alb This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess Both, both, my lord 81
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer,
'Tis from your sister

Gon [Aside] One way I like this well,
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck 83
Upon my hateful life another way,

This news is not so tart [To Messenger] I'll read and answer [Exit]

Alb Where was his son when they did take his eyes? 88

Mess Come with my lady hither

Alb He is not here

Mess No, my good lord, I met him back
again.

Alb Knows he the wickedness?

Mess Ay, my good lord, 'twas he inform'd against him, 92

And quit the house on purpose that their punishment

Might have the freer course

Alb Gloucester, I live To thank thee for the love thou show'st the
king,

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend Tell me what more thou knowest [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The French Camp, near Dover

Enter KENT and a Gentleman

Kent Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of, which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, that his personal return was most required and necessary 7

Kent Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent The Marshal of France, Monsieur la
Far

Kent Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief? 12

Gent Ay, sir, she took them, read them in my presence,

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek, it seem'd she was a queen Over her passion, who, most rebel-like, 16
Sought to be king o'er her

Kent O! then it mov'd her strove

Gent Not to a rage, patience and sorrow Who should express her goodliest. You have seen

Sunshine and rain at once, her smiles and tears
Were like a better way, those happy smiles 21

That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to know What guests were in her eyes, which parted thence,

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief, 24
Sorrow would be a rarity most belov'd,
If all could so become it

Kent Made she no verbal question?
Gent Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of 'father'

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart, 28
Cried 'Sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies! sisters!
Kent! father! sisters! What, is the storm?' is the night?

Let pity not be believed! There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes, 32
And clamour-moisten'd, then away she started To deal with grief alone

Kent It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions,
Else one self mate and make could not beget 36 Such different issues You spoke not with her since?

Gent No

Kent Was this before the king return'd?

Gent No, since

Kent Well, sir, the poor distress'd Lear's is the town, 40

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about and by no means

Will yield to see his daughter

Gent Why, good sir?

Kent A sovereign shame so elbows him his own unkindness, 44

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd
her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things stung

His mind so venomously that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia

Gent Alack! poor gentleman 49

Kent Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent 'Tis so, they are afoot

Kent Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master
Lear, 52

And leave you to attend him Some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile,
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve Lending me this acquaintance I pray you, go Along with me [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—The Same A Tent

Enter with drum and colours, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Soldiers,

Cor Alack! 'tis he why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea, singing aloud,
Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow weeds,
With burdocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, 4

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn A century send forth, Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]

What can man's wisdom 4

In the restoring his bereaved sense⁹
 He that helps him take all my outward worth Doc There is means, madam,
 Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
 The which he lacks, that to provoke in him,
 Are many simples operative, whose power
 Will close the eye of anguish

Cor All bless'd secrets,
 All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
 Spring with my tears¹ be aidant and remediate
 In the good man's distress¹ Seek, seek for him, Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
 That wants the means to lead it

Enter a Messenger

Mess News, madam, 20
 The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor 'Tis known before, our preparation
 stands

In expectation of them O dear father!
 It is thy business that I go about, 24
 Therefore great France
 My mourning and important tears hath pitied,
 No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
 But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right,
 Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt

SCENE V — A Room in GLOUCESTER's Castle

Enter REGAN and OSWALD

Reg But are my brother's powers set forth?
Osw Ay, madam

Reg Himself in person there?
Osw Madam, with much ado

Your sister is the better soldier Reg Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home? 4

Osw No, madam
Reg What might import my sister's letter to him?

Osw I know not, lady Reg Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter 8

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,

To let him live, where he arrives he moves
 All hearts against us Edmund, I think, is gone
 In pity of his misery, to dispatch 12

His nighted life, moreover, to descry
 The strength o' the enemy

Osw I must needs after him, madam, with my letter

Reg Our troops set forth to-morrow, stay with us, 16

The ways are dangerous
Osw I may not, madam,

My lady charg'd my duty in this business
Reg Why should she write to Edmund?

Might not you
 Transport her purposes by word? Belike, 20

Something—I know not what I'll love thee much,

Let me unseal the letter
Osw Madam, I had rather—

Reg I know your lady does not love her husband,

I am sure of that and at her late being here 24
 She gave strange ceiliades and most speaking looks

To noble Edmund I know you are of her bosom.
Osw I, madam!

Reg I speak in understanding, you are, I know't 28

Therefore I do advise you, take this note
 My lord is dead, Edmund and I have talk'd,

And more convenient is he for my hand
 Than for your lady's You may gather more 32

If you do find him, pray you, give him this,
 And when your mistress hears thus much from
 you,

I pray desire her call her wisdom to her
 So, fare you well 36

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off

Osw Would I could meet him, madam I would show

What party I do follow
Reg Fare thee well [Exeunt

SCENE VI — The Country near Dover

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant

Glo When shall I come to the top of that same hill?

Edg You do climb up it now, look how we labour

Glo Methinks the ground is even Edg Horrible steep

Hark! do you hear the sea?
Glo No, truly 4

Edg Why, then your other senses grow imperfect

By your eyes anguish.
Glo So may it be, indeed

Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st
 In better phrase and matter than thou didst 8

Edg Y^e are much deceiv'd, in nothing am I chang'd

But in my garments
Glo Methinks you're better spoken

Edg Come on, sir, here's the place stand still

How fearful 12
 And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows and choughs that wing the midway air
 Show scarce so gross as beetles, half way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade! 16

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head
 The fishermen that walk upon the beach

Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy 20

Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,

That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
 Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,

Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight 24
 Topple down headlong

Glo Set me where you stand Edg Give me your hand, you are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glo Let go my hand 28
Here, friend, 's another purse, in it a jewel Well worth a poor man's taking faires and gods

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off, Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going 32

Edg Now fare you well, good sir
Glo With all my heart.
Edg Why I do trifle thus with his despair
Is done to cure it.

Glo O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your sights, 36
Shake patiently my great affliction off,
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff and loathed part of nature should 40
Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!
Now fellow, fare thee well. [He falls forward]

Edg Gone, sir farewell [Aside] And yet I know not how conceit may rob

The treasury of life when life itself 44
Yields to the theft, had he been where he thought
By this had thought been past Alive or dead?
[To Gloucester] Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir? speak!

Thus might he pass indeed, yet he revives. 48
What are you, sir?

Glo Away and let me die Edg Hast thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating, Thou dost shiver'd like an egg, but thou dost breathe, 52
Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak'st, art sound

Ten masts at each make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell Thy life's a miracle Speak yet again. 56

Glo But have I fallen or no?
Edg From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-height, the shrill-gorg'd lark so far Cannot be seen or heard do but look up 60

Glo Alack! I have no eyes
Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort, When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage, 64
And frustrate his proud will

Edg Give me your arm Up so How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand

Glo Too well, too well.
Edg This is above all strangeness Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that Which parted from you? 72

Glo A poor unfortunate beggar 69 Edg As I stood here below methought his
eyes

Were two full moons he had a thousand noses, Horns whelk'd and way'd like the enridged sea
It was some fiend, therefore thou happy father, Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours 74

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee
Glo I do remember now, henceforth I'll bear Affliction till it do cry out itself 77
'Enough, enough,' and die That thing you speak of

I took it for a man, often 'twould say
'The fiend, the fiend' he led me to that place Edg Bear free and patient thoughts But who comes here? 81

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with flowers

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus

Lear No, they cannot touch me for coming,
I am the king himself 85

Edg O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear Nature's above art in that respect There's your press-money That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper draw me a clothier's yard Look, look! a mouse Peace, peace!
this piece of toasted cheese will do't There's my gauntlet, I'll prove it on a giant Bring up the brown bills O! well flown bird, I! the clout, I the clout hewgh! Give the word Edg Sweet marjoram. 96

Lear Pass
Glo I know that voice

Lear Ha! Gonevil, with a white beard!
They flatter'd me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there To say 'ay' and 'no' to everything I said! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity When the rain came to wet me once and the wind to make me chatter when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out Go to, they are not men o' their words they told me I was every thing, 'tis a lie, I am not ague-proof 108

Glo The trick of that voice I do well remember

Is't not the king?

Lear Ay, every inch a king
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes
I pardon that man's life What was thy cause? 112 Adultery?

Thou shalt not die die for adultery! No
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight 116

Let copulation thrive, for Gloucester's bastard son
Was kinder to his father than my daughters Got 'twixt the lawful sheets
To't luxury, pell-mell' for I lack soldiers 120 Behold yond sumptuous dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow,
That mimes virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name, 124
The fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to't
With a more riotous appetite Down from the waist they are Centaurs,
Though women all above 128
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiend's
There's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit, 131

Burning, scalding, stench, consumption, fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination there's money for thee

Glo O! let me kiss that hand! 136

Lear Let me wipe it first, it smells of mortality

Glo O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world

Shall so wear out to nought Dost thou know
me? 139

Lear I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squint at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid, I'll not love Read thou this challenge, mark but the penning of it

Glo Were all the letters suns, I could not see

Edg [Aside] I would not take this from report, it is, 145

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear Read.

Glo What! with the case of eyes? 148

Lear O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?
Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light yet you see how this world goes 152

Glo I see it feelingly

Lear What! art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes Look with thine ears see how yond justice rails upon yon simple thief Hark, in thine ear change places, and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar? 160

Glo Ay, sir

Lear And the creature run from the cur?
There thou mightst behold the great image of authority, a dog's obey'd in office 164

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back,

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her The usurer hangs the cozener 168

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear, Robes and furr'd gowns hide all Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks,
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it None does offend, none, I say none, I'll able 'em 173

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes,
And, like a scurvy politician, seem 176

To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now now

Pull off my boots, harder, harder, so ~

Edg [Aside] O! matter and impertinency mix'd,

Reason in madness! 180

Lear If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes,

I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloucester

Thou must be patient, we came crying hither
Thou know'st the first time that we smell the air 184
We waul and cry I will preach to thee mark.

Glo Alack! alack the day!

Lear When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools This' a good block!
It were a delicate stratagem to shoe 189
A troop of horse with felt, I'll put it in proof,
And when I have stol'n upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill! 192

Enter Gentleman, with Attendants

Gent O! here he is, lay hand upon him. Sir,
Your most dear daughter—

Lear No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune Use me well, 196
You shall have ransom Let me have surgeons,
I am cut to the brains

Gent You shall have any thing

Lear No seconds? All myself?

Why this would make a man a man of salt, 200
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

Gent Good sir,—

Lear I will die bravely as a bridegroom.
What!

I will be jovial come, come, I am a king, 204
My masters, know you that?

Gent You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running Sa, sa, sa, sa

[Exit Attendants follow]

Gent A sight most pitiful in the meanest
wretch, 209

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to 212

Edg Hail, gentle sir!

Gent Sir, speed you what's your will?

Edg Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent Most sure and vulgar, every one hears
that,

Which can distinguish sound

Edg But, by your favour, 216

How near's the other army?

Gent Near, and on speedy foot, the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg I thank you, sir that's all

Gent Though that the queen on special cause is here, 220

Her army is mov'd on.

Edg I thank you, sir

[Exit Gentleman]

Glo You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me.

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again

To die before you please!

Edg Well pray you, father 224

Glo Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows,

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity Give me your hand
I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo Hearty thanks 229
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD

Osw A proclaim d prize! Most happy!
That eyesless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes Thou old unhappy traitor, 233

Briefly thyself remember the sword is out
That must destroy thee

Glo Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to't [EDGAR interposes]

Osw Wherefore, bold peasant, 236
Dar'st thou support a publish d traitor? Hence, Lest that infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee Let go his arm

Edg Chill not let go, zur, without vurther
'casion 241

Osw Let go, slave, or thou diest Edg Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass An chud ha' bin zwaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight Nay, come not near th' old man, keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder Chill be plain with you 249

Osw Out, dunghill!
Edg Chill pick your teeth, zur Come, no matter vor your foms 252

[They fight and EDGAR knocks him down] Osw Slave, thou hast slain me Villain, take my purse

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body,
And give the letters which thou find at about me
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester, seek him out Upon the English party O! untimely death 257

[Dies]
Edg I know thee well a serviceable villain,
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress
As badness would desire

Glo What! is he dead? 260
Edg Sit you down father, rest you Let's see his pockets these letters that he speaks of

May be my friends He's dead, I am only sorry
He had no other deaths-man Let us see 264 Leave, gentle wax, and, manners, blame us not To know our enemies minds, we d rip their hearts,

Their papers, is more lawful Let our reciprocal vows be remembered You have many opportunities to cut him off if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered There is nothing done if he return the conqueror then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour

Your—wife, so I would say— 276 Affectionate servant,

GONFRIL
O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life, 280 And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands,

Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers, and in the mature time
With this ungracious paper strike the sight 284
Of the death-practis'd duke For him tis well
That of thy death and business I can tell

Glo The king is mad how stiff is my vile sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenius feeling 288
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,

And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves [Drums afar off]

Edg Give me your hand 292
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum

Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend
[Exeunt]

SCENE VII — A Tent in the French Camp

Enter CORDELIA, KENT, Doctor, and Gentleman

Cor O thou good Kent! how shall I live and work

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,

And every measure fail me
Kent To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid 4

All my reports go with the modest truth,
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so

Cor Be better suited These weeds are memories of those worser hours

I prithee, put them off
Kent Pardon me, dear madam, 8

Yet to be known shortens my made intent
My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet Cor Then be't so, my good lord — [To the Doctor] How does the king? 12

Doc Madam, sleeps still.
Cor O you kind gods,

Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untun'd and jarring senses, O! wind up 16
Of this child-changed father!

Doc So please your majesty
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long

Cor Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I' the sway of your own will Is he array'd? 20

Enter LEAR in his chair, carried by Servants

Gent Ay, madam, in the heaviness of sleep,
We put fresh garments on him

Doc Be by, good madam, when we do awake
him,

I doubt not of his temperance
Cor Very well [Music]

Doc Please you, draw near Louder the music there 25

Cor O my dear father! Restoration, hang Thy medicine on my lips and let this kiss

Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent Kind and dear princess! 29

Cor Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challeng'd pity of them Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring winds? 32
To stand against the deep dread-boited thunder?
In the most terrible and numble stroke
Of quick cross lightning? to watch—poor perdu!—

With this thum helm? Mine enemy's dog, 36 Though he had bit me, should have stood that
night
Against my fire And wast thou fain, poor
father,

To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 40
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once Had not concluded all He wakes, speak to
him.

Doc Madam, do you, 'tis fittest

Cor How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty? 44

Lear You do me wrong to take me out o'
the grave,

Thou art a soul in bliss, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead

Cor Sir, do you know me? 48

Lear You are a spirit, I know, when did you die?

Cor Still, still, far wide

Doc He scarce awake, let him alone awhile

Lear Where have I been? Where am I? Fair day-light? 52

I am mightily abus'd I should even die with pity

To see another thus I know not what to say
I will not swear these are my hands let's see,
I feel this pin prick Would I were assur'd 56
Of my condition!

Cor O! look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me
No, sir, you must not kneel

Lear Pray, do not mock me
I am a very foolish fond old man, 60

Fourscore and upward, not an hour more or less,

And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind

Methinks I should know you and know this
man, 64

Yet I am doubtful for I am mainly ignorant What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments, nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at

me, 68

For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia

Cor And so I am, I am

Lear Be your tears wet? Yes, faith, I pray, weep not

If you have poison for me, I will drink it. 72
I know you do not love me, for your sisters

Have as I do remember, done me wrong
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor No cause, no cause.

Lear Am I in France?

Kent In your own kingdom, sir

Lear Do not abuse me 77

Doc Be comforted, good madam, the great rage,

You see, is kill'd in him, and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost 80

Desire him to go in, trouble him no more Till further settling

Cor Will t please your highness walk?

Lear You must bear with me Pray you now, forget and forgive I am old and foolish. [Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, DOCtor, and Attendants

Gent Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent Most certain, sir

Gent Who is conductor of his people? 88

Kent As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester

Gent They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany

Kent Report is changeable 'Tis time to look about, the powers of the kingdom approach apace 94

Gent The arbitrement is like to be bloody Fare you well, sir [Exit

Kent My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, 97

Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought [Exit

ACT V

SCENE I—The British Camp near Dover

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others

Edm Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught
To change the course, he's full of alteration

And self-reproving, bring his constant pleasure [To an Officer, who goes out

Reg Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth, 8

Do you not love my sister?

Edm In honour'd love

Reg But have you never found my brother's
way

To the forefended place?

Edm That thought abuses you.

Reg I am doubtful that you have been conjunct 12

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers

Edm No, by mine honour, madam

Reg I never shall endure her dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her

Edm Fear me not. 16

She and the duke her husband!

Enter with drums and colours, ALBANY,
GONERIL, and Soldiers

Gon. [Aside] I had rather lose the battle than that sister

Should loosen him and me

Alb Our very loving sister, well be-met 20
Sir, this I heard, the king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
Forc'd to cry out Where I could not be honest
I never yet was valiant for this business, 24
It toucheth us, as France invades our land,
Not holds the king, with others, whom, I fear
Most just and heavy causes make oppose

Edm Sir, you speak nobly

Reg Why is this reason'd? 28

Gon Combine together 'gainst the enemy,
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not the question here

Alb Let's then determine

With the ancient of war on our proceeding 32

Edm I shall attend you presently at your tent

Reg Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon No

Reg 'Tis most convenient, pray you, go

with us 36

Gon [Aside] O, ho! I know the riddle

[Aloud] I will go

Enter EDGAR, disguised

Edg If e'er your Grace had speech with man so poor,

Hear me one word

Alb I'll overtake you. Speak [Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants

Edg Before you fight the battle, ope this letter 40

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there If you miscarry, 44
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb Stay till I have read the letter

Edg I was forbid it

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, 48
And I'll appear again.

Alb Why, fare thee well I will o'erlook thy paper [Exit EDGAR.]

Re-enter EDMUND

Edm The enemy's in view, draw up your powers

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces 52

By diligent discovery, but your haste

Is now urg'd on you.

Alb We will greet the time [Exit

Edm To both these sisters have I sworn my
love,

Each jealous of the other, as the stung 56

Are of the adder Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd

If both remain alive to take the widow

Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril, 60

And hardly shall I carry out my side,

Her husband being alive Now then, we'll use

His countenance for the battle, which being done

Let her who would be rid of him devise 64

His speedy taking off As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon, for my state 68
Stands on me to defend, not to debate [Exit

SCENE II — A Field between the two Camps

Alarum within Enter, with drum and colours,
LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces, and exeunt Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg Here, father, take the shadow of this tree

For your good host, pray that the night may thrive

If ever I return to you again,

I'll bring you comfort

Glo Grace go with you, sir! 4
[Exit EDGAR.]

Alarum, afterwards a retreat Re-enter
EDGAR

Edg Away, old man! give me thy hand away!

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.
Give me thy hand, come on.

Glo No further, sir, a man may rot even here 8

Edg What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo And that's true too
[Exit

SCENE III — The British Camp, near Dover

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
EDMUND, LEAR and CORDELIA, prisoners,
Officers, Soldiers, &c

Edm Some officers take them away good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known

That are to censure them

Cor We are not the first Who, with best meaning, have incurr'd the worst. 4

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down, Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison, 8

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,

And ask of thee forgiveness so we'll live,

And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh 12

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues

Talk of court news, and we'll talk with them

too,

Who loses and who wins, who's in, who's out,

And take upon's the mystery of things, 16

As if we were God's spies; and we'll wear out,

In a wall'd prison, packs and sets of great ones

That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm Take them away
Lear Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, 20
 The gods themselves throw incense Have I caught thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
 And fire us hence like foxes Wipe thine eyes,
 The gowjeres shall devour them, flesh and fell, 24
 Ere they shall make us weep we'll see 'em starve first

Come [Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded

Edm Come hither, captain, hark, Take thou this note, [Giving a paper] go follow them to prison 28

One step I have advanc'd thee, if thou dost
 As thus instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
 To noble fortunes, know thou this, that men
 Are as the time is, to be tender-minded 32
 Does not become a sword, thy great employment

Will not bear question, either say thou 't do't, Or thrive by other means

Offi I'll do't, my lord.
Edm About it, and write happy when thou hast done 36

Mark,—I say, instantly, and carry it so

As I have set it down

Offi I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats,
 If it be man's work I will do it. [Exit

Flourish Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, Officers, and Attendants

Alb Sir, you have show'd to-day your valiant strain, 41

And fortune led you well, you have the captives
 Who were the opposites of this day's strife,
 We do require them of you, so to use them 44
 As we shall find their merits and our safety
 May equally determine

Edm Sir, I thought it fit
 To send the old and miserable king
 To some retention, and appointed guard, 48
 Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
 To pluck the common bosom on his side,
 And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes Which do command them With him I sent the
 queen, 52

My reason all the same, and they are ready
 To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
 Where you shall hold your session At this time We sweat and bleed, the friend hath lost his friend, 56

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
 By those that feel their sharpness,
 The question of Cordelia and her father Requires a fitter place

Alb Sir, by your patience, 60
 I hold you but a subject of this war,
 Not as a brother

Reg That's as we list to grace him Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,

Ere you had spoke so far He led our powers, 64
 Bore the commission of my place and person,
 The which immediacy may well stand up,
 And call itself your brother

Gon. Not so hot,

In his own grace he doth exalt himself 68
 More than in your addition

Reg In my rights,

By me invested, he compeers the best Gon That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg Jesters do oft prove prophets

Gon Holla, holla! 72

That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.

Reg Lady, I am not well, else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach General,

Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony, 76

Dispose of them, of me, the walls are thine,

Witness the world, that I create thee here

My lord and master

Gon Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb The let-alone lies not in your good will 80

Edm Nor in thine, lord.

Alb Half-blooded fellow, yes

Reg [To EDMUND] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine

Alb Stay yet, hear reason. Edmund, I arrest
 thee

On capital treason, and, in thy arrest, 84

This gilded serpent [Pointing to GONERIL] For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife,

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your bans. 88

If you will marry, make your love to me,

My lady is bespoken

Gon An interlude!

Alb Thou art arm'd, Gloucester, let the trumpet sound

If none appear to prove upon thy person 92

Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge, [Throws down a glove] I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less

Than I have here proclaim'd thee

Reg Sick! O sick! 96

Gon [Aside] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine

Edm There's my exchange [Throws down

a glove] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.

Call by thy trumpet he that dares approach,

On him, on you, who not? I will maintain nor

My truth and honour firmly

Alb A herald, ho!

Edm A herald, ho! a herald!

Alb Trust to thy single virtue, for thy soldiers, 104

All levied in my name, have in my name

Took their discharge.

Reg My sickness grows upon me.

Alb She is not well, convey her to my tent.

[Exit REGAN, led.

Come hither, herald,

Enter a Herald.

Let the trumpet sound,— 108

And read out this.

Offi. Sound, trumpet! [A trumpet sounds.

Her If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet He is bold in his defence 116

Edm. Sound!

[First Trumpet

Her Again!

[Second Trumpet

Her Again!

[Third Trumpet

[Trumpet answers within

Enter EDGAR, armed with a Trumpet before
him

Alb Ask him his purposes, why he appears Upon this call o' the trumpet

Her What are you? 121
Your name? your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg Know, my name is lost,
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit 125
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope

Alb Which is that adversary?

Edg What's he that speaks for Edmund
Earl of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself what sayst thou to him?

Edg Draw thy sword, 128
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice, here is mine
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession I protest, 132 Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor,
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father, Conspiring 'gainst this high illustrious prince,
And, from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor Say thou 'No,' 140 This sword, this arm, and my best spirits are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, Thou liest

Edm In wisdom I should ask thy name,
But since thy outside looks so fair and war-like,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes, 145

What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn, Back do I toss these treasons to thy head, 148
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart, Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever Trumpets,
speak! 152

[Alarums They fight EDMUND falls

Alb Save him, save him!

Gon This is practice, Gloucester
By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite, thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd

Alb Shut your mouth, dame, 156
Or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir;

Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil
No tearing, lady, I perceive you know it [Gives the letter to EDMUND

Gon Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine 160

Who can arraign me for't?

[Exit

Alb Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

Edm. Ask me not what I know

Alb Go after her she's desperate, govern her [Exit an Officer

Edm What you have charg'd me with, that have I done, 164

And more, much more, the time will bring it out

'Tis past, and so am I But what art thou That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble, I do forgive thee

Edg Let's exchange charity 168

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund,

If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices 172

Make instruments to plague us

The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes

Edm Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true,

The wheel is come full circle, I am here 176

Alb Methought thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness I must embrace thee

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I Did hate thee or thy father

Edg Worthy prince I know't. 180

Alb Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your

father?

Edg By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale,

And, when 'tis told, O! that my heart would burst, 184

The bloody proclamation to escape

That follow'd me so near,—O! our lives' sweetness,

That we the pam of death would hourly die

Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift 188

Into a madman's rags, to assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd and in this habit

Met I my father with his bleeding rings,

Their precious stones new lost, became his gunde, 192

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair,

Never,—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him,

Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last 197

Told him my pilgrimage but his flaw'd heart,—

Alack! too weak the conflict to support,

'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,

Burst smilingly

Edm This speech of yours hath mov'd me,

And shall perchance do good, but speak you on, 202

You look as you had something more to say

Alb If there be more, more woeful, hold it in; 204

For I am almost ready to dissolve, Hearing of this

Edg This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow, but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity 209
Whilst I was big in clamour came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate, Shunn'd my abhorr'd society, but then, finding Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven, threw him on my father,
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him 216
That ever ear receiv'd, which in recounting His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life Began to crack twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb But who was this? 220 Edg Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent, who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife

Gent Help, help! O help!
Edg What kind of help?
Alb Speak, man. 224
Edg What means that bloody knife?
Gent 'Tis hot, it smokes,
It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead.
Alb Who dead? speak, man Gent Your lady, sir, your lady and her sister 228
By her is poison'd she confesses it Edm I was contracted to them both all three

Now marry in an instant
Edg Here comes Kent.
Alb Produce the bodies, be they alive or
dead 232
Thus judgment of the heavens, that makes us
tremble,
Touches us not with pity [Exit Gentleman]

Enter KENT

O! is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges Kent I am come 236
To bid my king and master aye good-night,
Is he not here?
Alb Great thing of us forgot!
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

Seest thou this object, Kent? 240
[The bodies of GONERIL and REGAN are brought in.]

Kent Alack! why thus?
Edm Yet Edmund was belov'd
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself
Alb Even so Cover their faces 244
Edm I pant for life some good I mean to do Despite of mine own nature Quickly send,
Be brief in it, to the castle, for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia. 248

Nay, send in time.

Alb Run, run! O run!
Edg To whom, my lord? Who has the office?
send
Thy token of reprieve
Edm Well thought on take my sword, 252
Give it the captain.

Alb Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit EDGAR]
Edm He hath commission from thy wife and
me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and To lay the blame upon her own despair, 256
That she fordid herself
Alb The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile [EDMUND is borne off]

Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms EDGAR, Officer, and Others

Lear Howl, howl, howl, howl! O! you are men of stones
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vaults should crack She's gone for ever 261

I know when one is dead, and when one lives,
She's dead as earth Lend me a looking-glass,
If that her breath will must or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives

Kent Is this the promis'd end? 265
Edg Or image of that horror?
Alb Fall and cease?

Lear This feather stirs, she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows 268
That ever I have felt

Kent [Kneeling] O, my good master!
Lear Prithce, away
Edg 'Tis noble Kent, your friend
Lear A plague upon you, murderers, traitors
all!

I might have sav'd her, now, she's gone forever!
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little Ha! 273
What is't thou sayst? Her voice was ever soft, Gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee 276
Off 'Tis true, my lord, he did.

Lear Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion
I would have made them skip I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' the best I'll tell you straight 281
Kent If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?
Kent The same, 284
Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear He's a good fellow, I can tell you that, He'll strike, and quickly too He's dead and rotten.

Kent No, my good lord, I am the very
man— 288
Lear I'll see that straight.

Kent That, from your first of difference and decay,

Have follow'd your sad steps

Lear You are welcome hither

Kent Nor no man else, all 's cheerless, dark, and deadly

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear Ay, so I think.

Alb He knows not what he says, and vain
it is

That we present us to him.

Edg Very bootless. 296

Enter an Officer

Off Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb That's but a trifle here You lords and noble friends, know our intent,

What comfort to this great decay may come

Shall be applied for us, we will resign, 300

During the life of this old majesty,

To him our absolute power —[To EDGAR and

KENT] You, to your rights,

With boot and such addition as your honours

Have more than merited All friends shall taste

The wages of their virtue, and all foes 303

The cup of their deservings O! see, see!

Lear And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life!

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, 308

And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no

more,

Never, never, never, never, never!

Pray you, undo this button thank you, sir

Do you see this? Look on her, look, her lips, 312

Look there, look there! [Dies]

Edg He faints!—my lord, my lord!

Kent Break, heart, I prithee, break

Edg Look up, my lord.

Kent Vex not his ghost O! let him pass, he hates him

That would upon the rack of this tough world

Stretch him out longer

Edg He is gone, indeed 317

Kent The wonder is he hath endur'd so long

He but usurp'd his life

Alb Bear them from hence Our present

business 320

Is general woe [To KENT and EDGAR] Friends of my soul, you twain

Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain

Kent I have a journey, sir, shortly to go,

My master calls me, I must not say no 324

Alb The weight of this sad time we must obey,

Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say

The oldest hath borne most we that are young,

Shall never see so much, nor live so long 328

[Exeunt, with a dead march.]

OTHELLO

THE MOOR OF VENICE

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

DUKE OF VENICE.

BRABANTIO, a Senator Other Senators.

GRATIANO Brother to Brabantio

LODOVICO, Kinsman to Brabantio

OTHELLO a noble Moor, in the service of the Venetian State

CASSIO his Lieutenant.

IAGO his Ancient.

RODERIGO a Venetian Gentleman

MONTANO Othello's predecessor in the Government of Cyprus

Clown, Servant to Othello

DESDEMONA, Daughter to Brabantio, and Wife to Othello

EMILIA, Wife to Iago

BIANCA, Mistress to Cassio

Sailor, Officers, Gentlemen, Messengers, Musicians, Heralds Attendants

SCENE —For the first Act, in Venice during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-Port in Cyprus

ACT I

SCENE I —Venice A Street

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO

Rod Tush! Never tell me, I take it much unkindly

That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this

Iago 'Sblood, but you will not hear me 4 If ever I did dream of such a matter, Abhor me

Rod Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate

Iago Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city, 8

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant, Off-capp'd to him, and, by the faith of man, I know my price, I am worth no worse a place, But he, as loving his own pride and purposes, 12 Evades them, with a bombast circumstance Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war, And, in conclusion, Nonsuits my mediators, for, 'Certes,' says he, 16 'I have already chose my officer' And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician, One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, 20 A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife, That never set a squadron in the field, Nor the division of a battle knows More than a spinster, unless the bookish theoric, Wherein the tog'd consuls can propose 25 As masterly as he mere prattle, without practice,

Is all his soldiership But he, sir, had the election,

And I—of whom his eyes had seen the proof 28 At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds Christian and heathen—must be be-lee'd and calm'd

By debtor and creditor, this counter-caster, He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, 32 And I—God bless the mark!—his Moorship's ancient

Rod By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman

Iago Why, there's no remedy 'tis the curse of the service,

Preferment goes by letter and affection, 36 Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first Now, sir, be judge yourself,

Whe'r I in any just term am affin'd To love the Moor

Rod I would not follow him then. 40

Iago O' sir, content you, I follow him to serve my turn upon him, We cannot all be masters, nor all masters Cannot be truly follow'd You shall mark 44 Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave, That, doting on his own obsequious bondage, Wears out his time, much like his master's ass, For nought but provender, and when he's old, cashier'd, 48 Whip me such honest knaves Others there are Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty, Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves, And, throwing but shows of service on their lords, 52

Do well thrive by them, and when they have lin'd their coats

Do themselves homage these fellows have some soul,

And such a one do I profess myself For, sir, It is as sure as you are Roderigo, 56

Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago In following him, I follow but myself,

Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end 60 For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart

In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve 64
For daws to peck at I am not what I am.

Rod What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,

If he can carry't thus!

Iago Call up her father, 67
Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets, incense her kins-
men,

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies, though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on t 72
As it may lose some colour

Rod Here is her father's house, I'll call aloud

Iago Do, with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire 76
Is spied in populous cities

Rod What, ho! Brabantio! Signior Bra-bantio, ho!

Iago Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves!
thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags! 80

Thieves! thieves!

Enter BRABANTIO, above, at a window

Bra What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod Signior, is all your family within? 84

Iago Are your doors lock'd?

Bra Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago 'Zounds! sir, you're robb'd, for shame, put on your gown,

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul,
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram 88

Is tupping your white ewe Arise, arise!
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,

Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.
Arise, I say

Bra What! have you lost your wits? 92

Rod Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra Not I, what are you?

Rod My name is Roderigo

Bra The worser welcome
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors 96

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee, and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious knavery dost thou come 100

To start my quiet.

Rod Sir, sir, sir!

Bra But thou must needs be sure
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee

Rod Patience, good sir 104

Bra What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice,

My house is not a grange.

Rod Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you. 107

Iago 'Zounds! sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse, you'll have your nephews neigh to you, you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for Germans 114

Bra What profane wretch art thou?

Iago I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs

Bra Thou art a villain

Iago You are—a senator

Bra This thou shalt answer, I know thee, Roderigo 120

Rod Sir, I will answer any thing But, I beseech you,

If't be your pleasure and most wise consent,—
As partly, I find, it is,—that your fair daughter,

At this odd-even and dull-watch o' the night, 124
Transported with no worse nor better guard

But with a knave of common lute, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,— 127

If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs,

But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke Do not believe,

That, from the sense of all civility, 132
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence

Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt,

Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes 136
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger

Of here and every where Straight satisfy yourself

If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state 140

For thus deluding you

Bra Strike on the tender, ho!
Give me a taper! call up all my people!

This accident is not unlike my dream,
Belief of it oppresses me already 144

Light, I say! light! [Exit, from above

Iago Farewell, for I must leave you
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place

To be produc'd, as, if I stay, I shall,
Against the Moor, for, I do know the state, 148

However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him, for he's embark'd

With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,— Which even now stand in act,—that, for their souls, 152

Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business, in which regard,

Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life, 156

I must show out a flag and sign of love, Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search,

And there will I be with him. So, farewell 160
[Exit

Enter below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches

Bra. It is too true an evil gone she is,

And what's to come of my despised time
Is nought but bitterness Now, Rodengo, Where didst thou see her? O, unhappy girl!
With the Moor, sayst thou? Who would be a
father! 165
How didst thou know 'twas she? O, she de-ceives me
Past thought. What said she to you? Get more tapers! 168
Raise all my kindred! Are they married, think
you? 168
Rod Truly, I think they are Bra O heaven! How got she out? O, treason of the blood
Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds

By what you see them act Are there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Rodengo,
Of some such thing?

Rod Yes, sir, I have indeed Bra Call up my brother O! that you had had her 176

Some one way, some another! Do you know Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard and go along with me 180

Bra Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call,

I may command at most Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night
On, good Rodengo, I'll deserve your pains 184
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — Another Street

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants, with torches

Iago Though in the trade of war I have slain
men,

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder I lack inquiry
Sometimes to do me service Nine or ten times 4 I had thought to have yerkd him here under the ribs

Oth 'Tis better as it is Iago Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour 8

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? Be assur'd of this,
That the magnifico is much belov'd, 12
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's, he will divorce you,
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law—with all his might to enforce it on— 16
Will give him cable

Oth Let him do his spite
My services which I have done the signory Shall out-tongue his complaints 'Tis yet to
know, 19

Which when I know that boasting is an honour
I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being From men of royal siege, and my dement
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune

As this that I have reach'd, for know, Iago, 24
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine For the sea's worth But, look! what lights come yond? 28

Iago Those are the raised father and his friends
You were best go in.

Oth Not I, I must be found
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly Is it they? 32

Iago By Janus, I think no

Enter CASSIO and certain Officers, with torches

Oth The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant
The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas The duke does greet you, general, 36
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,

Even on the instant

Oth What is the matter, think you?
Cas Something from Cyprus, as I may divine

It is a business of some heat, the galleys 40
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels,
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the duke's already You have been hotly call'd for, 44

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests
To search you out

Oth 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house, 48
And go with you [Exit]

Cas Ancient, what makes he here?
Iago Farth, he to-night hath boarded a land carrack,

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever Cas I do not understand Iago He's married
Cas To who? 52

Re-enter OTHELLO

Iago Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth Have with you.
Cas Here comes another troop to seek for
you.

Iago It is Brabantio General, be advis'd,
He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers, with torches and weapons

Oth Holla! stand there! 56

Rod Signior, it is the Moor

Bra Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides]

Iago You, Rodengo! come sir, I am for you.

Oth Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.
Good signior, you shall more command with years 60

Than with your weapons

Bra. O thou foul thief! where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her, For I'll refer me to all things of sense, 64

If she in chains of magic were not bound, Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,

So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd The wealthy curled darlings of our nation, 68

Would ever have, to incur a general mock, Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom

Of such a thing as thou, to fear, not to delight. Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense 72

That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms, Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weaken motion: I'll have't disputed on, 'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking 76

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee For an abuser of the world, a practiser

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant. Lay hold upon him if he do resist, 80

Subdue him at his peril

Oth. Hold your hands, Both you of my inclining, and the rest

Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter: Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge? Bra. To prison, till fit time 85

Of law and course of direct session Call thee to answer

Oth. What if I do obey? How may the duke be therewith satisfied, 88

Whose messengers are here about my side, Upon some present business of the state

To bring me to him? Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior,

The duke's in council, and your noble self, 92

I am sure, is sent for

Bra. How! the duke in council! In this time of the night! Bring him away

Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state, 96

Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own, For if such actions may have passage free,

Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—A Council Chamber The DUKE and Senators sitting at a table Officers attending

Duke. There is no composition in these news That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd, My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty

Sec Sen. And mine, two hundred 4 But though they jump not on a just account,—

As in these cases, where the aim reports, 'Tis oft with difference,—yet do they all confirm

A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus. 8 Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment

I do not so secure me in the error, But the main article I do approve In fearful sense

Sailor [Within.] What, ho' what, ho' what, ho! 12

Off. A messenger from the galleys

Enter a Sailor

Duke. Now, what's the business? Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes,

So was I bid report here to the state By Signior Angelo 16

Duke. How say you by this change? First Sen. This cannot be,

By no assay of reason, 'tis a pageant To keep us in false gaze: When we consider

The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk, 20 And let ourselves again but understand,

That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes, So may he with more facile question bear it,

For that it stands not in such war-like brace, 24 But altogether lacks the abilities

That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful To leave that latest which concerns him first, 28

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain, To wake and wage a danger profitless

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes

Off. Here is more news 32

Enter a Messenger

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,

Have there injoin'd them with an after fleet First Sen. Ay, so I thought: How many, as you guess? 36 Mess. Of thirty sail, and now they do re-stem

Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor, 40

With his free duty recommends you thus, And prays you to believe him

Duke. 'Tis certain then, for Cyprus Marcus Luccicos, is not he in town? 44

First Sen. He's now in Florence

Duke. Write from us to him, post-post-haste dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you 48

Against the general enemy Ottoman. [To BRABANTIO.] I did not see you, welcome, gentle signior, We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon me, 52

Neither my place nor ought I heard of business Hath rais'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care

Take hold of me, for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature 56
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself

Duke Why, what's the matter?

Bra My daughter! O! my daughter

Duke Dead?

Sen }

Bra Ay, to me,

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted 60
By spells and medicines bought of mounte-

banks,
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not 64

Duke Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding

Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself
And you of her, the bloody book of law

You shall yourself read in the bitter letter 68
After your own sense, yea, though our proper

son
Stood in your action

Bra Humbly I thank your Grace
Here is the man, this Moor, whom now, it seems,

Your special mandate for the state affairs, 72 Hath hither brought

Duke We are very sorry for it

Sen }

Duke [To OTHELLO] What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra Nothing, but this is so

Oth Most potent, grave, and reverend signors, 76

My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,

It is most true, true I have married her
The very head and front of my offending 80

Hath this extent, no more Rude am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace,
For since these arms of mine had seven years'

path,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd

Their dearest action in the tented field, 85
And little of this great world can I speak,

More than pertains to feats of broil and battle,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause 88

In speaking for myself Yet, by your gracious
patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love, what drugs, what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic, 92

For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,
I won his daughter

Bra A maiden never bold,
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion

Blush'd at herself, and she, in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing, 97

To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect

That will confess perfection so could err 100 Against all rules of nature, and must be driven

To find out practices of cunning hell,

Why this should be I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the 104 blood,

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her

Duke To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more certain and more overt test

Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods 108
Of modern seeming do prefer against him

First Sen But, Othello speak
Did you by indirect and forced courses

Subdue and poison this young maid's affections, 112

Or came it by request and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,

And let her speak of me before her father 116
If you do find me foul in her report,

The trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence

Even fall upon my life

Duke Fetch Desdemona hither
Oth Ancient, conduct them, you best know the place 121

[Exeunt IAGO and Attendants]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,

So justly to your grave ears I'll present 124
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,

And she in mine

Duke Say it, Othello

Oth Her father lov'd me oft invited me,
Still question'd me the story of my life 129

From year to year the battles, sieges, fortunes
That I have pass'd

I ran it through, even from my boyish days 132
To the very moment that he bade me tell it,

Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,

Of hair-breadth 'scapes, the imminent deadly breach, 136

Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence

And portance in my travel's history,
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle, 140

Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hunt to speak, such was the process,
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,

The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads 144
Do grow beneath their shoulders This to hear

Would Desdemona seriously incline, But still the house-affairs would draw her

thence,
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,

She'd come again, and with a greedy ear 149
Devour up my discourse Which I observing,

Took once a phant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart 152

That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels she had something heard,

But not intently I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her tears, 156

When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,

She gave me for my pains a world of sighs
 She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange,
 'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful
 She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd That heaven had made her such a man, she thank'd me,
 And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
 I should but teach him how to tell my story, 165
 And that would woo her Upon this hint I spake
 She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
 And I lov'd her that she did pity them. 168
 This only is the witchcraft I have us'd
 Here comes the lady, let her witness it

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke I think this tale would win my daughter
 too
Good Brabantio,
 Take up this mangled matter at the best, 172
 Men do their broken weapons rather use Than their bare hands.

Bra I pray you, hear her speak
 If she confess that she was half the wooer, 176 Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress

Do you perceive in all this noble company
 Where most you owe obedience?

Des My noble father,
 I do perceive here a divided duty 181
 To you I am bound for life and education,
 My life and education both do learn me
 How to respect you, you are the lord of duty, I am hitherto your daughter but here's my husband; 185

And so much duty as my mother show'd
 To you, preferring you before her father, 188
 So much I challenge that I may profess
 Due to the Moor my lord

Bra God be with you! I have done
 Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs
 I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
 Come hither, Moor 192

I here do give thee that with all my heart
 Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
 I would keep from thee For your sake, jewel,
 I am glad at soul I have no other child, 196
 For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
 To hang clogs on them I have done, my lord.

Duke Let me speak like yourself and lay a sentence,

Which as a grize or step, may help these lovers
 Into your favour 201
 When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
 By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone 204
 Is the next way to draw new mischief on What cannot be preserv'd when Fortune takes, Patience her injury a mockery makes.
 The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief, 208

He robs himself that spends a bootless grief
Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;

We lose it not so long as we can smile
 He bears the sentence well that nothing bears But the free comfort which from thence he hears,
 But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
 That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow

These sentences, to sugar, or to gall, 216
 Being strong on both sides, are equivocal
 But words are words, I never yet did hear That the bruise'd heart was pierced through the ear

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state 220

Duke The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you, and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition 229

Oth The tyrant custom, most gravesenators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
 My thrice-driven bed of down I do agnize 232
 A natural and prompt alacrity
 I find in hardness, and do undertake

These present wars against the Ottomites
 Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
 I crave fit disposition for my wife, 237
 Due reference of place and exhibition,
 With such accommodation and besort
 As levels with her breeding

Duke If you please, 240 Be't at her father's

Bra I'll not have it so
Oth Nor I

Des Nor I, I would not there reside,
 To put my father in impatient thoughts 244
 By being in his eye Most gracious duke,
 To my unfolding lend your gracious ear,
 And let me find a charter in your voice
 To assist my simpleness 248

Duke What would you, Desdemona?
Des That I did love the Moor to live with
 him,

My downright violence and storm of fortunes
 May trumpet to the world, my heart's subdu'd
 Even to the very quality of my lord, 253
 I saw Othello's visage in his mind,

And to his honours and his valiant parts
 Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate 256

So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
 A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
 The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
 And I a heavy interim shall support 260
 By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voices Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not

To please the palate of my appetite, 264
 Nor to comply with heat,—the young affects
 In me defunct,—and proper satisfaction,

But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
 And heaven defend your good souls that you
 think 268

I will your serious and great business scant
For she is with me No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid scél with wanton dullness
My speculative and offic'd instruments, 272
That my disports corrupt and taint my business, Le. Housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation! 276

Duke Be it as you shall privately determine, Either for her stay or going The affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it

First Sen You must away to-night

Oth With all my heart 280

Duke At nine 't the morning here we'll meet
again

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you,
With such things else of quality and respect 284
As doth import you

Oth So please your Grace my ancient,
A man he is of honesty and trust
To his conveyance I assign my wife, With what else needful your good grace shall think 288

To be sent after me

Duke Let it be so

Good night to every one [To BRABANTIO]

And, noble signior,

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black 292

First Sen Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well

Bra Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee [Exeunt DUKE, Senators, Officers, &c

Oth My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee 297

I prithee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the best advantage

Come, Desdemona, I have but an hour 300
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee we must obey the time

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA

Rod Iago!

Iago What sayst thou, noble heart? 304

Rod What will I do, thinkst thou?

Iago Why, go to bed, and sleep

Rod I will incontinently drown myself

Iago Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after Why 'thou silly gentleman! 309

Rod It is silliness to live when to live is torment, and then have we a prescription to die

when death is our physician 312

Iago O! villainous, I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury I never found man that knew how to love himself Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon. 319

Rod What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it 322

Iago Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners, so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions, but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion

Rod It cannot be 338

Iago It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will Come, be a man Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies I have professed me thy friend and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness, I could never better stead thee than now Put money in thy purse, follow these wars, defeat thy favour with a usurped beard, I say, put money in thy purse It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her It was a violent commencement in her and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration put but money in thy purse These Moors are changeable in their wills,—fill thy purse with money—the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida She must change for youth when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice She must have change she must therefore put money in thy purse If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning Make all the money thou canst If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her, therefore make money A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her

Rod Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue? 370

Iago Thou art sure of me go, make money
I have told thee often and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor my cause is hearted thine hath no less reason Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him, if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered Traverse, go provide thy money We will have more of this to-morrow Adieu 380

Rod Where shall we meet 't the morning?

Iago At my lodging

Rod I'll be with thee betimes

Iago Go to, farewell Do you hear, Rode-rigo? 384

Rod What say you?

Iago No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod I am changed I'll sell all my land,

Iago Go to, farewell! put money enough in your purse. [Exit RODRIGO]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse,
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,

If I would time expend with such a snipe
But for my sport and profit I hate the Moor,
And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my office I know not if't be true,
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety He holds me well,

The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man, let me see now
To get his place, and to plume up my will In double knavery, how, how? Let's see After some time to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife
He hath a person and a smooth dispose
To be suspected, framed to make women false
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose
As asses are

I have't, it is engender'd hell and night Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. [Exit

ACT II

SCENE I—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus
An open place near the Quay

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon What from the cape can you discern at sea?

First Gent Nothing at all it is a high-wrought flood,

I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the main Descry a sail

Mon Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at
land,

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements,
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

Sec Gent A segregation of the Turkish fleet,
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,

Seems to cast water on the burning bear
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood

Mon If that the Turkish fleet Be not ensheated and embay'd, they are
drown'd,
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman

Third Gent News, lads! our wars are done
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks That their designment halts, a noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wrack and sufferance
On most part of their fleet

Mon How! is this true?
Third Gent The ship is here put in,

A Veronesa, Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the war-like Moor Othello,
Is come on shore the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus

Mon. I am glad on't, 'tis a worthy governor Third Gent But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly And prays the Moor be safe, for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon Pray heaven he be,
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello, Even till we make the main and the aerial blue
An indistinct regard

Third Gent Come, let's do so,
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance

Enter CASSIO

Cas Thanks, you the valiant of this war-like isle,

That so approve the Moor O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon Is he well shipp'd?

Cas His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approv'd allowance,
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure

[Within, 'A sail!—a sail!—a sail!']

Enter a Messenger

Cas What noise?

Mess The town is empty, on the brow o' the sea

Stand ranks of people, and they cry, 'A sail!' Cas My hopes do shape him for the governor [Guns heard

Sec Gent They do discharge their shot of courtesy,

Our friends at least

Cas I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd

Sec Gent I shall [Exit

Mon But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas Most fortunately he hath achiev'd a maid

That paragons description and wild fame,
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation Does tire the ingener

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?

Sec Gent 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general

Cas He has had most favourable and happy speed Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by 72
The divine Desdemona

Mon What is she?

Cas She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts 76
As 'night's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard, And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits, 81
And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Attendants

O! behold,

The riches of the ship is come on shore
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees 84
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des I thank you, valiant Cassio
What tidings can you tell me of my lord? 88

Cas He is not yet arriv'd, nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here

Des O! but I fear—How lost you company?
Cas The great contention of the sea and skies 92

Parted our fellowship. But hark! a sail [Cry within, 'A sail!—a sail! Guns heard

Sec Gent They give their greeting to the citadel

This likewise is a friend

Cas See for the news!

[Exit Gentleman]

Good ancient, you are welcome —[To EMILIA] welcome, mistress 96

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners, 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy

[Kissing her

Iago Sir, would she give you so much of her lips 100

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough

Des Alas! she has no speech.

Iago In faith, too much,
I find it still when I have list to sleep 104

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking

Emil You have little cause to say so 108

Iago Come on, come on, you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds. 112

Des O! fie upon thee, slanderer

Iago Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil You shall not write my praise

Iago No, let me not 116

Des What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago O gentle lady, do not put me to't,
For I am nothing if not critical Des Come on, assay. There's one gone to the harbour? 120

Iago Ay, madam

Des I am not merry, but I do beguile
The thing I am by seeming otherwise Come, how wouldst thou praise me? 124

Iago I am about it, but indeed my invention

Comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize,

It plucks out brains and all but my muse labours,

And thus she is deliver'd 128

If she be fair and wise, fairness and wit,

The one's for use, the other useth it

Des Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago If she be black, and thereto have a wit, 132

She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit

Des Worse and worse

Emil How if fair and foolish?

Iago She never yet was foolish that was fair,
For even her folly help'd her to an heir 137

Des These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago There's none so foul and foolish there-unto 141

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do

Des O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago She that was ever fair and never proud,
Had tongue at will and yet was never loud, 149

Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay, Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,'

She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh, Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly, 153

She that in wisdom never was so frail

To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail,
She that could think and ne'er disclose her mind,

See suitors following and not look behind, 157
She was a wight, if ever such wight were,—

Des To do what?

Iago To suckle fools and chronicle small beer

Des O most lame and impotent conclusion!

Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor? 164

Cas He speaks home, madam, you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar 167

Iago [Aside] He takes her by the palm, ay, well said, whisper, with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do, I will give thee in thine own courtship. You say true, 'tis so, indeed. If such tracks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in.

Very good, well kissed! an excellent courtesy!
'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! [A trumpet heard] The Moor! I know his trumpet 181

Cas 'Tis truly so

Des Let's meet him and receive him.

Cas Lo! where he comes 184

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth O my fair warrior!

Des My dear Othello!

Oth It gives me wonder great as my content
To see you here before me O my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calms, 188
May the winds blow till they have waken'd
death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas
Olympus-high, and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 192
'Twere now to be most happy, for I fear
My soul hath her content so absolute
That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate

Des The heavens forbid 196
But that our loves and comforts should increase Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that sweet powers!
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here, it is too much of joy, 200
And this, and this, the greatest discords be,

[Kissing her]
That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago [Aside] O! you are well tun'd now,
But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am

Oth. Come, let us to the castle 204 News, friends, our wars are done, the Turks are
drown'd

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus, I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet, 208

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts I prithee, good Iago,
Go to the bay and disembark my coffers.
Bring thou the master to the citadel, 212
He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,

Once more well met at Cyprus

[Exeunt all except IAGO and RODERIGO] Iago Do thou meet me presently at the harbour Come hither If thou be'st valiant, as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them, list me The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard first, I must tell thee this, Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod With him! why, 'tis not possible 223
Iago Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies, and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it.

Her eye must be fed, and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties, all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor, very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice Now, sir, this granted, as it is a most pregnant and unforced position, who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble, no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none, why, none a slipper and subtle knave, a finder-out of occasions, that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself, a devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after, a pestilent complete knave! and the woman hath found him already 255

Rod I cannot believe that in her, she is full of most blessed condition

Iago Blessed figs end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes if she had been blessed she would never have loved the Moor, blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod Yes, that I did, but that was but courtesy 264

Iago Lechery, by this hand! an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and man exercise, the incorporate conclusion Fish! But, sir, be you ruled by me I have brought you from Venice Watch you to-night, for the command I'll lay't upon you Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or taming his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister

Rod. Well

Iago Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply may strike at you provoke him, that he may, for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them, and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity 291

Rod I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity

Iago I warrant thee Meet me by and by at the citadel I must fetch his necessaries ashore Farewell 296

Rod Adieu.

[Exit

Iago That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it,

That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not, 300

Is of a constant, loving, noble nature, And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona

A most dear husband Now, I do love her too, Not out of absolute lust,—though peradventure

I stand accountant for as great a sin,— 305 But partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lusty Moor

Hath leap'd into my seat, the thought whereof Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards, 309 And nothing can or shall content my soul Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife,

Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor 312 At least into a jealousy so strong That judgment cannot cure Which thing to do,

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,

I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip, 317 Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb, For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too,

Make the Moor thank me, love me, and re- ward me 320

For making him egregiously an ass And practising upon his peace and quiet

Even to madness 'Tis here, but yet confus'd Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd 324

[Exit

SCENE II — A Street

Enter a Herald with a proclamation, People following

Her It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph, some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him, for besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! [Exit

SCENE III — A Hall in the Castle

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants

Oth Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to outsport discretion.

Cas Iago hath direction what to do, 4 But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye

Will I look to't

Oth

Iago is most honest Michael, good night, to-morrow with your earliest

Let me have speech with you. [To DESDEMONA] Come, my dear love, 8

The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue, That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you

Good night

[Exit OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants

Enter IAGO

Cas Welcome, Iago, we must to the watch

Iago Not this hour, lieutenant, 'tis not yet ten o' the clock Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, who let us not therefore blame, he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove 17 Cas She's a most exquisite lady

Iago And I'll warrant her full of game Cas Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature 21 Iago What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation

Cas An inviting eye, and yet methinks right modest 25

Iago And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas She is indeed perfection 28

Iago Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant I have a stoup of wine and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black

Othello 33 Cas Not to-night, good Iago I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment 37

Iago O! they are our friends, but one cup I'll drink for you

Cas I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more 44 Iago What, man! 'tis a night of revels, the gallants desire it. Cas Where are they?

Iago Here at the door, I pray you, call them in 49

Cas I'll do't, but it dislikes me [Exit Iago

If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence 53 As my young mistress' dog Now, my sick fool

Roderigo, Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side out,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd 56 To potations pottle deep, and he's to watch.

Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this war-like isle, 60 Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,

And they watch too Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

H h

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle But here they come
If consequence do but approve my dream, 65
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen. Servant following with wine

Cas 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already 68

Mon Good faith, a little one, not past a pint, as I am a soldier

Iago Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink,

And let me the canakin clink

A soldier's a man

A life's but a span

Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas 'Fore God, an excellent song

Iago I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting, your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,
—drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking? 84

Iago Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk, he sweats not to overthrow your Alman, he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled 88

Cas To the health of our general!

Mon I am for it, lieutenant, and I'll do you justice.

Iago O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer

His breeches cost him but a crown

He held them sumpence all too dear

With that he call'd the tailor lown.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree

'Tis pride that pulls the country down,

Then take thine auld cloak about thee. 100

Some wine, ho!

Cas Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other

Iago Will you hear't again? 104

Cas No, for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things Well, God's above all, and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved 108

Iago It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved. 112

Iago And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas Ay, but, by your leave, not before me, the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient Let's have no more of this, let's to our affairs God forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let's look to our business Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk this is my ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now, I can stand well enough, and speak well enough. 122

All Except well.

Cas Why, well, then; you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit

Mon To the platform, masters, come, let's set the watch

Iago You see this fellow that is gone before,
He is a soldier fit to stand by Caesar 128
And give direction, and do but see his vice,

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other, 'tis pity of him.

I fear the trust Othello puts him in, 132
On some odd time of his infirmity,

Will shake this island

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep
He'll watch the horologe a double set, 136
If drink rock not his cradle

Mon It were well

The general were put in mind of it
Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio, 140
And looks not on his evils Is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO

Iago [Aside to him] How now, Roderigo!

I pray you, after the lieutenant, go

[Exit RODERIGO]

Mon And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor Should hazard such a place as his own second

With one of an ingraft infirmity,
It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor

Iago Not I, for this fair island 148

I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil But hark! what noise?

[Cry within, 'Help! Help!']

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO

Cas You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas A knave teach me my duty! 152

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle

Rod Beat me!

Cas Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking RODERIGO]

Mon. [Staying him] Nay, good lieutenant,
I pray you, sir, hold your hand

Cas Let me go, sir, 156

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard

Mon Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas Drunk! [They fight]

Iago [Aside to RODERIGO] Away, I say! go out, and cry a mutiny [Exit RODERIGO]

Nay, good lieutenant! God's will, gentlemen!

Help, ho! Lieutenant! sir! Montano! sir!

Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch indeed!

[Bell rings]

Who's that that rings the bell? Diablo, ho!

The town will rise God's will! lieutenant, hold!

You will be sham'd for ever

Re-enter OTHELLO and Attendants

Oth What is the matter here? 165

Mon 'Zounds! I bleed still, I am hurt to the death.

Oth Hold, for your lives!

Iago Hold, ho, lieutenant! Sir! Montano!

gentlemen! 168

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold! the general speaks to you, hold for shame!

Oth Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites? 173 For Christian shame put by this barbarous brawl,

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light, he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle 177
From her propriety What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving, Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge
thee 180

Iago I do not know, friends all but now,
even now,

In quarter and in terms like bride and groom Devesting them for bed, and then, but now,—
As if some planet had unwitting men,— 184
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds,
And would in action glorious I had lost 188
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil, 192

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure what's the matter,
That you unlance your reputation thus 196
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your officer, Iago, can inform you, 200 While I spare speech, which something now offends me,

Of all that I do know, nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice, 204
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assaults us

Oth Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
And passion, having my best judgment collied,
Assays to lead the way If I once stir, 209
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on, 212
And he that is approv'd in this offence, Though he had twinn'd with me—both at a birth—

Shall lose me What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, 216
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
Is monstrous. Iago, who began't?

Mon If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office, Thou dost deliver more or less than truth, 221
Thou art no soldier

Iago Touch me not so near,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio, 224

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong him Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,

There comes a fellow crying out for help, 228
And Cassio following with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause, Myself the crying fellow did pursue, 232

Lest by his clamour, as it so fell out,
The town might fall in fright, he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which till to-night 237
I ne'er might say before When I came back,—
For this was brief,—I found them close together,
At blow and thrust, even as again they were 240
When you yourself did part them

More of this matter can I not report
But men are men, the best sometimes forget Though Cassio did some little wrong to him, 244
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet, surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass

Oth I know, Iago, 248
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio Cassio, I love thee,
But never more be officer of mine

Enter DESDEMONA, attended

Look! if my gentle love be not rais'd up, 252
[To CASSIO] I'll make thee an example

Des What's the matter?

Oth All's well now, sweeting, come away to bed

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon
Lead him off [MONTANO is led off]
Iago, look with care about the town, 257
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted

Come, Desdemona, 'tis the soldiers' life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife

[Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO]

Iago What! are you hurt, lieutenant? 261

Cas Ay; past all surgery

Iago Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas Reputation, reputation, reputation! O!
I have lost my reputation I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound, there is more offence in that than in reputation Reputation is an idle and most false imposition, oft got without merit, and lost without deserving you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser What! man, there are ways to recover the general again, you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice, even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affront an imperious hon.
Sue to him again, and he is yours 279

Cas I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer, Drunk!
and speak parrot! and squabble, swagger, swear, and discourse fustian with one's own shadow!

O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you? 288

Cas I know not

Iago Is't possible?

Cas I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly, a quarrel, but nothing wherefore O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains, that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts 296

Iago Why, but you are now well enough, how came you thus recovered?

Cas It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath, one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself 302

Iago Come, you are too severe a moraliser
As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen, but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good 307

Cas I will ask him for my place again, he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all To be now a-sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblessed and the ingredient is a devil 314

Iago Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used, exclaim no more against it And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you 318

Cas I have well approved it, sir I drunk!

Iago You or any man living may be drunk at some time, man I'll tell you what you shall do Our general's wife is now the general I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces confess yourself freely to her, importune her, she'll help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter, and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before 334

Cas You advise me well.

Iago I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness. 337

Cas I think it freely, and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here 341

Iago You are in the right Good night, lieutenant, I must to the watch.

Cas Good night, honest Iago! [Exit.]

Iago And what's he then that says I play the villain? 345

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probal to thinking and indeed the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy 348

The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit, she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements And then for her To win the Moor, were't to renounce his baptism, 352

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,
His soul is so enfeet'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god 356
With his weak function How am I then a villain
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will the blackest sins put on, 360
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now, for while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, 364 I'll pour this pestilence into his ear
That she repeats him for her body's lust,
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor 368
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all

Re-enter RODERIGO

How now, Roderigo!

Rod I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry My money is almost spent I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled, and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains, and so, with no money at all and a little more wit return again to Venice

Iago How poor are they that have no patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? 380
Thou know'st we work by wit and not by witchcraft,

And wit depends on dilatory time
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashiered
Cassio 384

Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe Content thyself awhile By the mass, 'tis morning; Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee, go where thou art billeted 389
Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter Nay, get thee gone [Exit RODERIGO] Two things are to be done,

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress,
I'll set her on, 393

Myself the while to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife ay, that's the way 396
Dull not device by coldness and delay [Exit]

ACT III

SCENE I.—Cyprus Before the Castle.

Enter CASSIO, and some Musicians

Cas Masters, play here, I will content your pains,
Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, general.' [Music.]

Enter Clown

Clo Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak 't' the nose thus?

First Mus How, sir, how? 5

Clo Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments?

First Mus Ay, marry, are they, sir

Clo O! thereby hangs a tale 8

First Mus Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know But, masters, here's money for you, and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it 14

First Mus Well, sir, we will not

Clo If you have any music that may not be heard, to us again, but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care 18

First Mus We have none such, sir

Clo Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away Go, vanish into air, away! 21

[Exeunt Musicians]

Cas Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo No, I hear not your honest friend, I hear you. 24

Cas Prthee, keep up thy quillets There's a poor piece of gold for thee If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech wilt thou do this? 29

Clo She is stirring, sir if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her

Cas Do, good my friend [Exit Clown]

Enter IAGO

In happy time, Iago 32

Iago You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas Why, no, the day had broke Before we parted I have made bold, Iago To send in to your wife, my suit to her 36 Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access

Iago I'll send her to you presently, And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business May be more free 41

Cas I humbly thank you for't [Exit IAGO] I never knew A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA

Emil Good morrow, good lieutenant I am sorry 44

For your displeasure, but all will soon be well. The general and his wife are talking of it, And she speaks for you stoutly the Moor replies That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus 48 And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom

He might not but refuse you, but he protests he loves you,

And needs no other suitor but his likings To take the safest occasion by the front 52 To bring you in again.

Cas Yet, I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done,

Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone

Emil Pray you, come in 56

I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely

Cas I am much bound to you [Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Room in the Castle

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen

Oth These letters give, Iago, to the pilot, And by him do my duties to the senate, That done, I will be walking on the works, Repair there to me

Iago Well, my good lord, I'll do't 4

Oth This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see't?

Gent We'll wait upon your lordship [Exeunt]

SCENE III — Before the Castle

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA

Des Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy behalf

Emil Good madam, do I warrant it grieves my husband,

As if the case were his 4

Des O! that's an honest fellow Do not doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were

Cas Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, 8 He's never anything but your true servant

Des I know't, I thank you. You do love my lord,

You have known him long, and be you well assur'd

He shall in strangeness stand no further off 12 Than in a politic distance

Cas Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long,

Or feed upon such nice and watrish diet,

Or breed itself so out of circumstance, 16 That, I being absent and my place supplied,

My general will forget my love and service

Des Do not doubt that, before Emilia here I give thee warrant of thy place Assure thee, 20 If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it

To the last article, my lord shall never rest, I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience,

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift, 24 I'll intermingle every thing he does

With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio, For thy solicitor shall rather die

Than give thy cause away 28

Enter OTHELLO, and IAGO at a distance

Emil Madam, here comes my lord

Cas Madam, I'll take my leave

Des Why, stay, and hear me speak

Cas Madam, not now, I am very ill at ease, Unfit for mine own purposes. 33

Des Well, do your discretion. [Exit CASSIO]

Iago Ha! I like not that.
Oth What dost thou say?
Iago Nothing, my lord or if—I know not what. 36
Oth Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming
Oth I do believe 'twas he. 40
Des How now, my lord!
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure
Oth Who is't you mean? 44
Des Why, your lieutenant, Cassio Good my lord,
If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take,
For if he be not one that truly loves you, 48
That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face
I prithee call him back.
Oth Went he hence now?
Des Ay, sooth, so humbled, 52
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth Not now, sweet Desdemona, some other time
Des But shall't be shortly?
Oth The sooner, sweet, for you. 56
Des Shall't be to-night at supper?
Oth No, not to-night.
Des To-morrow dinner then?
Oth I shall not dine at home,
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des Why then, to-morrow night, or Tuesday morn, 60
On Tuesday noon, or night, on Wednesday morn
I prithee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days in faith, he's penitent,
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,— Save that they say, the wars must make examples 65
Out of their best,—is not almost a fault
To incur a private check. When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello I wonder in my soul, 68
What you could ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you, and so many a time,
When I have spoke of you disparagingly, 72
Hath ta'en your part, to have so much to do To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much—Oth Prithee, no more, let him come when he will,
I will deny thee nothing
Des Why, this is not a boon, 76
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person, nay, when I have a suit 80
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth I will deny thee nothing
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, 84
To leave me but a little to myself
Des Shall I deny you? no farewell, my lord.
Oth Farewell, my Desdemona I'll come to thee straight Des Emilia, come Be as your fancies teach you, 88 Whate'er you be, I am obedient [Exit, with EMILIA.]
Oth Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again 92
Iago My noble lord,—
Oth What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady, Know of your love?
Oth He did, from first to last why dost thou ask? 96
Iago But for a satisfaction of my thought,
No further harm
Oth Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago I did not think he had been acquainted with her Oth O! yes, and went between us very oft Iago Indeed! 100
Oth Indeed! ay, indeed, discern'st thou aught in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago Honest, my lord?
Oth Honest! ay, honest
Iago My lord, for aught I know 104
Oth What dost thou think?
Iago Think, my lord!
Oth Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown Thou dost mean something 108
I heard thee say but now, thou lik'dst not that,
When Cassio left my wife, what didst not like?
And when I told thee he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou criest, 'Indeed!' 112
And didst contract and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought 116
Iago My lord, you know I love you Oth I think thou dost,
And, for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more, 120
For such things in a false disloyal knave Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just They are close delations, working from the heart
That passion cannot rule
Iago For Michael Cassio, 124
I dare be sworn I think that he is honest
Oth I think so too
Iago Men should be what they seem,

Or those that be not, would they might seem none!
Oth Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man. 129 Oth Nay, yet there's more in this
 I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thoughts,
 As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts 132
 The worst of words
Iago Good my lord, pardon me,
 Though I am bound to every act of duty,
 I am not bound to that all slaves are free to Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false, 136
 As where's that palace whereinto foul things Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure
 But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law days, and in session sit 140
 With meditations lawful?
Oth Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago
 If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
 A stranger to thy thoughts
Iago I do beseech you, 144
 Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,—
 As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
 To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not,—that your wisdom yet, 148
 From one that so imperfectly conceits, Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble
 Out of his scattering and unsure observance
 It were not for your quiet nor your good, 152
 Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
 To let you know my thoughts
Oth What dost thou mean?
Iago Good name in man and woman, dear
 my lord,
 Is the immediate jewel of their souls 156 Who steals my purse steals trash, 'tis something, nothing,
 'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands,
 But he that filches from me my good name
 Robs me of that which not enriches him, 160
 And makes me poor indeed
Oth By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts Iago You cannot, if my heart were in your
 hand,
 Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody 164
Oth Ha!
Iago O! beware, my lord, of jealousy,
 It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
 The meat it feeds on, that cuckold lives in bliss
 Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger,
 But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er 169 Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet soundly loves!
Oth O misery!
Iago Poor and content is rich, and rich enough, 172
 But riches fineless is as poor as winter

To him that ever fears he shall be poor Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend From jealousy!
Oth Why, why is this? 176
 Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
 To follow still the changes of the moon
 With fresh suspicions? No, to be once in doubt Is once to be resolved. Exchange me for a goat
 When I shall turn the business of my soul 181
 To such exsufficate and blown surmises, Matching thy inference 'Tis not to make me jealous
 To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company 184
 Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well, Where virtue is, these are more virtuous
 Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
 The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt, 188
 For she had eyes, and chose me No, Iago, I'll see before I doubt, when I doubt, prove,
 And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
 Away at once with love or jealousy! 192 Iago I am glad of it, for now I shall have reason
 To show the love and duty that I bear you
 With franker spirit, therefore, as I am bound, Receive it from me, I speak not yet of proof 196
 Look to your wife, observe her well with Cassio, Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure
 I would not have your free and noble nature
 Out of self-bounty be abus'd, look to't 200
 I know our country disposition well,
 In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks They dare not show their husbands, their best conscience
 Is not to leave't undone, but keep't unknown
Oth Dost thou say so? 205 Iago She did deceive her father, marrying
 you,
 And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks
 She lov'd them most Oth And so she did
Iago Why, go to, then, 208
 She that so young could give out such a seeming,
 To seal her father's eyes up close as oak,
 He thought 'twas witchcraft, but I am much to blame,
 I humbly do beseech you of your pardon 212
 For too much loving you.
Oth I am bound to thee for ever Iago I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago I faith, I fear it has.
 I hope you will consider what is spoke 216 Comes from my love But, I do see you're mov'd,
 I am to pray you not to strain my speech
 To grosser issues nor to larger reach Than to suspicion. 220
Oth I will not.
Iago Should you do so, my lord,
 My speech should fall into such vile success As my thoughts are not at. Cassio's my worthy friend—

My lord, I see you're mov'd

Oth No, not much mov'd 224
I do not think but Desdemona's honest

Iago Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth And, yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago Ay, there's the point as, to be bold with you, 228

Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends,
Foh! one may smell in such, a will most rank,
Foul disproportion thoughts unnatural 233
But pardon me, I do not in position Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment, 236
May fail to match you with her country forms
And happily repent

Oth Farewell, farewell
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more,
Set on thy wife to observe Leave me, Iago 240

Iago My lord, I take my leave [Going]

Oth Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds

Iago [Returning] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour 244

To scan this thing no further, leave it to time
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,
For, sure he fills it up with great ability,
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile, 248
You shall by that perceive him and his means Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity,
Much will be seen in that In the mean time, 252
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
As worthy cause I have to fear I am,

And hold her free, I do beseech your honour
Oth Fear not my government 256

Iago I once more take my leave [Exit]

Oth This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings, if I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings, 261

I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have, or, for I am declin'd 265
Into the vale of years—yet that's not much—She's gone, I am abus'd, and my relief
Must be to loathe her O curse of marriage! 268
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love 272 For others' uses Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones,

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base,
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death
Even then this forked plague is fated to us 276
When we do quicken.

Look! where she comes.
If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.

I'll not believe it

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Des How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner and the generous islanders 280

By you invited, do attend your presence

Oth I am to blame

Des Why do you speak so faintly?

Are you not well?

Oth I have a pain upon my forehead here 284

Des Faith, that's with watching, 'twill away again

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour

It will be well

Oth Your napkin is too little

[She drops her handkerchief]

Let it alone Come, I'll go in with you 288

Des I am very sorry that you are not well

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA]

Emil I am glad I have found this napkin,
This was her first remembrance from the Moor,
My wayward husband hath a hundred times 292
Wood'd me to steal it, but she so loves the token,
For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give't Iago 297
What he will do with it heaven knows, not I,
I nothing but to please his fantasy

Enter IAGO

Iago How now! what do you here alone? 300

Emil Do not you chide I have a thing for you

Iago A thing for me? It is a common thing—

Emil Ha!

Iago To have a foolish wife 304

Emil O! is that all? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief?

Iago What handkerchief?

Emil What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona

That which so often you did bid me steal 309

Iago Hast stol'n it from her?

Emil No faith, she let it drop by negligence,

And to the advantage, I, being there, took't up

Look, here it is

Iago A good wench, give it me 313

Emil What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?

Iago Why, what's that to you? [Snatches it]

Emil If it be not for some purpose of import 317

Give't me again, poor lady! she'll run mad

When she shall lack it

Iago Be not acknown on't, I have use for it. 320

Go, leave me [Exit EMILIA]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,

And let him find it, trifles light as air

Are to the jealous confirmations strong 324

As proofs of holy writ, this may do something

The Moor already changes with my poison

Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,

Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But with a little act upon the blood, 329 Burn like the mines of sulphur I did say so Look! where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO

Nor poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, 332
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday

Oth Ha! ha! false to me?

Iago Why, how now, general! no more of that

Oth Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack, 336

I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd Than but to know't a little

Iago How now, my lord!

Oth What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust? 339

I saw't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me,
I slept the next night well, was free and merry,
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips,
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know't and he's not robb'd at all

Iago I am sorry to hear this 345

Oth I had been nappy, if the general camp, Pioners and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known O! now, for ever 348
Farewell the tranquil mind, farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill 352 trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O you mortal engines whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counter- 357

feit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago Is it possible, my lord?

Oth Villain, be sure thou prove my love a 360

vohore,
Be sure of it, give me the ocular proof,
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
Than answer my wak'd wrath

Iago Is't come to this?

Oth Make me to see't, or, at the least, so 365 prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on, or woe upon thy life!

Iago My noble lord,— 368

Oth If thou dost slander her and torture me,
Never pray more, abandon all remorse,
On horror's head horrors accumulate,
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth 372

amaz'd,
For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that

Iago O grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? have you a soul or sense?

God be wi' you, take mine office O wretched 376

fool!
That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice,

O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O 380

world!

To be direct and honest is not safe
I thank you for this profit, and, from hence 380

I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence

Oth Nay, stay, thou shouldst be honest.
Iago I should be wise, for honesty's a fool, 384

And loses that it works for

Oth By the world, 384

I think my wife be honest and think she is not,
I think that thou art just and think thou art 388

not

I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as 388 fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black 388

As mine own face If there be cords or knives, Poison or fire or suffocating streams, 392

I'll not endure it Would I were satisfied!
Iago I see, sir, you are eaten up with pas- 392

sion.
I do repent me that I put it to you
You would be satisfied?

Oth Would! nay, I will Iago And may, but how? how satisfied, my 396

lord?
Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on, 396

Behold her tupp'd?
Oth Death and damnation! O! 399

Iago It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect, damn them 400

then,
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster 400

More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?

It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,

As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross 405

As ignorance made drunk, but yet, I say,
If imputation, and strong circumstances,

Which lead directly to the door of truth, 408

Will give you satisfaction, you may have it Oth Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago I do not like the office,
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far, 412

Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on I lay with Cassio lately,

And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep 416

There are a kind of men so loose of soul
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs,
One of this kind is Cassio

In sleep I heard him say, 'Sweet Desdemona, 420

Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!'

And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my 424

hand,
Cry, 'O, sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard,

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots, 424

That grew upon my lips, then laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd, and then

Cried, 'Cursed fate, that giveth thee to the Moor!'

Oth O monstrous! monstrous!
Iago Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth But this denoted a foregone conclusion
'Tis a shrewd doubt though it be but a dream

Iago And this may help to thicken other 428 proofs

That do demonstrate thinly

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces 432

Iago Nay, but be wise, yet we see nothing done,

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one, 'twas my first gift.

Iago I know not that, but such a handkerchief— 437

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day See Cassio wipe his beard with

Oth. If it be that,— 440

Iago If it be that, or any that was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs

Oth. O! that the slave had forty thousand lives,

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge 444
Now do I see 'tis true Look here, Iago,

All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven
'Tis gone 447

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell!
Yield up, O love! thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate. Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues!

Iago Yet be content

Oth. O! blood, blood, blood! 452

Iago Patience, I say, your mind, perhaps, may change

Oth. Never, Iago Like to the Pontick sea, Whose icy current and compulsive course

Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on 456
To the Propontic and the Hellespont,

Even so my bloody thoughts with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,

Till that a capable and wide revenge 460
Swallow them up

Now, by yond marble heaven,

In the due reverence of a sacred vow

I here engage my words

Iago Do not rise yet [Kneels]

Witness, you ever-burning lights above! 464

You elements that clip us round about!

Witness, that here Iago doth give up

The execution of his wit, hands, heart,

To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him com- 468

mand,

And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody business ever

Oth. I greet thy love,

Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,

And will upon the instant put thee to't 472

Within these three days let me hear thee say

That Cassio's not alive

Iago My friend is dead, 'tis done at your request

But let her live

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!

Come, go with me apart, I will withdraw 477

To furnish me with some swift means of death

For the fair devil Now art thou my lieutenant

Iago I am your own for ever [Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Before the Castle

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown

Des Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo I dare not say he lies any where.

Des Why, man? 4

Clo He is a soldier, and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing

Des Go to, where lodges he?

Clo To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie 9

Des Can anything be made of this?

Clo I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat. 13

Des Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo I will catechize the world for him, that is, make questions, and by them answer — 17

Des Seek him, bid him come hither, tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well 20

Clo To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it [Exit]

Des Where should I lose that handkerchief,

Emilia? 24

Emil I know not, madam

Des Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of cruzadoes, and but my noble Moor

Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness 28

As jealous creatures are, it were enough

To put him to ill thinking

Emil Is he not jealous?

Des Who? he? I think the sun where he was born

Drew all such humours from him

Emil Look! where he comes

Des I will not leave him now till Cassio 33

Be call'd to him

Enter OTHELLO

How is't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well my good lady [Aside] O' hardness to dissemble

How do you, Desdemona?

Des Well, my good lord

Oth. Give me your hand This hand is moist,

my lady 37

Des It yet has felt no age nor known no

sorrow

Oth. This argues fruntfulness and liberal

heart,

Hot, hot, and moist, this hand of yours re- 40

quires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,

Much castigation, exercise devout,

For here's a young and sweating devil here,

That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand, 44

A frank one.

Des You may, indeed, say so,

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart

Oth. A liberal hand, the hearts of old gave hands,

But our new heraldry is hands not hearts 48

Des I cannot speak of this Come now, your promise

Oth What promise, chuck?

Des I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me 52

Lend me thy handkerchief

Des Here, my lord

Oth That which I gave you

Des I have it not about me

Oth Not?

Des No, indeed, my lord

Oth That is a fault

That handkerchief 56

Did an Egyptian to my mother give,

She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people, she told her, while she kept it,

'Twould make her amiable and subdue my

father 60

Entirely to her love, but if she lost it

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye

Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt

After new fancies She dying gave it me, 64

And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,

To give it her I did so and take heed on't,

Make it a darling like your precious eye,

To lose't or give't away, were such perdition 68

As nothing else could match

Des Is't possible?

Oth 'Tis true, there's magic in the web of

it,

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to course two hundred compasses, 72

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work,

The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,

And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful

Conserv'd of maidens' hearts

Des Indeed! is't true? 76

Oth Most veritable, therefore look to't well

Des Then would to heaven that I had never seen it!

Oth Ha! wherefore?

Des Why do you speak so startlingly and rash? 80

Oth Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out o'

the way?

Des Heaven bless us!

Oth Say you?

Des It is not lost but what an if it were? 84

Oth How!

Des I say, it is not lost.

Oth Fetch't, let me see't

Des Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now

This is a trick to put me from my suit

Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again 88

Oth Fetch me the handkerchief, my mind misgives

Des Come, come,

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth The handkerchief!

Des I pray, talk me of Cassio 92

Oth The handkerchief!

Des A man that all his time

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,

Shar'd dangers with you,—

Oth The handkerchief!

Des In sooth you are to blame 96

Oth Away! [Exit

Emil Is not this man jealous?

Des I ne'er saw this before

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief, 100

I am most unhappy in the loss of it

Emil 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man,

They are all but stomachs, and we all but food,

They eat us hungerly, and when they are full

They belch us Look you! Cassio and my husband. 105

Enter IAGO and CASSIO

Iago There is no other way, 'tis she must do t

And, lo! the happiness go and importune her

Des How now, good Cassio! what's the news

with you? 108

Cas Madam, my former suit I do beseech

you

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love

Whom I with all the office of my heart 11

Entirely honour, I would not be delay'd

If my offence be of such mortal kind

That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity, 116

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit,

So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,

And shut myself up in some other course 120

To fortune's aims

Des Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio!

My advocacy is not now in tune,

My lord is not my lord nor should I know him,

Were he in favour as in humour alter'd. 124

So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best

And stood within the blank of his displeasure

For my free speech. You must awhile be patient, 128

What I can do I will, and more I will

Than for myself I dare let that suffice you.

Iago Is my lord angry?

Emil He went hence but now,

And, certainly in strange unquietness 132

Iago Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm 135

Puff'd his own brother, and can he be angry?

Something of moment then, I will go meet him,

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry

Des I prithee, do so [Exit IAGO] Something, sure, of state,

Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him, 141

Hath puddled his clear spirit, and, in such cases

Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object 'Tis even so,
 For let our finger ache, and t' induces ¹⁴⁵
 Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense
 Of pain Nay, we must think men are not gods, Nor of them look for such observancy ¹⁴⁸
 As fits the bridal Beshrew me much, Emilia,
 I was—unhandsome warrior as I am—Arraigning his unkindness with my soul,
 But now I find I had suborn'd the witness, ¹⁵²
 And he's indicted falsely

Emil Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,
 And no conception, nor no jealous toy
 Concerning you ¹⁵⁶
 Des Alas the day! I never gave him cause Emil But jealous souls will not be answer'd so,

They are not ever jealous for the cause,
 But jealous for they are jealous, 'tis a monster Begot upon itself, born on itself ¹⁶¹ Des Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil Lady, amen
 Des I will go seek him Cassio, walk hereabout, ¹⁶⁴

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit
 And seek to effect it to my uttermost
 Cas I humbly thank your ladyship

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA]

Enter BIANCA

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!
 Cas What make you from home?
 How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? ¹⁶⁹
 I faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house Bian And I was going to your lodging,
 Cassio
 What! keep a week away? seven days and nights? ¹⁷²
 Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent
 hours,
 More tedious than the dial eight score times?
 O weary reckoning!

Cas Pardon me, Bianca,
 I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd, ¹⁷⁶
 But I shall, in a more continue time,
 Strike off this score of absence Sweet Bianca [Giving her DESDEMONA's handkerchief]
 Take me this work out.

Bian O Cassio! whence came this?
 This is some token from a newer friend, ¹⁸⁰
 To the felt absence now I feel a cause, Is't come to this? Well, well

Cas Go to woman!
 Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
 From whence you have them You are jealous now ¹⁸⁴
 That this is from some mistress, some remembrance

No, in good troth, Bianca.
 Bian Why, whose is it?
 Cas I know not, sweet, I found it in my chamber

I like the work well, ere it be demanded,— ¹⁸⁸
 As like enough it will,—I'd have it copied,

Take it and do't, and leave me for this time.

Bian Leave you! wherefore?

Cas I do attend here on the general, ¹⁹²
 And think it no addition nor my wish
 To have him see me woman'd

Bian Why, I pray you?

Cas Not that I love you not.

Bian But that you do not love me

I pray you, bring me on the way a little ¹⁹⁶

And say if I shall see you soon at night

Cas 'Tis but a little way that I can bring

you,

For I attend here, but I'll see you soon

Bian 'Tis very good, I must be circumstanc'd. [Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Cyprus Before the Castle

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO

Iago Will you think so?

Oth Think so, Iago!

Iago What?

To kiss in private?

Oth An unauthoriz'd kiss

Iago Or to be naked with her friend a-bed

An hour or more, not meaning any harm? ⁴

Oth Naked a-bed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven ⁸

Iago If they do nothing 'tis a venial ship,

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth What then?

Iago Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord, and,

being hers, ¹²

She may, I think, bestow't on any man

Oth She is protectress of her honour too,

May she give that?

Iago Her honour is an essence that's not seen, ¹⁶

They have it very oft that have it not

But for the handkerchief,—

Oth By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it —

Thou said'st,—O! it comes o'er my memory, ²⁰

As doth the raven o'er the infected house,

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief

Iago Ay, what of that?

Oth That's not so good now

Iago What,

If I had said I had seen him do you wrong? ²⁴

Or heard him say, as knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate suit,

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose ²⁸

But they must blab

Oth Hath he said any thing?

Iago He hath, my lord, but be you well assur'd,

No more than he'll unsweat

Oth What hath he said?

Iago Faith, that he did—I know not what he did ³²

Oth. What? what?

Iago Lie—
Oth With her?
Iago With her, on her, what you will.
Oth Lie with her! lie on her! We say, lie on her, when they belie her. Lie with her! that's tulsome. Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief! To confess, and be hanged for his labour. First, to be hanged, and then to confess. I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus. Pish! Noses, ears, and lips. Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil! [Falls in a trance]
Iago Work on, 45
 My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught,
 And many worthy and chaste dames even thus,
 All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord!
 My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter CASSIO

How now, Cassio!
Cas What's the matter?
Iago My lord is fallen into an epilepsy,
 This is his second fit, he had one yesterday 52
Cas Rub him about the temples Iago No, forbear,
 The lethargy must have his quiet course,
 If not he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look! he stirs,
 Do you withdraw yourself a little while, 57
 He will recover straight, when he is gone,
 I would on great occasion speak with you.
 [Exit CASSIO]
 How is it, general? have you not hurt your head? 60
Oth Dost thou mock me?
Iago I mock you! no, by heaven
 Would you would bear your fortune like a man!
Oth A horned man's a monster and a beast
Iago There's many a beast then, in a populous city, 64
 And many a civil monster
Oth Did he confess it?
Iago Good sir, be a man
 Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd
 May draw with you, there's millions now alive 68
 That nightly he in those improper beds
 Which they dare swear peculiar, your case is better
 O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
 To lip a wanton in a secure couch, 72
 And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know,
 And knowing what I am I know what she shall be Oth O! thou art wise, 'tis certain.
Iago Stand you awhile apart,
 Confine yourself but in a patient list 76
 Whilst you were here overwhelmed with your grief,—
 A passion most unsuiting such a man,— Cassio came hither. I shifted him away,
 And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy, 80
 Bade him anon return and here speak with me,

The which he promiss'd. Do but encave yourself,
 And mark the fliers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
 That dwell in every region of his face, 84
 For I will make him tell the tale anew, Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is again to cope your wife
 I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience, Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, 89
 And nothing of a man.
Oth Dost thou hear, Iago?
 I will be found most cunning in my patience,
 But—dost thou hear?—most bloody Iago That's not amiss, 92
 But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
 [OTHELLO goes apart]
 Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
 A housewife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes, it is a creature
 That dotes on Cassio, as 'tis the strumpet's plague 97
 To beguile man, and be beguil'd by one
 He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain From the excess of laughter. Here he comes

Re-enter CASSIO

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad, 101
 And his unbookish jealousy must construe
 Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant? 104 Cas The worse that you give me the addition Whose want even kills me
Iago Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't [Speaking lower] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, 108
 How quickly should you speed!
Cas Alas! poor cattiff!
Oth Look! how he laughs already!
Iago I never knew woman love man so Cas Alas! poor rogue, I think, I' faith, she loves me 112
Oth Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.
Iago Do you hear, Cassio?
Oth Now he importunes him
 To tell it o'er go to, well said, well said Iago She gives it out that you shall marry her, 116
 Do you intend it?
Cas Ha, ha, ha!
Oth Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph? 119
Cas I marry her! what? a customer? I prithee, bear some charity to my wit, do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.
Iago Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her 125
Cas Prithee, say true
Iago I am a very villain else
Oth Have you scored me? Well. 128

Cas This is the monkey's own giving out she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise

Oth Iago beckons me, now he begins the story 133

Cas She was here even now, she haunts me in every place I was the other day talking on the sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither come this bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck,—

Oth Crying, 'O dear Cassio!' as it were, his gesture imports it 140

Cas So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me, so hailes and pulls me, ha, ha, ha!

Oth Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber O! I see that nose of yours, but not the dog I shall throw it to 145

Cas Well, I must leave her company

Iago Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one 149

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian Let the devil and his dam haunt you!

What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work! A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some munn's token, and I must take out the work! There, give it your hobby-horse, wheresoever you had it I'll take out no work on't.

Cas How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now! 161

Oth By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian An you'll come to supper to-night, you may, an you will not, come when you are next prepared for [Exit]

Iago After her, after her

Cas Faith, I must, she'll rail in the street else. 169

Iago Will you sup there?

Cas Faith, I intend so

Iago Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you. 173

Cas Prthee, come, will you?

Iago Go to, say no more [Exit CASSIO]

Oth [Advancing] How shall I murder him, Iago? 177

Iago Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth O! Iago! 180

Iago And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth Was that mine?

Iago Yours, by this hand, and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore 185

Oth I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago Nay, you must forget that. 188

Oth Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone, I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature, she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks

Iago Nay, that's not your way 195

Oth Hang her! I do but say what she is So delicate with her needle! An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear Of so high and plenteous wit and invention! 200

Iago She's the worse for all this

Oth O! a thousand, a thousand times And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago Ay, too gentle 204

Oth Nay, that's certain,—but yet the pity of it, Iago! O! Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend, for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody 209

Oth I will chop her into messes Cuckold me!

Iago O! 'tis foul in her 212

Oth With mine officer!

Iago That's fouler

Oth Get me some poison, Iago, this night I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago 218

Iago Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth Good, good, the justice of it pleases, very good.

Iago And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker, you shall hear more by midnight. 224

Oth Excellent good. [A trumpet within] What trumpet is that same?

Iago Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico, 228

Come from the duke, and see, your wife is with him

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants

Lod God save you, worthy general!

Oth With all my heart, sir

Lod The duke and senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a packet]

Oth I kiss the instrument of their pleasures [Opens the packet, and reads]

Des And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico? 232

Iago I am very glad to see you, signior, Welcome to Cyprus Lod I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago Lives, sir 236

Des Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord

An unkind breach, but you shall make all well.

Oth Are you sure of that?

Des My lord? 240

Oth This fail you not to do, as you will—

Lod He did not call, he's busy in the paper

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des A most unhappy one, I would do much To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio 245

Oth Fire and brimstone!

Des My lord?

Oth Are you wise?

Des What! is he angry?

Lod May be the letter mov'd him,
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government 249

Des Trust me, I am glad on't

Oth Indeed!

Des My lord?

Oth I am glad to see you mad

Des Why, sweet Othello?

Oth Devil! [Strikes her]

Des I have not deserved this 252

Lod My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw't 'tis very much,
Make her amends, she weeps

Oth O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile 257

Out of my sight!

Des I will not stay to offend you.

[Goes]

Lod Truly, an obedient lady,
I do beseech your lordship, call her back. 260

Oth Mistress!

Des My lord?

Oth What would you with her, sir?

Lod Who, I, my lord?

Oth Ay, you did wish that I would make her turn

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, 264

And turn again, and she can weep, sir, weep,

And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,

Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears

Concerning this, sir, O—well-painted passion!—

I am commanded home Get you away, 269

I'll send for you anon Sir, I obey the mandate,

And will return to Venice. Hence! avaunt!

[Exit DESDEMONA]

Cassio shall have my place And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together, 275

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus Goats and monkeys! [Exit]

Lod Is thus the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all-in-all sufficient? is this the noble nature

Whom passion could not shake? whose solid

virtue 277

The shot of accident nor dart of chance

Could neither graze nor pierce?

Iago He is much chang'd.

Lod Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain? 280

Iago He's that he is, I may not breathe my censure

What he might be, if, what he might, he is not,

I would to heaven he were!

Lod What! strike his wife!

Iago Faith, that was not so well, yet would

I knew 284

That stroke would prove the worst!

Lod Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me to speak, 288

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,

And his own courses will denote him so That I may save my speech Do but go after And mark how he continues 292

Lod I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — A Room in the Castle

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth You have seen nothing, then?

Emil Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect

Oth Yes, you have seen Cassio and her together

Emil But then I saw no harm, and then I heard 4

Each syllable that breath made up between them

Oth What! did they never whisper?

Emil Never, my lord.

Oth Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil Never

Oth To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing? 8

Emil Never, my lord

Oth That's strange

Emil I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest, 11

Lay down my soul at stake if you think other,

Remove your thought, it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true, 16

There's no man happy, the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander

Oth Bid her come hither, go.

[Exit EMILIA.]

She says enough, yet she's a simple bawd

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore, 20

A closet lock and key of villanous secrets,

And yet she'll kneel and pray, I have seen her

do't.

Re-enter EMILIA with DESDEMONA.

Des My lord, what is your will?

Oth Pray, chuck, come hither

Des What is your pleasure?

Oth Let me see your eyes, 24

Look in my face.

Des What horrible fancy's this?

Oth [To EMILIA.] Some of your function,

mistress,

Leave procreants alone and shut the door,

Cough or cry 'hem' if any body come, 28

Your mystery, your mystery, nay, dispatch.

[Exit EMILIA.]

Des Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words. 32

Oth Why, what art thou?

Des Yo' wife, my lord, your true

And loyal wife.

Oth Come, swear it, damn thyself,

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee, therefore be double-damn'd,

36

Swear thou art honest

Des Heaven doth truly know it
Oth Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.

Des To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?

Oth Ah! Desdemona, away, away, away!

Des Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
If haply you my father do suspect
An instrument of this your calling back, 44
Lay not your blame on me, if you have lost him, Why, I have lost him too

Oth Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction, had he rain'd
All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head, 48

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience, but, alas! to make me 52
The fixed figure for the time of scorn

To point his slow and moving finger at,
Yet could I bear that too, well, very well
But there, where I have garner'd up my heart,
Where either I must live or bear no life, 57
The fountain from the which my current runs Or else dries up, to be discarded thence!

Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads 60
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there, Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubim,
Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des I hope my noble lord esteems me honest 64

Oth O! ay, as summer flies are in the shambles, That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed!
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born 68

Des Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth Was this fair paper, this most goodly book, Made to write 'whore' upon? What committed!

Committed! O thou public commoner! 72

I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed!

Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon winks,
The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets 77
Is hush'd within the hollow mune of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed!

Impudent strumpet!

Des By heaven, you do me wrong 80
Oth Are not you a strumpet?

Des No, as I am a Christian.

If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none. 84

Oth What! not a whore?

Des No, as I shall be sav'd.

Oth Is it possible?

Des O! heaven forgive us

Oth I cry you mercy, then,

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice 88
That married with Othello. You, mistress,
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA

You, you, ay, you!
We have done our course, there's money for your pains 92

I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel [Exit

Emil Alas! what does this gentleman conceive?

How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des Faith, half asleep 96

Emil Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des With who?

Emil Why, with my lord, madam

Des Who is thy lord?

Emil He that is yours, sweet lady 100

Des I have none, do not talk to me, Emilia,

I cannot weep nor answer have I none,

But what should go by water. Prithee, to-night

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets remember

And call thy husband hither

Emil Here is a change indeed! 105

[Exit

Des 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick

The small'st opinion on my least misuse? 108

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO

Iago What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks, 112

He might have chid me so, for, in good faith,

I am a child to chiding.

Iago What's the matter, lady?

Emil Alas! Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd

her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,

As true hearts cannot bear 117

Des Am I that name, Iago?

Iago What name, fair lady?

Des Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Emil He call'd her whore, a beggar in his drink 120

Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago Why did he so?

Des I do not know, I am sure I am none such.

Iago Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day! 124

Emil Has she forsook so many noble matches,

Her father and her country and her friends,

To be call'd whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune
Iago Beshrew him for it! 128
 How comes this trick upon him?
Des. Nay, heaven doth know
Emil I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
 Some busy and insinuating rogue,
 Some cogging cozening slave, to get some office, 132
 Have not devis'd this slander, I'll be hang'd else
Iago Fie! there is no such man, it is impossible
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones! 136
 Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?
 What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?
 The Moor's abus'd by some most villanous knave,
 Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow O heaven! that such companions thou'dst unfold, 141
 And put in every honest hand a whip
 To lash the rascals naked through the world,
 Even from the east to the west!
Iago Speak within door 144
Emil O' fie upon them Some such squire he was
 That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
 And made you to suspect me with the Moor Iago You are a fool go to Des. O good Iago, 148
 What shall I do to win my lord again?
 Good friend, go to him, for, by this light of
 heaven,
 I know not how I lost him Here I kneel
 If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, 152
 Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,
 Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
 Delighted them in any other form,
 Or that I do not yet, and ever did, 156
 And ever will though he do shake me off
 To beggarly divorcement, love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much,
 And his unkindness may defeat my life, 160
 But never taint my love I cannot say 'whore'
 It does abhor me now I speak the word,
 To do the act that might the addition earn
 Not the world's mass of vanity could make me Iago I pray you be content, 'tis but his humour, 165
 The business of the state does him offence,
 And he does chide with you Des. If 'twere no other,— Iago 'Tis but so, I warrant. [Trumpets Hark! how these instruments summon to supper, 169
 The messengers of Venice stay the meat
 Go in, and weep not, all things shall be well [Exit DESDEMONA and EMILIA.
 Enter RODRIGO
 How now, Rodrigo! 172

Rod I do not find that thou dealest justly
 with me
Iago What in the contrary?
Rod Every day thou daigest me with some device, Iago, and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all conveniency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered 182
Iago Will you hear me, Roderigo?
Rod Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together Iago You charge me most unjustly 186 Rod With nought but truth I have wasted myself out of my means The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist, you have told me she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance, but I find none 193
Iago Well, go to, very well Rod Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man, nor 'tis not very well by this hand, I say, it is very scurvy, and begun to find myself fobbed in it Iago Very well 198
Rod I tell you 'tis not very well I will make myself known to Desdemona, if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation, if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you Iago You have said now 204
Rod Ay, and said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing Iago Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before Give me thy hand, Roderigo, thou hast taken against me a most just exception, but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair 212 Rod It hath not appeared Iago I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage, and valour, this night show it if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life Rod Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass? 224
Iago Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place Rod Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice 228 Iago O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident, wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio 233
Rod How do you mean, removing of him?
Iago Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place, knocking out his brains
Rod And that you would have me do? 237
Iago Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a night. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him, he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence,—which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,—you may take him at your pleasure, I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me, I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste about it. 250

Rod I will hear further reason for this Iago And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt

SCENE III —Another Room in the Castle

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants

Lod I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further

Oth O! pardon me, 'twill do me good to walk

Lod Madam, good night, I humbly thank your ladyship

Des Your honour is most welcome

Oth Will you walk, sir? 5

O! Desdemona,—

Des My lord?

Oth Get you to bed on the instant, I will be returned forthwith, dismiss your attendant there, look it be done 9

Des I will, my lord

[Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants

Emil How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did

Des He says he will return incontinent, 12
He hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bade me to dismiss you

Emil Dismiss me!

Des It was his bidding, therefore, good Emilia,

Gave me my nightly wearing, and adieu 16
We must not now displease him

Emil I would you had never seen him.

Des So would not I, my love doth so approve him,
That even his stubbornness, his checks and frowns,— 20

Prithce, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed

Des All's one Good faith! how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithce, shroud me 24
In one of those same sheets

Emil Come, come, you talk

Des My mother had a maid call'd Barbara. She was in love, and she lov'd prov'd mad And did forsake her, she had a song of 'willow,' 28

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it, that song to-night Will not go from my mind, I have much to do

But to go hang my head all at one side, 32
And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithce, dispatch.

Emil Shall I go fetch your night gown?

Des No, unpin me here

This Lodovico is a proper man

Emil A very handsome man 36

Des He speaks well

Emil I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip 40

Des The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree, Sing all a green willow

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee

Sing willow willow willow 44

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans

Sing willow willow willow

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones —

Lay by these — 48

Sing willow, willow willow

Prithce, hie thee, he'll come anon —

Sing all a green willow must be my garland

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve —

Nay, that's not next Hark! who is it that knocks? 5

Emil It is the wind

Des I call'd my love false love but what said he then? 56

Sing willow willow willow

If I court moe women you'll couch with moe men

So, get thee gone, good night Mine eyes do itch,

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil 'Tis neither here nor there

Des I have heard it said so O! these men, these men! 61

Dost thou in conscience think, tell me, Emilia, That there be women do abuse their husbands in such gross kind?

Emil There be some such, no question

Des Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world? 65

Emil Why, would not you?

Des No, by this heavenly light!

Emil Nor I neither by this heavenly light, I might do't as well i' the dark 68

Des Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil The world is a huge thing, 'tis a great price

For a small vice

Des In troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil In troth, I think I should, and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition but for the whole world, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't

Des Beshrew me if I would do such a wrong

For the whole world 80

Emil Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world, and having the world for your labour,

'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right 84

Des I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil Yes, a dozen, and as many to the vantage, as would store the world they played for 88

But I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fall Say that they slack their duties,
And pour our treasures into foreign laps,
Or else break out in peevish jealousies, 92
Throwing restraint upon us, or, say they strike us, Or scant our former having in despite,
Why, we have galls and though we have some grace,

Yet have we some revenge Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them, they see and smell, 97

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is, and doth affection breed it? 101
I think it doth, is't frailty that thus errs?
It is so too, and have not we affections,
Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? 104

Then, let them use us well, else let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us so Des Good night, good night, heaven mesuch usage send,

Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend! 108
[Exeunt]

ACT V

SCENE I.—Cyprus A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO

Iago Here, stand behind this bulk, straight will he come

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home
Quick, quick, fear nothing, I'll be at thy elbow
It makes us, or it mars us, think on that, 4
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod Be near at hand, I may miscarry in't.

Iago Here, at thy hand be bold, and take thy stand [Retires]

Rod I have no great devotion to the deed, 8
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons
'Tis but a man gone forth, my sword, he dies

Iago I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,

And he grows angry Now, whether he kill
Cassio, 12

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large

Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him, 16
As gifts to Desdemona,

It must not be if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life

That makes me ugly, and, besides, the Moor 20 May unfold me to him, there stand I in much peril.

No, he must die But so, I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait; 'tis he. Villain, thou diest! [Makes a pass at CASSIO]

Cas That thrust had been mine enemy indeed 24

But that my coat is better than thou know'st,
I will make proof of thine

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO]

Rod O! I am slain

[IAGO from behind wounds CASSIO in the leg, and exit

Cas I am maim'd for ever Help, ho! murder! murder! [Falls]

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance

Oth. The voice of Cassio Iago keeps his word

Rod O! villain that I am!

Oth It is e'en so 29

Cas O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth 'Tis he O brave Iago, honest and just!
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong, 32

Thou teachest me Mimon, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate hies, strumpet, I come!

Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted,

Thy bed lust-stain'd shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit]

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance

Cas What ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder! 37

Gra 'Tis some mischance, the cry is verdreful.

Cas O, help!

Lod Hark! 40

Rod O wretched villain!

Lod Two or three groan it is a heavy night,
These may be counterfeit, let's think't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help 44

Rod Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death

Lod Hark!

Re-enter IAGO, with a light

Gra Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago Who's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder? 48

Lod We do not know

Iago Did not you hear a cry?

Cas Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago What's the matter?

Gra This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod The same indeed, a very valiant fellow

Iago What are you here that cry so grievously? 53

Cas Iago? O! I am spoil'd, undone by villains!

Give me some help Iago O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this? 56

Cas I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away

Iago. O treacherous villains!

[To LODOVICO and GRATIANO] What are you there? come in, and give some help.

Rod. O! help me here. 60

Cas That's one of them
Iago O murderous slave! O villain!
 [Stabs RODERIGO
Rod O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!
Iago Kill men i' the dark! Where be these bloody thieves?
 How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!
 What may you be? are you of good or evil? 65
Lod As you shall prove us, praise us Iago Signior Lodovico?
Lod He, sir 68
Iago I cry you mercy Here's Cassio hurt by villains
Gra Cassio!
Iago How is it, brother?
Cas My leg is cut in two
Iago Marry heaven forbid, 72
 Light, gentlemen, I'll bind it with my shirt

Enter BIANCA

Bian What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?
Iago Who is't that cried!
Bian O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio! 76
 O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect
 Who they should be that have thus mangled you?
Cas No 80
Gra I am sorry to find you thus, I have been to seek you
Iago Lend me a garter So O! for a chair,
 To bear him easily hence!
Bian Alas! he faints! O Cassio, Cassio,
 Cassio! 84

Iago Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
 To be a party in this injury
 Patience awhile, good Cassio Come, come Lend me a light Know we thus face, or no? 88
 Alas! my friend and my dear countryman, Roderigo? no yes sure, O heaven! Roderigo

Gra What! of Venice?
Iago Even he, sir did you know him?
Gra Know him! ay 92
Iago Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon,
 These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
 That so neglected you

Gra I am glad to see you Iago How do you, Cassio? O! a chair, a chair! 96
Gra Roderigo! [A chair brought in Iago He, he, 'tis he.—O! that's well said, the chair

Some good men bear him carefully from hence,
 I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To BIANCA]
 For you, mistress, 100
 Save you your labour He that lies slain here,
 Cassio,

Was my dear friend What malice was between
 you?
Cas None in the world, nor do I know the
 man.

Iago [To BIANCA] What! look you pale? O! bear him out o' the air— 104
 [CASSIO and RODERIGO are borne off]

Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale,
 mistress?—
 Do you perceive the gashness of her eye?
 Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon
 Behold her well, I pray you, look upon her 108 Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will
 speak
 Though tongues were out of use

Enter EMILIA

Emil 'Las! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?
Iago Cassio hath here been set on in the dark 112
 By Roderigo and fellows that are 'scap'd
 He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead
Emil Alas! good gentleman, alas! good
 Cassio!
Iago This is the fruit of whoring Prithce,
 Emilia, 116
 Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.
 What! do you shake at that?
Bian He supp'd at my house, but I therefore shake not Iago O! did he so? I charge you, go with me.
Emil Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet! 121
Bian I am no strumpet, but of life as honest
 As you that thus abuse me
Emil As I! fie! fie upon thee!
Iago Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd 124
 Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale Emilia, run you to the citadel,
 And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd
 Will you go on afore? [Aside] This is the night
 That either makes me or fordoes me quite 129
 [Exeunt]

SCENE II—A Bedchamber in the Castle DES-DEMONA in bed asleep A light burning

Enter OTHELLO

Oth It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,
 Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!
 It is the cause Yet I'll not shed her blood,
 Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, 4
 And smooth as monumental alabaster
 Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
 Put out the light, and then put out the light
 If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, 8
 I can again thy former light restore,
 Should I repent me, but once put out thy light,
 Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
 I know not where is that Promethean heat 12
 That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,
 I cannot give it vital growth again,
 It needs must wither I'll smell it on the tree.

[Kisses her]

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade 16 Justice to break her sword! One more, one
 more
 Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, And love thee after One more, and thus the last
 So sweet was ne'er so fatal! I must weep, 20

But they are cruel tears, this sorrow's heavenly,
 It strikes where it doth love. She wakes Des Who's there? Othello?
Oth Ay, Desdemona.
Des Will you come to bed, my lord? 24
Oth Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?
Des Ay, my lord.
Oth If you bethink yourself of any crime
 Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
 Solicit for it straight 28 Des Alas! my lord, what may you mean by
 that?
Oth Well, do it, and be brief, I will walk by
 I would not kill thy unprepared spirit,
 No, heaven forbid! I would not kill thy soul.
Des Talk you of killing?
Oth Ay, I do
 Then heaven 33
 Have mercy on me!
Oth Amen! with all my heart Des If you say so, I hope you will not kill
 me
Oth Hum! 36
Des And yet I fear you, for you are fatal
 then When your eyes roll so Why I should fear I know not,
 Since guiltiness I know not, but yet I feel I fear Oth Think on thy sins
Des They are loves I bear to you. 40
Oth Ay, and for that thou diest Des That death's unnatural that kills for loving
 Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip?
 Some bloody passion shakes your very frame, 44
 These are portents, but yet, I hope, I hope
 They do not point on me
Oth Peace, and be still!
Des I will so What's the matter?
Oth That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee 48
 Thou gav'st to Cassio
Des No, by my life and soul!
 Send for the man and ask him
Oth Sweet soul, take heed,
 Take heed of perjury, thou'rt on thy death-bed
Des Ay, but not yet to die.
Oth Yes, presently, 52
 Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin,
 For to deny each article with oath
 Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception
 That I do groan withal Thou art to die 56 Des Then Lord have mercy on me!
Oth I say, amen.
Des And have you mercy too! I never did Offend you in my life, never lov'd Cassio
 But with such general warranty of heaven 60
 As I might love, I never gave him token.
Oth By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's
 hand
 O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
 And mak'st me call what I intend to do 64
 A murder, which I thought a sacrifice
 I saw the handkerchief
Des He found it then,
 I never gave it him. Send for him hither,

Let him confess a truth.

Oth He hath confess'd. 68
Des What, my lord?
Oth That he hath us'd thee
Des How? unlawfully?
Oth Ay
Des He will not say so
Oth No, his mouth is stopp'd
 Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't 72 Des O! my fear interprets What! is he
 dead?
Oth Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
 Had stomach for them all.
Des Alas! he is betray'd and I undone 76 Oth Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?
Des O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not!
Oth Down, strumpet!
Des Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night!
Oth Nay, if you strive,— 81
Des But half an hour!
Oth Being done, there is no pause
Des But while I say one prayer!
Oth It is too late [He smothers her] Emil [Within] My lord, my lord! what, ho!
 my lord, my lord! 84 Oth What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?
 I that am cruel am yet merciful,
 I would not have thee linger in thy pain.
 So, so
Emil [Within] What, ho! my lord, my lord!
Oth Who's there? 88
Emil [Within] O! good my lord, I would speak a word with you!
Oth Yes, 'tis Emilia by and by She's dead
 'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death,
 The noise was high. Ha! no more moving? 92 Still as the grave Shall she come in? Were't good?
 I think she stirs again no What's best to do?
 If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife
 My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife
 O, insupportable! O heavy hour! 97
 Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
 Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe
 Should yawn at alteration.
Emil [Within] I do beseech you 100
 That I may speak with you, O! good my lord.
Oth I had forgot thee O! come in, Emilia Soft, by and by let me the curtains draw
 Where art thou? [Unlocks the door]
 Enter EMILIA.
 What's the matter with thee now? 104
Emil O! my good lord, yonder's foul murder
 done
Oth What! now?
Emil But now, my lord.
Oth It is the very error of the moon,
 She comes more near the earth than she was wont, 108
 And makes men mad.
Emil Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian

Call'd Roderigo

Oth Roderigo kill'd!
And Cassio kill'd?

Emil No, Cassio is not kill'd 112 Oth Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des O! falsely, falsely murder'd Emil Alas! what cry is that?

Oth That! what? 116 Emil Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice

Help! Help, ho! help! O lady, speak again!

Sweet Desdemona! O! sweet mistress, speak

Des A guiltless death I die 120

Emil O! who hath done this deed?

Des Nobody, I myself, farewell

Commend me to my kind lord O! farewell!

[Dies]

Oth Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil Alas! who knows? 124

Oth You heard her say herself it was not I.

Emil She said so, I must needs report the truth

Oth She's like a liar gone to burning hell,

'Twas I that kill'd her

Emil O! the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil 129

Oth She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore

Emil Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil

Oth She was false as water

Emil Thou art rash as fire to say

That she was false O! she was heavenly true

Oth Cassio did tup her, ask thy husband

else

O! I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell

But that I did proceed upon just grounds 136

To this extremity Thy husband knew it all

Emil My husband!

Oth Thy husband.

Emil That she was false to wedlock? 140

Oth Ay, with Cassio Nay, had she been

true,

If heaven would make me such another world

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,

I'd not have sold her for it. 144

Emil My husband!

Oth Ay, 'twas he that told me first

An honest man he is, and hates the slime

That sticks on filthy deeds

Emil My husband!

Oth What needs this iteration, woman? I say thy husband 148

Emil O mistress! villany hath made mocks with love

My husband say that she was false!

Oth He, woman,

I say, thy husband dost understand the word?

My friend thy husband, honest, honest Iago 152

Emil If he say so, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth Ha! 156

Emil Do thy worst

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven

Than thou wast worthy her

Oth Peace! you were best.

Emil Thou hast not half the power to do me harm 160

As I have to be hurt O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—

I care not for thy sword, I'll make thee known,

Though I lost twenty lives Help! help, ho!

help! 164

The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder!

murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO, and Others

Mon What is the matter? How now, general!

Emil O! are you come, Iago? you have done

well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck

Gra What is the matter? 169

Emil Disprove this villain if thou be'st a

man

He says thou told'st him that his wife was false

I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain

Speak, for my heart is full 173

Iago I told him what I thought, and told no

more

Than what he found himself was apt and true

Emil But did you ever tell him she was false? 176

Iago I did

Emil You told a lie, an odious damned lie,

Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie

She false with Cassio! Did you say with Cassio?

Iago With Cassio, mistress Go to, charm your tongue 181

Emil I will not charm my tongue, I am bound to speak

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed

All O heavens forfend! 184

Emil And your reports have set the murder

on

Oth Nay, stare not, masters, it is true, indeed

Gra 'Tis a strange truth

Mon O monstrous act!

Emil Villany! villany! villany!

I think upon't, I think, I smell't, O villany! 189

I thought so then I'll kill myself for grief

O! villany, villany!

Iago What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home 192

Emil Good gentlemen, let me have leave to

speak

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home

Oth O! O! O! [Falls on the bed

Emil Nay, lay thee down and roar,

For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent 197

That e'er did lift up eye

Oth O! she was foul

I scarce did know you, uncle There lies your niece,

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd 200

I know this act shows terrible and grim

Gra Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation

Oth 'Tis pitiful, but yet Iago knows 208
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed, Cassio confess'd it
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love 212
Which I first gave her I saw it in his hand
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother

Emil O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago Come, hold your peace Emil 'Twill out, 'twill out, I hold my peace, sir? no, 217

No I will speak as liberal as the north,
Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak 220
Iago Be wise, and get you home

Emil I will not [IAGO offers to stab EMILIA] Fie!

Gra Your sword upon a woman?
Emil O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune and did give my husband,
For often, with a solemn earnestness, 225
More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago Villanous whore!
Emil She gave it Cassio! no, alas! I found
it, 228
And I did give't my husband

Iago Filth, thou heast!
Emil By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife?

Oth Are there no stones in heaven
But what serve for the thunder? Precious villain! [He runs at IAGO IAGO stabs EMILIA, and exit

Gra The woman falls sure he has kill'd his
wife

Emil Ay, ay, O! lay me by my mistress' side
Gra He's gone, but his wife's kill'd 236 Mon 'Tis a notorious villain Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor
Come, guard the door without, let him not pass, But kill him rather I'll after that same villain,
For 'tis a damned slave

[Exeunt MONTANO and GRATIANO
Oth I am not valiant neither, 241
But every puny whipster gets my sword
But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil What did thy song bode, lady? 244
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music —

Willow, willow, willow

Moor, she was chaste, she lov'd thee, cruel Moor,

So come my soul to bliss as I speak true, 249
So speaking as I think, I die, I die [Dies
Oth I have another weapon in this chamber,
It is a sword of Spain, the ice brook's temper
O! here it is Uncle, I must come forth 253 Gra [Within] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer Oth Look in upon me then, and speak with
me, 256
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee

Re-enter GRATIANO

Gra What is the matter?
Oth Behold! I have a weapon,
A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh I have seen the day, 260
That with this little arm, and thus good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop but O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now 264
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd,
Here is my journey's end here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail
Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear, 268
Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires Where should O'hello go?
Now how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt, 272

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven
And fiends will snatch at it Cold, cold, my girl!
Even like thy chastity
O! cursed, cursed slave Whip me, ye devils, 276
From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead! 280
Oh! Oh! Oh!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO carried in a chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner

Lod Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth That's he that was Othello, here I am Lod Where is that viper? bring the villain
forth 284

Oth I look down towards his feet, but that's a fable

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee
[Wounds IAGO]

Lod Wrench his sword from him
Iago I bleed, sir, but not kill'd

Oth I am not sorry neither, I'd have thee live, 288

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die
Lod O thou Othello! that wert once so good, Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth Why, any thing 292
An honourable murderer, if you will,
For nought did I in hate, but all in honour

Lod This wretch hath part confess'd his villany
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death? 296

Oth Ay
Cas Dear general, I never gave you cause
Oth I do believe it, and I ask your pardon
 Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil 300
 Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?
Iago Demand me nothing what you know,
 you know
 From this time forth I never will speak word
Lod What! not to pray?
Gra Torments will ope your lips 305
Oth Well, thou dost best Lod Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
 Which, as I think, you know not Here is a letter
 Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo, 308
 And here another, the one of them imports
 The death of Cassio to be undertook
 By Roderigo
Oth O villain!
Cas Most heathenish and most gross!
Lod Nowhere's another discontented paper, Found in his pocket too and thus, it seems, Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain,
 But that, belike, Iago in the interim 316
 Came in and satisfied him
Oth O the pernicious catiff!
 How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
 That was my wife's?
Cas I found it in my chamber,
 And he himself confess'd but even now 320
 That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
 Which wrought to his desire Oth O fool! fool! fool!
Cas There is besides in Roderigo's letter
 How he upbraids Iago that he made him 324 Brave me upon the watch, whereon it came
 That I was cast and even but now he spake, After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,
 Iago set him on. 328
Lod You must forsake this room and go
 with us,
 Your power and your command is taken off,
 And Cassio rules in Cyprus For this slave,
 If there be any cunning cruelty 332
 That can torment him much and hold him long,

It shall be his You shall close prisoner rest, Till that the nature of your fault be known To the Venetian state Come, bring him away Oth Soft you, a word or two before you go 337
 I have done the state some service, and they
 know't,
 No more of that I pray you, in your letters,
 When you shall these unlucky deeds relate, 340
 Speak of me as I am, nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice then, must you
 speak
 Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well, 343
 Of one no easily jealous, but, being wrought,
 Perplex'd in the extreme, of one whose hand,
 Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe, of one whose subdu'd
 eyes
 Albeit unused to the melting mood, 348
 Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
 Their med'cinable gum Set you down thus,
 And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
 Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk 352
 Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state
 I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
 And smote him thus [Stabs himself]
Lod O bloody period!
Gra All that's spoke is marr'd.
Oth I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee, no way but this, [Falling upon DESDEMONA.
 Killing myself to die upon a kiss [Dies Cas This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon,
 For he was great of heart
Lod [To IAGO] O Spartan dog! 360
 More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea
 Look on the tragic loading of this bed,
 This is thy work, the object poisons sight,
 Let it be hid Gratiano, keep the house, 364
 And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
 For they succeed on you To you, lord governor,
 Remains the censure of this hellish villain,
 The time, the place, the torture, O! enforce it.
 Myself will straight aboard, and to the state 369
 This heavy act with heavy heart relate
 [Exeunt.]

ACT I

SCENE I — Alexandria A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO

Phi Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure, those his goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, 4

The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front, his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper, 8
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust Look! where they come

Flourish Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains, Eunuchs fanning her

Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd 12
Into a strumpet's fool, behold and see

Cleo If it be love indeed tell me how much.
Ant There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd

Cleo I'll set a bourn how far to be below'd 16 Ant Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant

Att News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant Grates me, the sum.

Cleo Nay, hear them, Antony
Fulvia, perchance, is angry, or, who knows 20
If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or this,

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that,
Perform't, or else we damn thee'

Ant How, my love! 24
Cleo Perchance! nay, and most like,
You must not stay here longer, your dismissal
Is come from Caesar, therefore hear it, Antony Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar s! would say?
both? 28

Call in the messengers As I am Egypt's queen, Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager, else so thy cheek pays shame

When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds The messengers' 32

Ant Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay, our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man, the nobleness of life 36
Is to do thus, when such a mutual pair

And such a twain can do't, in which I bind.
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless.

Cleo Excellent falsehood! 40
Why did he marry Fulvia and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not, Antony
Will be himself

Ant But sturr'd by Cleopatra.
Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours, 44 Let's not confound the time with conference harsh

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now What sport tonight?

Cleo Hear the ambassadors.
Ant Fie, wrangling queen! 48

Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep, whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd
No messenger, but thine, and all alone, 52
To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people Come, my queen,
Last night you did desire it speak not to us [Exeunt ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Train]

Dem Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony

Dem I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who 60
Thus speaks of him at Rome, but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow Rest you happy!
[Exeunt]

SCENE II — The Same Another Room

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer

Char Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands 6

Alex Soothsayer!

Sooth Your will?

Char Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things? 8

Sooth In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex Show him your hand 12

Enter ENOBARBUS

Eno Bring in the banquet quickly, wine
enough

Cleopatra's health to drink

Char Good sir, give me good fortune

Sooth I make not, but foresee 16

Char Pray then, foresee me one

Sooth You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char He means in flesh

Ir No, you shall paint when you are old

Char Wrinkles forbid! 21

Alex Vex not his prescience, be attentive.

Char Hush!

Sooth You shall be more loving than belov'd 24

Char I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex Nay, hear him

Char Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all, let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage, find me to marry me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress 32

Sooth You shall outlive the lady whom you serve

Char O excellent! I love long life better than figs

Sooth You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach 36

Char Then, belike, my children shall have no names, prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million. 41

Char Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch

Alex You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes 44

Char Nay, come, tell Iras hers

Alex We'll know all our fortunes

Eno Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be,—drunk to bed 48

Ir There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else

Char E'en as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine 52

Ir Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay

Char Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune 57

Sooth Your fortunes are alike

Ir But how? but how? give me particulars

Sooth I have said 60

Ir Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Ir Not in my husband's nose 65

Char Our worse thoughts heaven mend!
Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune. O!

let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee, and let her die too, and give him a worse, and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight, good Isis, I beseech thee! 74

Ir Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly! 80

Char Amen

Alex Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't! 84

Eno Hush! here comes Antony

Char Not he, the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo Saw you my lord?

Eno No, lady

Cleo Was he not here? 88

Char No, madam

Cleo He was dispos'd to murther, but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him Enobarbus!

Eno Madam!

Cleo Seek him, and bring him hither.

Where's Alexas?

Alex Here, at your service My lord approaches

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants

Cleo We will not look upon him, go with us [Exeunt CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS, CHARMIAN, Soothsayer, and Attendants]

Mess Fulvia thy wife first came into the field Ant Against my brother Lucius? 97

Mess Ay

But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, jointing their force
'gainst Caesar, 100

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy
Upon the first encounter drove them.

Ant Well, what worst?
Mess The nature of bad news infects the teller

Ant When it concerns the fool, or coward
On, 104
Things that are past are done with me 'Tis thus

Who tells me true, though in his tale lay death,
I hear him as he flatter'd

Mess Labienus—
This is stiff news—hath, with his Parthian force Extended Asia, from Euphrates 109

His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia and to Ionia whilst—

Ant Antony, thou wouldst say,— 112
Mess O' my lord

Ant Speak to me home, since not the general
tongue,

Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome,
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults 116

With such full licence as both truth and malice
Have power to utter O' then we bring forth weeds

When our quick winds be still, and our ills told us

Is as our earring Fare thee well awhile. 120
Mess At your noble pleasure [Exit

Ant From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att The man from Sicyon, is there such an one?

Sec Att He stays upon your will Ant Let him appear 124

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage

Enter another Messenger

What are you?

Sec Mess Fulvia thy wife is dead
Ant Where died she? 128

Sec Mess In Sicyon
Her length of sickness, with what else more serious

Importeth thee to know, thus bears [Giving a letter]

Ant Forbear me.
[Exit Second Messenger]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it

What our contempts do often hurl from us 132
We wish it ours again, the present pleasure,
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself she's good, being gone,
The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on 136

I must from this enchanting queen break off,
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS

Eno What's your pleasure, sir? 140
Ant I must wish haste from hence

Eno Why, then we kill all our women We see how mortal an unkindness is to them, if they suffer our departure, death's the word 144

Ant I must be gone
Eno Under a compelling occasion let women die, it were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly, I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment I do think there is mettle in death which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying 154

Ant She is cunning past man's thought
Eno Alack! sir, no, her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears, they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report this cannot be cunning in her, if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove 162

Ant Would I had never seen her!
Eno O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant Fulvia is dead
Eno Sir? 168

Ant Fulvia is dead
Eno Fulvia!

Ant Dead
Eno Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth, comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented this grief is crowned with consolation, your old smock brings forth a new petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an amon that should water this sorrow

Ant The business she hath broached in the state

Cannot endure my absence 184
Eno And the business you have broached here cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode 188

Ant No more light answers Let our officers Have notice what we purpose I shall break The cause of our expedience to the queen, And get her leave to part. For not alone 192

The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,

Do strongly speak to us, but the letters too
 Of many our contriving friends in Rome
 Petition us at home Sextus Pompeius 196
 Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
 The empire of the sea, our slippery people—Whose love is never link'd to the deserver
 Till his deserts are past—begin to throw 200
 Pompey the Great and all his dignities
 Upon his son, who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the man soldier, whose quality, going on,
 The sides o' the world may danger Much is breeding, 205
 Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
 And not a serpent's poison Say, our pleasure,
 To such whose place is under us, requires 208
 Our quick remove from hence

Eno I shall do it.

[Exeunt

SCENE III—The Same Another Room

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS

Cleo Where is he?

Char I did not see him since

Cleo See where he is, who's with him, what he does,

I did not send you if you find him sad,

Say I am dancing, if in mirth, report 4

That I am sudden sick quick, and return

[Exit ALEXAS

Char Madam, methinks, if you did love him

dearly,

You do not hold the method to enforce

The like from him.

Cleo What should I do I do not? 8

Char In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing

Cleo Thou teachest like a fool, the way to lose him

Char Tempt him not so too far, I wish, forbear

In time we hate that which we often fear 12

But here comes Antony

Enter ANTONY

Cleo I am sick and sullen.

Ant I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall

It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature 16

Will not sustain it.

Ant Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo Pray you, stand further from me, Ant What's the matter?

Cleo I know, by that same eye, there's some good news

What says the married woman? You may go

Would she had never given you leave to come!

Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here;

I have no power upon you, hers you are:

Ant The gods best know,—

Cleo O! never was there queen 24

So mightily betray'd, yet at the first

Was saw the treasons planted.

Ant

Cleopatra,—

Cleo Why should I think you can be mine and true,

Though you in swearing shake the throned

gods, 28

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,

Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant Most sweet queen,—

Cleo Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, 32

But bid farewell, and go when you su'd stay-

ing

Then was the time for words, no going then

Eternity was in our lips and eyes,

Bliss in our brows bent, none our parts so poor 36

But was a race of heaven, they are so still,

Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,

Art turn'd the greatest liar

Ant How now, lady!

Cleo I would I had thy inches, thou shouldst

know 40

There were a heart in Egypt

Ant Hear me, queen.

The strong necessity of time commands

Our services awhile, but my full heart

Remains in use with you Our Italy 44

Shines o'er with civil swords, Sextus Pompeius

Makes his approaches to the port of Rome,

Equality of two domestic powers

Breeds scrupulous faction The hated, grown to strength, 48

Are newly grown to love, the condemn'd

Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace

Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd 52

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change My more particular,

And that which most with you should safe my

going, 56

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness can Fulvia die?

Ant She's dead, my queen

Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read 60

The garbols she awak'd, at the last, best,

See when and where she died

Cleo O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, 64

In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to

know

The purposes I bear, which are or cease

As you shall give the advice By the fire 68

That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence

Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war

As thou affect'st.

Cleo Cut my lace, Charmian, come,

But let it be I am quickly ill, and well, 72

So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear,

And give true evidence to his love which stands
An honourable trial

Cleo So Fulvia told me
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her, 76
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honour

Ant You'll heat my blood, no more Cleo You can do better yet, but this is 81 meety

Ant Now, by my sword,— Cleo And target, Still he mends,
But this is not the best Look, prithee, Char-
man,

How this Herculean Roman does become 84
The carriage of his chafe

Ant I'll leave you, lady Cleo Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it 88
That you know well something it is I would,— O! my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten

Ant But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you For idleness itself

Cleo 'Tis sweating labour 93
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this But, sir, forgive me,
Since my becomings kill me when they do not 96
Eye well to you your honour calls you hence,
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! Upon your sword Sit laurel victory! and smooth success 100
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant Let us go Come,
Our separation so abides and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee 104
Away! [Exeunt]

SCENE IV —Rome A Room in CÆSAR'S
House

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants

Cæs You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
know,

It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor From Alexandria
This is the news he fishes, drinks, and wastes 4
The lamps of night in revel, is not more man-like

Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy More womanly than he, hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners you shall find there 8

A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow

Lep I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness,
His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven, 12
More fiery by night's blackness, hereditary Rather than purchas'd, what he cannot change

Than what he chooses.

Cæs You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not 16

Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the 20 buffet

With knives that smell of sweat, say this becomes him,—

As his composure must be rare indeed Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear 24
So great weight in his lightness If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones Call on him for't, but to confound such time 28

That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

As his own state and ours, 'tis to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,

Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger

Lep Here's more news. 33 Mess Thy biddings have been done, and every hour,

Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea, 36
And it appears he is belov'd of those That only have fear'd Cæsar, to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd

Cæs I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state, 41
That he which is was wish'd until he were,
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth
love,

Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body, 44

Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess Cæsar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates, 48 Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound

With keels of every kind many hot inroads
They make in Italy, the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt, 52

No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon Taken as seen, for Pompey's name strikes more Than could his war resisted.

Cæs Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel Did famine follow, whom thou fought'st against, Though daintily brought up, with patience 60
more

Than savages could suffer, thou didst drink

The stale of horses and the gilded puddle Which beasts would cough at, thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge, 64
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou browsed'st, on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on, and all this— 68
It wounds thy honour that I speak it now—
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not

Lep 'Tis pity of him.
Ces Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome 'Tis time we twain 72
Did show ourselves i' the field, and to that end Assemble me immediate council, Pompey Thrives in our idleness

Lep To-morrow, Cæsar, 76
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able To front this present time

Ces Till which encounter,
It is my business too Farewell 80

Lep Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime
Of stars abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker

Ces Doubt not, sir,
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt

SCENE V—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN

Cleo Charmian!

Char Madam!

Cleo Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora

Char Why, madam? 4

Cleo That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away

Char You think of him too much.

Cleo O! 'tis treason

Char Madam, I trust, not so

Cleo Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar What's your highness' pleasure? 8

Cleo Not now to hear thee sing, I take no
pleasure

In aught a eunuch has 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections? 12

Mar Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo Indeed!

Mar Not in deed, madam, for I can do nothing

But what in deed is honest to be done; 16
Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo O Charmian!

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? 20
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse, for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgenet of men He's speaking now, 24
Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?'

For so he calls me Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison Think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Cæsar, 29

When thou wast here above the ground I was A morsel for a monarch, and great Pompey Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow, 32

There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life

Enter ALEXAS

Alex Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo How much unlike art thou Mark
Antony!

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath 36

With his tinct gilded thee
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd, the last of many doubled kisses, 40
This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo Mine ear must pluck it thence Alex 'Good friend,' quoth he,

'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends

This treasure of an oyster, at whose foot, 44
To mend the petty present, I will piece

Her opulent throne with kingdoms, all the east,
Say thou, shall call her mistress ' So he nodded,

And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed, 48 Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him

Cleo What! was he sad or merry?

Alex Like to the time o' the year between the extremes

Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry 52

Cleo O well-divided disposition! Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man, but note him

He was not sad, for he would shme on those That make their looks by his, he was not merry, 56

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy, but between both

O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes, 60

So does it no man else. Mett'st thou my posts?
Alex Ay, madam, twenty several messengers

Why do you send so thick?

Cleo Who's born that day

When I forget to send to Antony, 64
Shall die a beggar Ink and paper, Charmian.

Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian, Ever love Cæsar so?

Char. O! that brave Cæsar

Cleo Bechok'd with such another emphasis!

Say the brave Antony

Char The valiant Cæsar! 69

Cleo By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men

Char By your most gracious pardon, 72
I sing but after you.

Cleo My salad days,
When I was green in judgment, cold in blood,
To say as I said then! But come, away,
Get me ink and paper 76
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt [Exeunt

ACT II

SCENE I—Messina A Room in POMPEY'S House

Enter POMPEY, MENEKRATES, and MENAS

Pom If the great gods be just, they shall assist

The deeds of justest men

Mene Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny

Pom Whiles we are sutors to their throne, decays 4

The thing we sue for

Mene We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers Deny us for our good, so find we profit
By losing of our prayers

Pom I shall do well 8
The people love me, and the sea is mine,
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope Says it will come to the full Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make 12 No wars without doors, Cæsar gets money where

He loses hearts, Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd, but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene Cæsar and Lepidus 16
Are in the field, a mighty strength they carry

Pom Where have you this? 'tis false

Mene From Silvius, sir

Pom He dreams, I know they are in Rome
together,
Looking for Antony But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip! 21
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming, Epicurean cooks 24
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour
Even till a Lethe'd dullness!

Enter VARRIUS

How now, Varius!
Var This is most certain that I shall deliver 28

Mark Antony is every hour in Rome Expected, since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for further travel.

Pom I could have given less matter
A better ear Menas, I did not think 32 This anorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm
For such a petty war, his soldiership

Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring 36
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony

Mene I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together,
His wife that s dead did trespasses to Cæsar, 40
His brother warr'd upon him, although I think Not mov'd by Antony

Pom I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater Were't not that we stand up against them all 44
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords, but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions and bind up 48
The petty difference we yet not know
Be it as our gods will have't! It only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands
Come, Menas [Exeunt

SCENE II—Rome A Room in LEPIDUS' House

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS

Lep Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, And shall become you well, to entreat your captain

To soft and gentle speech.

Eno I shall entreat him
To answer like himself if Cæsar move him, 4
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave't to-day

Lep 'Tis not a time 8
For private stomaching

Eno Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't

Lep But small to greater matters must give way

Eno Not if the small come first.

Lep Your speech is passion, 12
But, pray you, stir no embers up Here comes The noble Antony

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS

Eno And yonder, Cæsar

Enter CÆSAR, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA
Ant If we compose well here, to Parthia Hark ye, Ventidius

Cæs I do not know, 16
Mæcenas, ask Agrippa.

Lep Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not

A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard, when we debate 20
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds, then, noble partners,—

The rather for I earnestly beseech,— Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms, 24
Nor curstness grow to the matter

Ant 'Tis spoken well
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus

Cæs Welcome to Rome. 28
Ant Thank you.
Cæs Sit
Ant Sit, sir
Cæs Nay, then. 32
Ant I learn, you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not Cæs I must be laugh'd at If, or for nothing or a little, I Should say myself offended, and with you 36 Chiefly I' the world, more laugh'd at that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me Ant My being in Egypt, Cæsar, 40
What was't to you?
Cæs No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt, yet, if you there Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt Might be my question
Ant How intend you, practis'd? 44
Cæs You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent
By what did here befall me Your wife and brother Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war
Ant You do mistake your business, my brother never 49
Did urge me in his act I did inquire it,
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather 52
Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel, 56
As matter whole you n' have to make it with,
It must not be with this Cæs You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but You patch'd up your excuses
Ant Not so, not so, 60
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, 65
I would you had her spirit in such another
The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife. 68
Eno Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!
Ant So much uncurbable, her garboils, Cæsar,
Made out of her impatience,—which not wanted

Shrewdness of policy too,—I grieving grant 73 Did you too much disquiet, for that you must But say I could not help it Cæs I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria, you 76
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts Did gibe my missive out of audience
Ant Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want 80
Of what I was I' the morning, but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife, if we contend, 84
Out of our question wipe him
Cæs You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.
Lep Soft, Cæsar!
Ant No, 88
Lepidus, let him speak
The honour's sacred which he talks on now, Supposing that I lack'd it But on, Cæsar,
The article of my oath
Cæs To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them, 92
The which you both demed Ant Neglected, rather;
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you, but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power 97
Work without it Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here,
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do too
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case 52
Lep 'Tis noble spoken
Mec If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye to forget them quite 104
Were to remember that the present need Speaks to atone you Lep Worthily spoken, Mécænas.
Eno Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do 111
Ant Thou art a soldier only, speak no more Eno That truth should be silent I had almost forgot
Ant You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more
Eno Go to, then, your considerate stone. 116 Cæs I do not much dislike the matter, but The manner of his speech, for it cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts Yet, if I knew 120 What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O' the world I would pursue it.
Agr Give me leave, Cæsar
Cæs Speak, Agrippa

Agr Thou hast a sister by the mother's side, Admir'd Octavia, great Mark Antony 125
 Is now a widower

Cæs Say not so, Agrippa
 If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof 128
 Were well deserv'd of rashness

Ant I am not married, Cæsar, let me hear Agrippa further speak

Agr To hold you in perpetual amity,
 To make you brothers, and to knit your 132
 hearts

With an unslipping knot, take Antony
 Octavia to his wife, whose beauty claims
 No worse a husband than the best of men, Whose virtue and whose general graces speak That which none else can utter By this mar- 137
 riage,

All little jealousies which now seem great,
 And all great fears which now import their dangers,

Would then be nothing, truths would be but tales 140

Where now half tales be truths, her love to both Would each to other and all loves to both Draw after her Pardon what I have spoke,
 For 'tis a studied, not a present thought, 144
 By duty ruminated.

Ant Will Cæsar speak?
Cæs Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
 With what is spoke already

Ant What power is in Agrippa,
 If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,' 148
 To make this good?

Cæs The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia

Ant May I never
 To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
 Dream of impediment! Let me have thy hand,
 Further this act of grace, and from this hour 153
 The heart of brothers govern in our loves
 And sway our great designs!

Cæs There is my hand
 A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
 Did ever love so dearly, let her live 157
 To join our kingdoms and our hearts, and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep Happily, amen!
Ant I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
 Pompey, 160

For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
 Of late upon me, I must thank him only,
 Lest my remembrance suffer ill report,
 At heel of that, defy him.

Lep Time calls upon's 164
 Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
 Or else he seeks out us.

Ant Where hes he?
Cæs About the Mount Misenum

Ant What's his strength
 By land?

Cæs Great and increasing, but by sea 168
 He is an absolute master

Ant So is the fame
 Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it, Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we
 The business we have talk'd of.

Cæs With most gladness, 172
 And do invite you to my sister's view, Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant Let us, Lepidus,
 Not lack your company

Lep Noble Antony,
 Not sickness should detain me 176

[Flourish Exeunt CÆSAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.]

Mec Welcome from Egypt, sir
Eno Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Me- 178 cænas! My honourable friend, Agrippa!

Agr Good Enobarbus! 180
Mec We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by't in Egypt

Eno Ay, sir, we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking

Mec Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there, is this true? 188

Eno This was but as a fly by an eagle, we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting

Mec She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her 193

Eno When she first met Mark Antony she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus

Agr There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her 197

Eno I will tell you
 The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne, Burn'd on the water, the poop was beaten gold,
 Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that 201
 The winds were love-sick with them, the oars were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made

The water which they beat to follow faster, 204 As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

It beggar'd all description, she did lie
 In her pavilion,—cloth-of-gold of tissue,— O'er-picturing that Venus where we see 208
 The fancy outwork nature, on each side her Stood pretty-dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
 And what they undid did

Agr O! rare for Antony 213
Eno Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
 So many mermaids, tended her 'r' the eyes,
 And made their bends adornings, at the helm
 A seeming mermaid steers, the silken tackle 217 Swell with the touches of those flower-soft
 hands,

That yarely frame the office. From the barge
 A strange invisible perfume hits the sense 220
 Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
 Her people out upon her, and Antony, Enthron'd 'r' the market-place, did sit alone,
 Whistling to the air, which, but for vacancy,
 Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too 225
 And made a gap in nature

Agr Rare Egyptian!
Eno Upon her landing, Antony sent to her.

Invited her to supper, she replied 228
 It should be better he became her guest,
 Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony, Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard
 speak,
 Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast,
 And, for his ordinary pays his heart 233
 For what his eyes eat only.

Ag. Royal wench!
 She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed,
 He plough'd her, and she cropp'd

Eno. I saw her once
 Hop forty paces through the public street, 237
 And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted

That she did make defect perfection,
 And, breathless, power breathe forth. 240

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly Eno. Never, he will not

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
 Her infinite variety, other women cloy 244
 The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry
 Where most she satisfies, for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests Bless her when she is riggish. 248

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
 The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Ag. Let us go
 Good Eno, make yourself my guest 252
 Whilst you abide here

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you.
 [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same A Room in CESAR'S
 House

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them, Attendants

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

Oct. All which time
 Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
 To them for you

Ant. Good night, sir My Octavia, 4
 Read not my blemishes in the world's report,
 I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule Good night, dear lady

Oct. Good night, sir 8
Ces. Good night.

[Exeunt CESAR and OCTAVIA.

Enter Soothsayer

Ant. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you

1 hither! 12

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue but yet
 He you to Egypt again

Ant. Say to me,

Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's or mine? 16

Sooth. Caesar's
 Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side, Thy demon—that's thy spirit which keeps thee,
 —is

Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 20
 Where Caesar's is not, but near him thy angel Becomes a fear, as being o'erpower'd, therefore Make space enough between you

Ant. Speak this no more Sooth. To none but thee, no more but when to thee 24

If thou dost play with him at any game
 Thou art sure to lose, and, of that natural luck,
 He beats thee 'gainst the odds, thy lustre thickens
 When he shines by I say again, thy spirit 28
 Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
 But he away, 'tis noble

Ant. Get thee gone
 Say to Ventidius I would speak with him

[Exit Soothsayer 32

He shall to Parthia Be it art or hap

He hath spoken true, the very dice obey him
 And in our sports my better cunning faints

Under his chance, if we draw lots he speeds,
 His cocks do win the battle still of mine 36

When it is all to nought, and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds I will to Egypt,
 And though I make this marriage for my peace,
 I' the east my pleasure lies

Enter VENTIDIUS

O! come, Ventidius, 40
 You must to Parthia, your commission's ready,
 Follow me, and receive't [Exeunt

SCENE IV.—The Same A Street

Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further, pray you hasten

Your generals after

Ag. Sir, Mark Antony
 Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,

Which will become you both, farewell

Mec. We shall,
 As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount Before you, Lepidus

Lep. Your way is shorter, 8
 My purposes do draw me much about

You'll win two days upon me

Mec. Sir, good success!
Ag. Farewell. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Attendant.

Cleo. Give me some music, music, moody food

Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN

Cleo Let it alone, let s to billiards come, Charman

Char My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo As well a woman with a eunuch play'd
 As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, sur?

Mar As well as I can, madam Cleo And when good will's show'd, though't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now Give me mine angle, we'll to the river there—
 My music playing far off—I will betray

Tawny-finn'd fishes, my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws, and, as I draw them up,
 I'll think them every one an Antony,
 And say, 'Ah, ha!' you're caught

Char 'Twas merry when You wager'd on your angling, when your diver Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he

With fervency drew up

Cleo That time—O times!—
 I laugh'd him out of patience, and that night
 I laugh'd him into patience, and next morn,

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed, Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger

O! from Italy,
 Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears, 24
 That long time have been barren

Mess Madam, madam,— Cleo Antony's dead! if thou say so, villain,
 Thou kill'st thy mistress, but well and free,

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here 28
 My bluest veins to kiss, a hand that kings
 Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing

Mess First, madam, he is well Cleo Why, there's more gold.

But, surrah, mark, we use 32
 To say the dead are well, bring it to that,
 The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat

Mess Good madam, hear me
Cleo Well, go to, I will, 36
 But there's no goodness in thy face, if Antony Be free and healthful, so tart a favour
 To trumpet such good tidings! if not well, Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes,

Not like a formal man
Mess Will't please you hear me? 40
Cleo I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well
 Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to him, I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail 45
 Rich pearls upon thee

Mess Madam, he's well.
Cleo Well said.

Mess And friends with Cæsar
Cleo Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever 48

Cleo Make thee a fortune from me
Mess But yet, madam,—

Cleo I do not like 'but yet,' it does allay
 The good precedence, lie upon 'but yet!'

'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth 52
 Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
 The good and bad together. He's friends with Cæsar.

In state of health, thou sayst, and thou sayst, free 56

Mess Free, madam! no, I made no such report

He's bound unto Octavia

Cleo For what good turn?
Mess For the best turn I the bed.

Cleo I am pale, Charmian!
Mess Madam, he's married to Octavia. 60

Cleo The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down]

Mess Good madam, patience
Cleo What say you? Hence,

[Strikes him again]
 Hornble villam! or I'll spurn thine eyes
 Like balls before me, I'll unhar thy head 64

[She hales him up and down] Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
 Smarting in lingering pickle

Mess Gracious madam,
 I, that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo Say 'tis not so, a province I will give
 thee, 68
 And make thy fortunes proud, the blow thou hadst

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage,
 And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg

Mess He's married, madam. 72
Cleo Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long [Draws a knife]

Mess Nay, then I'll run.
 What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit]

Char Good madam, keep yourself within yourself, 76
 The man is innocent

Cleo Some innocents' scape not the thunderbolt

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
 Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again

Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call 80 Char He is afraid to come

Cleo I will not hurt him.
 [Exit CHARMIAN]

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
 A meaner than myself, since I myself
 Have given myself the cause.

Re-enter CHARMIAN, and Messenger
 Come hither, sir 84

Though it be honest, it is never good
 To bring bad news, give to a gracious message
 A host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell

Themselves when they be felt.

Mess I have done my duty

Cleo Is he married? 89
I cannot hate thee worse than I do
If thou again say Yes

Mess He's married, madam.

Cleo The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still? 92

Mess Should I lie, madam?

Cleo O! I would thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A cistern for scald snakes Go, get thee hence, Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me 96
Thou wouldst appear most ugly He is married?

Mess I crave your highness' pardon

Cleo He is married?

Mess Taken no offence that I would not offend you,

To punish me for what you make me do 100
Seems much unequal, he's married to Octavia

Cleo O! that his fault should make a knave of thee,

That art not what thou'rt sure of Get thee hence,

The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome 104

Are all too dear for me, lie they upon thy hand
And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger]

Char Good your highness, patience

Cleo In praising Antony I have disprais'd

Cæsar

Char. Many times, madam

Cleo I am paid for't now 108

Lead me from hence,
I faint. O Iras! Charmian! 'Tis no matter

Go to the fellow, good Alexas, bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years, 112

Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair bring me word quickly

[Exit ALEXAS]

Lethimforevergo — lethimnot—Charmian!—
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

The other way's a Mars [To MARDIAN] Bid you Alexas 117

Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me, Charmian,

But do not speak to me Lead me to my chamber

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI — Near Misenum.

Flourish Enter POMPEY and MENAS, at one side, with drum and trumpet, at the other, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECENAS, with Soldiers marching

Pom Your hostages I have, so have you mine,

And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs Most meet

That first we come to words, and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent,
Which if thou hast consider'd, let us know

If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth

That else must perish here.

Pom.

10 you all three, 8
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods, I do not know
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends, since Julius Cæsar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, 13
There saw you labouring for him What was't That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, 17

To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden 20
The anger'd ocean foams, with which I meant To scourge the ingratitude that spiteful Rome Cast on my noble father

Cæs

Take your time
Ant Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails, 24

We'll speak with thee at sea at land, thou know'st

How much we do o'er-count thee

Pom

At land indeed,
Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house,
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, 28

Remain in't as thou mayst

Lep

Be pleas'd to tell us—
For this is from the present—how you take The offers we have sent you

Cæs

There's the point
Ant Which do not be entreated to, but weigh 32

What it is worth embrac'd

Cæs

And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune

Pom

You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia, and I must

Rid all the sea of pirates, then, to send 36
Measures of wheat to Rome, thus 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targets undinted

Cæs

Ant

Lep

That's our offer

Pom

Know, then,
I came before you here a man prepar'd 40
To take this offer, but Mark Antony

Put me to some impatience Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,

When Cæsar and your brother were at blows, 44
Your mother came to Sicily and did find Her welcome friendly

Ant

I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you

Pom

Let me have your hand 48
I did not think, sir, to have met you here

Ant

The beds! the east are soft, and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,

Cæs

Since I saw you last, 52
There is a change upon you.

Pom

Well, I know not
What counts harsh Fortune casts upon my face,

But in my bosom shall she never come
To make my heart her vassal

Lep Well met here 56

Pom I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us

Cæs That's the next to do

Pom We'll feast each other ere we part, and let's 60

Draw lots who shall begin

Ant That will I, Pompey

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame I have heard that Julius Cæsar 64

Grew fat with feasting there

Ant You have heard much

Pom I have fair meanings, sir

Ant And fair words to them

Pom Then, so much have I heard,
And I have heard Apollodorus carn'd— 68

Eno No more of that he did so

Pom What, I pray you?

Eno A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress

Pom I know thee now, how far'st thou, soldier?

Eno Well,

And well am like to do, for I perceive 72 Four feasts are toward

Pom Let me shake thy hand,
I never hated thee I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour

Eno Sir,

I never lov'd you much, but I ha' prais'd ye 76
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pom Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee
Aboard my galley I invite you all 80
Will you lead, lords?

Cæs

Ant

Lep

Show us the way, sir

Pom

Come

[Exeunt all except MENAS and ENOBARBUS.

Men Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty You and I have known, sir

Eno At sea, I think. 84

Men We have, sir

Eno You have done well by water

Men And you by land

Eno I will praise any man that will praise me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by land 90

Men. Nor what I have done by water

Eno Yes, something you can deny for your own safety, you have been a great thief by sea

Men And you by land 94

Eno There I deny my land service But give me your hand, Menas, if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing

Men All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are 100

Eno But there is never a fair woman has a true face

Men No slander, they steal hearts

Eno We came hither to fight with you 104

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune

Eno If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back
again 109

Men You have said, sir We looked not for Mark Antony here pray you, is he married to Cleopatra? 112

Eno Cæsar's sister is called Octavia

Men True, sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus

Eno But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius 117

Men Pray ye, sir?

Eno 'Tis true

Men Then is Cæsar and he for ever knit together 121

Eno If I were bound to divine of this unity,
I would not prophesy so

Men I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties 126

Eno I think so too, but you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation 130

Men Who would not have his wife so?

Eno Not he that himself is not so, which is Mark Antony He will to his Egyptian dish again, then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prov the immediate author of their variance Ant^y will use his affection where it is, he married ut his occasion here

Men And thus it may be Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you 141

Eno I shall take it, sir we have used our throats in Egypt

Men Come, let's away [Exeunt

SCENE VII.—On board POMPEY'S Galley off Misenum

Music Enter two or three Servants, with a banquet

First Serv Here they'll be, man Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already, the least wind'll the world will blow them down

Sec Serv Lepidus is high-coloured 4

First Serv They have made him drink almsdrink

Sec Serv As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, 'No more,' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink

First Serv But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion 11

Sec Serv Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship, I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partizan I could not heave 15

First Serv To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks

A sennet sounded Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MÆCENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains

Ant Thus do they, sir They take the flow o' the Nile 20

By certain scales y' the pyramid, they know
By the height the lowness, or the mean, if dearth Or foinson follow The higher Nilus swells
The more it promises, as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, 25
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep You've strange serpents there.

Ant Ay, Lepidus 28
Lep Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun, so is your crocodile

Ant They are so 32

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out 36

Eno Not till you have slept, I fear me you'll be in till then

Lep Nay certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things, without contradiction, I have heard that 41

Men Pompey, a word

Pom Say in mine ear, what is't?

Men Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee,
captain, 44

And hear me speak a word

Pom Forbear me till anon.

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth, it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs, it lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates 52

Lep What colour is it of?

Ant Of it own colour too

Lep 'Tis a strange serpent

Ant 'Tis so, and the tears of it are wet 56

Cæs Will this description satisfy him?

Ant With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure

Pom Go hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that
away! 60

Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear
me,

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. I think thou'rt mad The matter?

Men I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes 64

Pom Thou hast serv'd me with much faith.

What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords

Ant These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom What sayst thou? 68

Men Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?
That's twice

Pom How should that be?

Men

But entertain it,
And though thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom.

Hast thou drunk well? 72

Men

No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,

Is thine, if thou wilt ha't

Pom

Show me which way 76

These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel let me cut the cable,
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats
All there is thine

Pom

Ah! thus thou shouldst have done,
And not have spoke on't In me 'tis villany, 81 In thee't had been good service Thou must know

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour,
Mine honour it Repent tha. e'er thy tongue

Hath so betray'd thine act, being done unknown, 85

I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemn it now Desist, and drink.

Men

[Aside] For this, 88

I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never find it more

Pom

This health to Lepidus!

Ant Bear him ashore I'll pledge it for him,

Pompey 92

Eno Here's to thee, Menas!

Men.

Enobarbus, welcome!

Pom

Fill till the cup be hid

Eno There's a strong fellow, Menas

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS

Men Why? 96

Eno A' bears the third part of the world, man, see'st not?

Men The third part then is drunk, would it were all,

That it might go on wheels! 100

Eno Drink thou, increase the reels

Men

Come

Pom This is not yet an Alexandrian feast

Ant It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho! 104

Here is to Cæsar!

Cæs I could well forbear't.
It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler

Ant

Be a child o' the time

Cæs Possess it, I'll make answer, 108

But I had rather fast from all four days

Than drink so much in one.

Eno [To ANTONY] Ha! my brave emperor,

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink?

Pom Let's ha't, good soldier 112

Ant Come, let's all take hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense

In soft and delicate Lethe

Eno All take hands
Make battery to our ears with the loud music, 116
The while I'll place you, then the boy shall sing,
The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley

[Music plays ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand

SONG

Come thou monarch of the vine 120
Plump Bacchus with pink eye!
In thy fets our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd
Cup us 'till the world go round! 124
Cup us 'till the world go round!

Cæs What would you more? Pompey, good night Good brother,
Let me request you off, our graver business
Frowns at this levity Gentle lords let's part,
You see we have burnt our cheeks, strong Enobarb 29
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks, the wild disguise hath almost

Antick'd us all What needs more words? Good
night, 132

Good Antony, your hand

Pom I'll try you on the shore
Ant And shall, sir Give's your hand

Pom O, Antony!
You have my father's house,—But, what? we are friends

Come down into the boat

Eno Take heed you fall not 136 [Exeunt POMPEY, CÆSAR, ANTONY,
and Attendants

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men No, to my cabin
These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what!
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell To these great fellows sound and be hang'd!
sound out! 140

[A flourish of trumpets with drums

Eno Hoo! says a' There's my cap

Men Hoo! noble captain! come [Exeunt

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria

Enter VENTIDIUS, in triumph, with SILIUS and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers, the dead body of PACORUS borne before him

Ven Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck, and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death
Make me revenger Bear the king's son's body Before our army Thy Pacorus, Orodes, 4 Pays this for Marcus Crassus

Sil Noble Ventidius Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

The fugitive Parthians follow, spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither 8
The routed fly so thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven O Silius, Silius!
I have done enough a lower place, note well, 12
May make too great an act, for learn this, Silius, Better to leave undone than by our deed Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's
away

Cæsar and Antony have ever won 16
More in their officer than person, Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour 20

Who does it? the wars more than his captain can Becomes his captain's captain, and ambition,
The soldier's virtue rather makes choice of loss
Than gain which darkens him 24
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him, and in his offence Should my performance perish

Sil Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, 28 Grants scarce distinction Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven I'll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected,
How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia 33
We have jaded out of the field

Sil Where is he now?
Ven He purposeth to Athens, whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with's will permit
We shall appear before him On, there, pass along [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Rome A Room in CÆSAR'S House

Enter AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting

Agr What! are the brothers parted?
Eno They have dispatch'd with Pompey, he is gone,

The other three are sealing Octavia weeps
To part from Rome, Cæsar is sad and Lepidus, Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled With the green sickness

Agr 'Tis a noble Lepidus
Eno A very fine one O! how he loves Cæsar Agr Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark
Antony! 8

Eno Cæsar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men

Agr What's Antony? The god of Jupiter

Eno Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!

Agr O, Antony! O thou Arabian bird! 12

Eno Would you praise Cæsar, say, 'Cæsar, go no further

Agr Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises,

Eno But he loves Cæsar best, yet he loves
Antony

Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot 16

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, hoo!
His love to Antony But as for Cæsar Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder

Agr Both he loves
Eno They are his shards, and he their beetle [Trumpets within] So,
 This is to horse Adieu, noble Agrippa. 21 Agr Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant No further, sir Cas You take from me a great part of myself 24
 Use me well in't Sister, prove such a wife
 As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest
 band
 Shall pass on thy approval Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue, which is set 28
 Betwixt us as the cement of our love
 To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
 The fortress of it, for better might we Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts
 Thus be not cherish'd.

Ant Make me not offended 33
 In your distrust

Cas I have said
Ant You shall not find,
 Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear So, the gods keep
 you, 36
 And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part
Cas Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well
 The elements be kind to thee, and make 40
 Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Oct My noble brother!
Ant The April's in her eyes, it is love's spring,
 And these the showers to bring it on Be cheerful 44

Oct Sir, look well to my husband's house, and—

Cas What,
Octavia?

Oct I'll tell you in your ear Ant Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart obey her tongue, the swan's down-feather, 48
 That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
 And neither way inclines

Eno [Aside to AGRIPPA] Will Caesar weep?
Agr He has a cloud in his face

Eno He were the worse for that were he a horse, 52
 So is he, being a man.

Agr Why, Enobarbus,
 When Antony found Julius Caesar dead
 He cried almost to roaring, and he wept
 When at Philippi he found Brutus slain. 56

Eno That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum,

What willingly he did confound he wail'd, Believe't, till I wept too

Cas No, sweet Octavia,
 You shall hear from me still, the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant Come, sir, come, 61

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love
 Look, here I have you, thus I let you go,
 And give you to the gods

Cas Adieu, be happy! 64
Lep Let all the number of the stars give light
 To thy fair way!

Cas Farewell, farewell!
 [Kisses OCTAVIA]

Ant Farewell!
 [Trumpets sound Exeunt]

SCENE III — Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS and ALEXAS

Cleo Where is the fellow?
Alex Half afraid to come

Cleo Go to, go to
Enter a Messenger

Cleo Come hither, sir
Alex Good majesty,

Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
 But when you are well pleas'd

Cleo That Herod's head 4
 I'll have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come thou near

Mess Most gracious majesty!
Cleo Didst thou behold

Octavia?
Mess Ay, dread queen

Cleo Where?
Mess Madam, in Rome, 8

I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony

Cleo Is she as tall as me?
Mess She is not, madam

Cleo Didst hear her speak? is she shrilltongu'd, or low? 12

Mess Madam, I heard her speak, she is lowvoic'd

Cleo That's not so good He cannot like her long

Char Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible Cleo I think so, Charmian dull of tongue, and dwarfish! 16

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
 If e'er thou look'dst on majesty

Mess She creeps,
 Her motion and her station are as one,

She shows a body rather than a life, 20
 A statue than a breather

Cleo Is this certain?
Mess Or I have no observance

Char Three in Egypt Cannot make better note

Cleo He's very knowing,
 I do perceive't There's nothing in her yet. 24

The fellow has good judgment.
Char Excellent

Cleo Guess at her years, I prithee Mess Madam,

She was a widow,— Cleo Widow! Charmian, hark

Mess And I do think she's thirty 28

Cleo Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or round?

Mess Round even to faultiness

Cleo For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so

Her hair, what colour?

Mess Brown, madam, and her forehead

As low as she would wish it

Cleo There's gold for thee

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill

I will employ thee back again, I find thee

Most fit for business Go, make thee ready,

Our letters are prepar'd [Exit Messenger

Char A proper man

Cleo Indeed, he is so, I repent me much

That so I harmed him Why, methinks, by him,

This creature's no such thing

Char Nothing, madam

Cleo The man hath seen some majesty, and should know

Char Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,

And serving you so long!

Cleo I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian

But 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me

Where I will write All may be well enough

Char I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt

SCENE IV — Athens A Room in ANTONY'S House

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA

Ant Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,

That were excusable, that, and thousands more

Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd

New wars 'gainst Pompey, made his will, and read it

To public ear

Spoke scantily of me, when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly

He vented them, most narrow measure lent

me,

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,

Or did it from his teeth

Oct O my good lord!

Believe not all or, if you must believe,

Stomach not all A more unhappy lady,

If this division chance, ne'er stood between,

Praying for both parts

The good gods will mock me presently,

When I shall pray, 'O' bless my lord and husband, 16

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,

'O' bless my brother!' Husband win, win

brother,

Prays, and destroys the prayer, no midway

'Twixt these extremes at all

Ant Gentle Octavia, 20

Let your best love draw to that point which seeks

Best to preserve it If I lose mine honour

I lose myself, better I were not yours

Than yours so branchless But, as you requested, 24

Yourself shall go between's, the mean time, lady,

I'll raise the preparation of a war

Shall stain your brother, make your soonest

haste,

So your desires are yours

Oct Thanks to my lord 28

The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be

As if the world should cleave, and that slain men

Should solder up the rift 32

Ant When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults

Can never be so equal that your love

Can equally move with them Provide your

going 36

Choose your own company, and command what

cost

Your heart has mind to [Exeunt

SCENE V — The Same Another Room

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting

Ero How now, friend Eros!

Eros There's strange news come, sir

Ero What, man?

Eros Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey 5

Ero This is old what is the success?

Eros Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalty, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey, upon his own appeal, seizes him so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine 13

Ero Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more,

And throw between them all the food thou hast,

They'll grind the one the other Where's An-

tony? 16

Eros He's walking in the garden—thus and spurns

The rush that lies before him, cries, 'Fool,

Lepidus!'

And threatens the throat of that his officer

That murder'd Pompey

Ero Our great navy's rigg'd 20

Eros For Italy and Caesar More, Domitius,

My lord desires you presently my news

I might have told hereafter

Ero 'Twill be naught,

But let it be Bring me to Antony 24

Eros Come, sir [Exeunt

SCENE VI — Rome A Room in CAESAR'S House

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, and MECENAS.

Caes Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more

In Alexandria, here's the manner of't,

For the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,

Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold

Vere publicly enthron'd, at the feet sat Caesarion, whom they call my father's son, and all the unlawful issue that their lust since then hath made between them. Unto her he gave the stablishment of Egypt, made her of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute queen.

Mec This in the public eye?
Cæs 'T the common show-place, where they exercise 12
 his sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings, great Media, Parthia, and Armenia he gave to Alexander, to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia She 16 in the habiliments of the goddess Isis that day appear'd, and oft before gave audience,

as 'tis reported, so Mec Let Rome be thus inform'd

Agr Who, queasy with his insolence 20 already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Cæs The people know it, and have now receiv'd
 his accusations

Agr Whom does he accuse?
Cæs Caesar, and that, having in Sicily 24 Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him his part o' the isle, then does he say, he lent me some shipping unrestor'd, lastly, he frets that Lepidus of the triumvirate 28 should be depos'd, and, being, that we detain all his revenue

Agr Sir, this should be answer'd Cæs 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone

have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel, 32 that he has his high authority abus'd, and did deserve his change for what I have conquer'd,
 grant him part, but then, in his Armenia, and other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I 36 demand the like

Mec He'll never yield to that Cæs Nor must not then be yielded to in this Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Oct Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs That ever I should call thee cast-
 away! 40

Oct You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause

Cæs Why have you stol'n upon us thus?
 You come not like Cæsar's sister, the wife of Antony should have an army for an usher, and 44 he neighs of horse to tell of her approach long ere she did appear, the trees by the way should have borne men, and expectation faint'd,

longing for what it had not, nay, the dust 48 should have ascended to the roof of heaven, rais'd by your populous troops But you are come

market-maid to Rome, and have prevented

The ostentation of our love, which, left un-shown, 52

Is of en left unlov'd we should have met you
 By sea and land, supplying every stage
 With an augmented greeting

Oct Good my lord,
 To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it 56
 On my free-will My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
 My griev'd ear withal, whereon, I begg'd
 His pardon for return

Cæs Which soon he granted, 60
 Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him

Oct Do not say so, my lord

Cæs I have eyes upon him,
 And his affairs come to me on the wind
 Where is he now?

Oct My lord, in Athens 64

Cæs No, my most wrong'd sister, Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her He hath given his empire

Up to a whore, who now are levying
 The kings o' the earth for war He hath assembled 68

Bocchus, the King of Libya, Archelaus,
 Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos, King
 Of Paphlagonia, the Thracian king, Adallas,
 King Malchus of Arabia, King of Pont, 72
 Herod of Jewry, Mithridates, King
 Of Comagene, Polemon and Aminas,
 The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia,
 With a more larger list of sceptres

Oct Ay me, most wretched, 76
 That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
 That do afflict each other!

Cæs Welcome hither
 Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
 Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong'd 80
 And we in negligent danger Cheer your heart,
 Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
 O'er your content these strong necessities,
 But let determin'd things to destiny 84
 Hold unbewail'd their way Welcome to Rome,
 Nothing more dear to me You are abus'd
 Beyond the mark of thought, and the high gods,
 To do you justice, make their ministers 88
 Of us and those that love you Best of comfort,
 And ever welcome to us

Agr Welcome, lady
Mec Welcome, dear madam.
 Each heart in Rome does love and pity you, 92
 Only the adulterous Antony, most large
 In his abominations, turns you off,
 And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
 That noises it against us

Oct Is it so, sir? 96
Cæs Most certain Sister, welcome, pray
 you,
 Be ever known to patience, my dearest sister!
 [Exeunt]

SCENE VII —ANTONY's Camp, near to the Promontory of ACTIUM.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS

Cleo I will be even with thee, doubt it not!

Eno But why, why, why?
Cleo Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,
 And sayst it is not fit

Eno Well, is it, is it? 4 Cleo If not denounc'd against us, why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno [Aside] Well, I could reply
 If we should serve with horse and mares together,
 The horse were merely lost, the mares would bear 8

A soldier and his horse

Cleo What is't you say?
Eno Your presence needs must puzzle Antony,

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's time,

What should not then be spar'd He is already Traduc'd for levity, and 'tis said in Rome 13
 That Photinus a eunuch and your maids Manage this war

Cleo Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
 That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war, 16

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man Speak not against it,
 I will not stay behind

Eno Nay, I have done
 Here comes the emperor

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS

Ant Is it not strange, Canidius, 20
 That from Tarentum and Brundisium
 He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
 And take in Toryne? You have heard on't,
 sweet?

Cleo Celerity is never more admir'd 24
 Than by the negligent.

Ant A good rebuke,
 Which might have well becom'd the best of men,
 To taunt at slackness Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea

Cleo By sea! What else? 28
Can Why will my lord do so?

Ant For that he dares us to't
Eno So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight

Can Ay, and to wage his battle at Pharsalia, Where Cæsar fought with Pompey, but these offers, 32

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off,
 And so should you

Eno Your ships are not well mann'd,
 Your mariners are muleters, reapers, people Ingross'd by swift impress, in Cæsar's fleet 36
 Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought Their ships are yare, yours, heavy No disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
 Being prepar'd for land

Ant By sea, by sea 40

Eno Most worthy sir, you therein throw
 away

The absolute soldiership you have by land, Distract your army, which doth most consist Of war-mark'd footmen, leave unexecuted 44

Your own renowned knowledge, quite forego
 The way which promises assurance, and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
 From firm security

Ant I'll fight at sea 48

Cleo I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better

Ant Our overplus of shipping will be burn,
 And with the rest, full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cæsar But if we fail, 52
 We then can do't at land

Enter a Messenger

Thy business?
Mess The news is true, my lord, he is descried,

Cæsar has taken Toryne

Ant Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible, 56

Strange that his power should be Canidius,
 Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
 And our twelve thousand horse We'll to our ship

Away, my Thetis:

Enter a Soldier

How now, worthy soldier! 60
Sold O noble emperor! do not fight by sea,
 Trust not to rotten planks do you misdoubt This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians

And the Phœnicians go a-ducking, we 64
 Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
 And fighting foot to foot

Ant Well, well away! 68

[Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS

Sold By Hercules, I think I am i' the right

Can Soldier, thou art, but his whole action grows 68

Not in the power on't so our leader's led,

And we are women's men.

Sold You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justinius, 72

Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea,

But we keep whole by land This speed of Cæsar's

Carnies beyond belief

Sold While he was yet in Rome

His power went out in such distractions as 76

Beguil'd all spies

Can Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold They say, one Taurus

Can Well I know the man

Enter a Messenger

Mess The emperor calls Canidius

Can With news the time's with labour, and throes forth 80

Each minute some.

[Exeunt

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near ACTIUM.

Enter CÆSAR, TAURUS, Officers, and Others.

Cæs Taurus!

Taur My lord?

Cæs Strike not by land, keep whole provoke not battle,
 Till we have done at sea Do not exceed The prescript of this scroll our fortune lies Upon this jump [Exeunt]

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS

Ant Set we our squadrons on yond side o' the hill,
 In eye of Cæsar's battle, from which place
 We may the number of the ships behold,
 And so proceed accordingly [Exeunt]

Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his land army one way over the stage and TAURUS, the lieutenant of CÆSAR, the other way After their going in is heard the noise of a sea-fight

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS

Eno Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer
 The Antomad, the Egyptian admiral,
 With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder,
 To see t mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS

Scar Gods and goddesses,
 All the whole synod of them!

Eno What's thy passion?

Scar The greater cantle of the world is lost
 With very ignorance, we have kiss'd away Kingdoms and provinces

Eno How appears the fight?

Scar On our side like the token'd pestilence, Where death is sure Yon rmbaudred nag of Egypt,

Whom leprosy o'er'take! r' the midst o' the fight,
 When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
 Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
 The breeze upon her, like a cow in June,
 Hoists sails and flies.

Eno That I beheld
 Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view

Scar She once being loof'd,
 The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
 Claps on his sea-wing, and like a dotting mallard, Leaving the fight in height, flies after her
 I never saw an action of such shame,
 Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before Did violate so itself

Eno Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS

Can Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
 And sinks most lamentably Had our general
 Been what he knew himself, it had gone well
 O! he has given example for our fight
 Most grossly by his own.

Eno Ay, are you thereabouts?
 Why, then, good night, indeed

Can Towards Peloponnesus are they fled Scar 'Tis easy to't, and there I will attend
 What further comes.

Can To Cæsar will I render My legions and my horse, six kings already

Show me the way of yielding

Eno I'll yet follow

The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason

Sits in the wind against me [Exeunt]

SCENE IX.—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter ANTONY and Attendants

Ant Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't,

It is asham'd to bear me Friends, come hither
 I am so lated in the world that I Have lost my way for ever I have a ship
 Laden with gold, take that, divide it, fly,
 And make your peace with Cæsar

Att Fly! not we

Ant I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards

To run and show their shoulders Friends, be
 gone,

I have myself resolv'd upon a course
 Which has no need of you, be gone

My treasure's in the harbour, take it O!
 I follow'd that I blush to look upon:

My very hairs do mutiny, for the white Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them For fear and doting Friends, be gone, you shall

Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness, take the hint
 Which my despair proclaims, let that be left

Which leaves itself, to the sea-side straightway,
 I will possess you of that ship and treasure

Leave me, I pray, a little pray you now
 Nay, do so, for, indeed, I have lost command,

Therefore I pray you I'll see you by and by [Sits down]

Enter EROS following CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS

Eros Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort
 him

Irás Do, most dear queen

Char Do! Why, what else?

Cleo Let me sit down O Juno!

Ant No, no, no, no, no

Eros See you here, sir?

Ant O fie, fie, fie!

Char Madam!

Irás Madam, O good empress!

Eros Sir, sir!

Ant Yes, my lord, yes He, at Philippi kept His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck

The lean and wrinkled Cassius, and 'twas I
 That the mad Brutus ended he alone

Dealt on lieutenant, and no practice had In the brave squares of war yet now—No matter

Cleo Ah! stand by

Eros The queen, my lord, the queen

Irás Go to him, madam, speak to him,
 He is unqualtied with very shame.

44

Cleo Well then, sustain me O!
Eros Most noble sir, arise, the queen approaches Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but Your comfort makes the rescue 48
Ant I have offended reputation,
 A most un noble swerving -

Eros Sir, the queen
Ant O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
 See,
 How I convey my shame out of thine eyes 52
 By looking back what I have left behind
 'Stroy'd in dishonour

Cleo O my lord, my lord
 Forgive my fearful sails I little thought You would have follow'd

Ant Egypt, thou knew'st too well 56
 My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
 And thou shouldst tow me after, o'er my spirit Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods 60 Command me

Cleo O! my pardon
Ant Now I must
 To the young man send humble treaties, dodge And palter in the shifts of lowness, who With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I 64 pleas'd,
 Making and marring fortunes. You did know How much you were my conqueror, and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause

Cleo Pardon, pardon! 68
Ant Fall not a tear, I say, one of them rates
 All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss, Even this repays me. Went out schoolmaster,
 Is he come back? Love, I am full of lead. 72 Some wine, within there, and our viands! Fortune knows,
 We scorn her most when most she offers blows.

[Exeunt

SCENE X — Egypt CÆSAR'S Camp

Enter CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and Others

Cæs Let him appear that's come from Antony
 Know you him?

Dol Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster
 An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
 He sends so poor a pinnon of his wing, 4
 Which had superfluous kings for messengers Not many moons gone by

Enter EUPHRONIUS

Cæs Approach, and speak.
Euph Such as I am, I come from Antony 8
 I was of late as petty to his ends
 As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
 To his grand sea.

Cæs Be't so Declare thine office
Euph Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee,
 and
 Requires to live in Egypt, which not granted, 12
 He lessens his requests, and to thee sues

To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,

A private man in Athens, thus for him
 Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness, 16
 Submits ner to thy might and of thee craves
 The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
 Now hazarded to thy grace

Cæs For Antony,
 I have no ears to his request The queen 20
 Of audience nor desire shall fail, so she
 From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
 Or take his life there, thus if she perform,
 She shall not sue unheard. So to them both 24
Euph Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs Bring him through the bands
 [Exit EUPHRONIUS]

[To THYREUS] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time, dispatch

From Antony win Cleopatra, promise
 And in our name, what she requires, add
 more, 28

From thine invention, offers Women are not In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure

The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus,

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we 32
 Will answer as a law

Thyr Cæsar, I go
Cæs Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
 And what thou think'st his very action speaks
 In every power that moves

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exeunt

SCENE XI.—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS

Cleo What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno Think, and die.
Cleo Is Antony or we, in fault for this?
Eno Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason What though you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges

Frighted each other, why should he follow?
 The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship, at such a point, 8
 When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
 The mered question. 'Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
 And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prithee, peace. 12

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant Is that his answer?
Euph Ay, my lord.
Ant The queen shall then have courtesy, so she

Will yield us up?

Euph. He says so
Ant Let her know't. 16

To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
 And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
 With principalities.

Cleo That head, my lord?
Ant To him again. Tell him he wears the rose 20
 Of youth upon him, from which the world should note
 Something particular, his coin, ships, legions, May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail
 Under the service of a child as soon 24
 As I the command of Cæsar I dare him therefore
 To lay his gay comparisons apart,
 And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
 Ourselves alone I'll write it follow me 28
 [Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS] Eno [Aside] Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will
 Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show Against a sworder! I see men's judgments are A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward
 Do draw the inward quality after them, 33
 To suffer all alike That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast sub-du'd 36
 His judgment too

Enter an Attendant.

Att A messenger from Cæsar Cleo What! no more ceremony? See! my women,
 Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
 That kneel'd unto the buds Admit him, sir 40
 [Exit Attendant]
Eno [Aside] Mine honesty and I begin to square
 The loyalty well he'd to fools does make
 Our faith mere folly, yet he that can endure
 To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord, 44
 Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
 And earns a place i' the story

Enter THYREUS

Cleo Cæsar's will?
Thyr Hear it apart
Cleo None but friends, say boldly Thyr So, haply, are they friends to An-
 tony 48
Eno He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has,
 Or needs not us If Cæsar please, our master
 Will leap to be his friend, for us, you know Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's
Thyr So 52
 Thus then, thou most renown'd Cæsar en-treats,
 Not to consider in what case thou stand'st, Further than he is Cæsar Cleo Go on, right royal Thyr He knows that you embrace not An-
 tony 56
 As you did love, but as you fear'd him.
Cleo O!
Thyr The scars upon your honour therefore he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,

Not as deserv'd
Cleo He is a god, and knows 60
 What is most right Mine honour was not yielded,
 But conquer'd merely Eno [Aside] To be sure of that,
 I will ask Antony Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky,
 That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for 64
 Thy dearest quit thee [Exit]
Thyr Shall I say to Cæsar
 What you require of him? for he partly begs
 To be desir'd to give It much would please
 him,
 That of his fortunes you should make a staff 68
 To lean upon, but it would warm his spirits
 To hear from me you had left Antony,
 And put yourself under his shroud,
 The universal landlord
Cleo What's your name? 72
Thyr My name is Thyreus
Cleo Most kind messenger,
 Say to great Cæsar thus in deputation
 I kiss his conqu'ring hand, tell him, I am prompt
 To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel, 76
 Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
 The doom of Egypt.
Thyr 'Tis your noblest course
 Wisdom and fortune combating together,
 If that the former dare but what it can, 80
 No chance may shake it Give me grace to lay
 My duty on your hand
Cleo Your Cæsar's father oft,
 When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
 Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, 84
 As it rain'd kisses

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS

Ant Favours, by Jove that thunders!
 What art thou, fellow?
Thyr One that but performs
 The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
 To have command obey'd
Eno [Aside] You will be whipp'd 88 Ant Approach there! Ah, you kite! Now, gods and devils!
 Authority melts from me of late, when I cried
 'Ho!
 Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth,
 And cry, 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.

Enter Attendants

Take hence this Jack and whip him 93 Eno [Aside] 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp
 Than with an old one dying
Ant Moon and stars!
 Whip him Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries 96
 That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,
 Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,
 Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face 100
 And whine aloud for mercy, take him hence.

Thyr Mark Antony,—
Ant I tug him away, being whipp'd, Bring him again, this Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him 104
[Exeunt Attendants with THYREUS]
 You were half blasted ere I knew you ha!
 Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
 Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
 And by a gem of women, to be abus'd 108
 By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo Good my lord,—
Ant You have been a boggler ever
 But when we in our viciousness grow hard,— O misery on't!—the wise gods seal our eyes, 112
 In our own filth drop our clear judgments, make us Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
 To our confusion

Cleo 'Tis't come to this?
Ant I found you as a morsel, cold upon 116 Dead Caesar's trencher, nay, you were a fragment
 Of Cneus Pompey's, besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out, for, I am sure, 120 Though you can guess what temperance should
 be,
 You know not what it is

Cleo Wherefore is this?
Ant To let a fellow that will take rewards
 And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with 124
 My playfellow, your hand, this kingly seal
 And plighter of high hearts! O! that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
 The horned herd, for I have savage cause, 128
 And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS

Is he whipp'd?
First Att Soundly, my lord
Ant Cried he? and begg'd a' pardon?
First Att He did ask favour 133
Ant If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter, and be thou sorry

To follow Caesar in his triumph, since 136 Thou hast been whipp'd for following him henceforth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee, Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Caesar,

Tell him thy entertainment, look, thou say 140
 He makes me angry with him, for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am Not what he knew I was he makes me angry,
 And at this time most easy 'tis to do't, 144
 When my good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
 Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
 My speech and what is done, tell him he has 148 Hipparchus, my enfranchised bondman, whom He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
 As he shall like, to quit me urge it thou

Hence with thy stripes, be gone! 152
[Exit THYREUS.]

Cleo Have you done yet?
Ant Alack! our terrene moon
 Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone
 The fall of Antony

Cleo I must stay his time Ant To flatter Caesar, would you mingle
 eyes 156

With one that ties his points?
Cleo Not know me yet?

Ant Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo Ah! dear, if I be so,

From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
 And poison it in the source, and the first stone
 Drop in my neck as it determines, so 161

Dissolve my life. The next Caesarion smite, Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
 Together with my brave Egyptians all, 164

By the discandying of this pelleted storm, Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
 Have buried them for prey!

Ant I am satisfied
 Caesar sits down in Alexandria, where 168

I will oppose his fate. Our force by land Hath nobly held, our sever'd navy too Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear lady? 172

If from the field I shall return once more
 To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood,
 I and my sword will earn our chronicle
 There's hope in't yet

Cleo That's my brave lord! 176
Ant I will betreble-snew'd, hearted, breath'd,
 And fight maliciously, for when mine hours
 Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
 Of me for jests but now I'll set my teeth, 180

And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
 Let's have one other gaudy night call to me
 All my sad captains, fill our bowls once more,
 Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo It is my birth day 184
 I had thought to have held it poor, but, since
 my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant We will yet do well

Cleo Call all his noble captains to my lord Ant Doso, we'll speak to them, and to-night
 I'll force 189

The wine peep through their scars. Come on,
 my queen,

There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight I'll make death love me, for I will contend 192
 Even with his pestilent scythe

[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS.] Eno Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious

Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
 The dove will peck the estridge, and I see still, 196
 A diminution in our captain's brain

Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason

It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—Before Alexandria CÆSAR'S Camp

Enter CÆSAR, reading a letter, AGRIPPA MECÆNAS, and Others

Cæs He calls me boy, and chides as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt, my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods, dares me to personal combat,

Cæsar to Antony Let the old ruffian know 4
I have many other ways to die, meantime Laugh at his challenge

Mec Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted Even to falling Give him no breath, but now 8
Make boot of his distraction never anger
Made good guard for itself

Cæs Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight Within our files there are, 12
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And feast the army, we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste Poor Antony!
[Exeunt]

SCENE II—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Others

Ant He will not fight with me, Domitius

Eno No

Ant Why should he not?

Eno He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,

He is twenty men to one

Ant To-morrow, soldier, 4
By sea and land I'll fight or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno I'll strike, and cry, 'Take all'

Ant Well said, come on 8
Call forth my household servants, let's to-night
Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest, so hast thou, Thou, and thou, and thou you have serv'd me
well, 12
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo What means this?

Eno [Aside to CLEOPATRA] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant And thou art honest too
I wish I could be made so many men, 16
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service
So good as you have done

Servants The gods forbid!

Ant Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-
night, 20

Scant not my cups, and make as much of me
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command

Cleo [Aside to ENOBARBUS] What does he mean?

Eno [Aside to CLEOPATRA] To make his followers weep

Ant Tend me to-night, 24

May be it is the period of your duty Haply, you shall not see me more, or if,
A mangled shadow perchance to-morrow
You'll serve another master I look on you 28
As one that takes his leave Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away, but, like a master
Marr'd to your good service, stay till death
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, 32
And the gods yield you for't!

Eno What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep,
And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd for shame,
Transform us not to women

Ant Ho, ho, ho! 36
Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus!

Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense,
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire
you 40

To burn this night with torches Know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow, and will lead you Where rather I'll expect victorious life

Than death and honour Let's to supper,
come, 44

And drown consideration. [Exeunt]

SCENE III—The Same Before the Palace

Enter two Soldiers to their guard

First Sold Brother, good night, to-morrow is the day

Sec Sold It will determine one way, fare you well

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

First Sold Nothing What news? 4

Sec Sold Belike, 'tis but a rumour Good night to you.

First Sold Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Sec Sold Soldiers, have careful watch

Third Sold And you. Good night, good
night

[The first two place themselves at their posts]

Fourth Sold Here we [They take their posts]

And if to-morrow 9

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up

Third Sold 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of hautboys under the stage]

Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise?

First Sold List, list! 12

Sec Sold Hark!

First Sold. Music! the air

Thurd Sold Under the earth.
Fourth Sold It signs well, does it not?
Thurd Sold No
First Sold Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

Sec Sold 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd, 16

Now leaves him

First Sold Walk, let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do

Sec Sold [They advance to another post] How now, masters!

Soldiers How now!—

How now!—do you hear this?

First Sold Ay, is't not strange?

Thurd Sold Do you hear, masters? do you hear? 20

First Sold Follow the noise so far as we have quarter,

Let's see how't will give off

Soldiers [Speaking together] Content—'Tis strange [Exeunt]

SCENE IV—The Same A Room in the Palace

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and Others, attending Ant Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo Sleep a little

Ant No, my chuck. Eros, come, mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with armour

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on

If Fortune be not ours to-day, it is 4

Because we brave her Come

Cleo Nay, I'll help too

What's this for?

Ant Ah! let be, let be, thou art

The armourer of my heart false, false, thus,

thus

Cleo Sooth, la! I'll help thus it must be.

Ant Well, well, 8

We shall thrive now Seest thou, my good fellow?

Go put on thy defences

Eros Briefly, sir

Cleo Is not this buckled well?

Ant Rarely, rarely 12

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.

Thou fumblest, Eros, and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou dispatch. O love!

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st 16

The royal occupation, thou shouldst see

A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier

Good morrow to thee, welcome,

Thou look'st like him that knows a war-like charge

To business that we love we rise betime, 20

And go to't with delight.

Sold A thousand, sir,
 Early though't be, have on their inveterate trim,
 And at the port expect you.

[Shout Trumpets flourish]

Enter Captains and Soldiers

Capt The morn is fair Good morrow, 24

general

All Good morrow, general

Ant 'Tis well blown, lads

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes

So, so, come, give me that this way, well said 28

Fare thee well, dame whate'er becomes of me,

This is a soldier's kiss [Kisses her] Rebukeable

And worthy shameful check it were, to stand

On more mechanic compliment, I'll leave thee

Now, like a man of steel You that will fight, 33

Follow me close, I'll bring you to t Adieu

[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, Captains, and Soldiers]

Char Please you, retire to your chamber

Cleo Lead me

He goes forth gallantly That he and Caesar

might 36

Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—but now—Well, on. [Exeunt]

SCENE V—Alexandria. ANTONY'S Camp

Trumpets sound Enter ANTONY and EROS, a Soldier meeting them

Sold The gods make this a happy day to

Antony!

Ant Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold Hadst thou done so,

The kings that have revolted, and the soldier 4

That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Ant Who's gone this morning?

Sold Who!

One ever near thee call for Enobarbus,

He shall not hear thee, or from Caesar's camp 8

Say, 'I am none of thine',

Ant What sayst thou?

Sold Sir,

He is with Caesar

Eros Sir, his chests and treasure

He has not with him.

Ant Is he gone?

Sold Most certain.

Ant Go, Eros, send his treasure after, do it,

Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him— 13

I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings,

Say that I wish he never find more cause

To change a master O! my fortunes have 16

Corrupted honest men. Dispatch. Enobarbus!

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—Before Alexandria. CESAR'S Camp.

Flourish. Enter CESAR, with AGRIPPA, ENOBARBUS, and Others

Cas Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Our will is Antony be took alive,

Make it so known

Agr Caesar, I shall

[Exit

Cæs The time of universal peace is near Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger

Mess

Antony

Is come into the field.

Cæs Go charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury Upon himself [Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train

Eno Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on Affairs of Antony, there did persuade

Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar,
And leave his master Antony for this pains

Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest That fell away have entertainment, but

No honourable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely

That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold

Enobarbus, Antony 20

Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with

His bounty overplus the messenger

Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now

Unloading of his mules.

Eno

I give it you. 24

Sold Mock not, Enobarbus.

I tell you true best you saf'd the bringer

Out of the host, I must attend mine office

Or would have done't myself Your emperor 28

Continues still a Jove. [Exit

Eno I am alone the villain of the earth,

And feel I am so most. O Antony!

Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid 32

My better service, when my turpitude

Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean

Shall outstrike thought, but thought will do't,

I feel. 36

I fight against thee! No. I will go seek

Some ditch, wherein to die, the foul'st best fits

My latter part of life. [Exit

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps

Alarum. Drums and trumpets Enter AGRIPPA and Others

Agr

Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too

far

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression

Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt

Alarum Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded

Scar O my brave emperor, this is fought

indeed! 4

Had we done so at first, we had droven them

home

With clouts about their heads

Ant

I had a wound here that was like a T,

But now 'tis made an H.

Ant

They do retire 8

Scar We'll beat 'em into bench-holes I have

yet

Room for six scotches more

Enter EROS

Eros They are beaten, sir, and our advantage serves

For a fair victory

Scar Let us score their backs, 12

And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind

'Tis sport to maul a runner

Ant

I will reward thee

Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold

For thy good valour Come thee on

Scar

I'll halt after [Exeunt

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching, SCARUS, and Forces

Ant We have beat him to his camp, run

one before

And let the queen know of our gests Tomorrow,

Before the sun shall see's, we'll spill the blood

That has to-day escap'd I thank you all, 4

For doughty-handed are you, and have fought

Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been

Each man's like mine, you have shown all

Hectors

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, 8

Tell them your feats, whilst they with joyful

tears

Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss

The honour'd gashes whole [To SCARUS] Give me thy hand

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, 12

Make her thanks bless thee O thou day o' the world!

Chain mine arm'd neck, leap thou, attire and

all,

Through proof of harness to my heart, and there

Ride on the pants triumphing

Cleo

Lord of lords! 16

O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from

The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant

My nightingale,

We have beat them to their beds What, girl!

though grey

Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we 20

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can

Get goal for goal of youth Behold this man,

Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand

Kiss it, my warrior he hath fought to-day 24

As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo

I'll give thee, friend,

An armour all of gold, it was a king's.

Ant He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like holy Phoebus' car Give me thy hand 29
Through Alexandria make a jolly march, Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe
them

Had our great palace the capacity 32
To camp this host, we all would sup together
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear, 36
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines, That heaven and earth may strike their sounds
together,
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt

SCENE IX.—CÆSAR'S Camp

Sentinels on their post

First Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,

We must return to the court of guard the night
Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle
By the second hour i' the morn.

Sec Sold This last day was 4
A shrewd one to's.

Enter ENOBARBUS

Eno O! bear me witness, night,— Thurd Sold What man is this?
Sec Sold Stand close and hst hm.
Eno Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record 8
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!

First Sold Enobarbus!
Thurd Sold Peace!

Hark further
Eno O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night dispounce upon
me, 13

That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me, throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault, 16 Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,

-And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular; 20
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony! [Dies 24

Sec Sold Let's speak to him.
First Sold Let's hear him, for the things he speaks

May concern Cæsar.

Thurd Sold Let's do so. But he sleeps.
First Sold Swounds rather; for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleep
Sec Sold. Go we to him. 28

Thurd Sold Awake, sir, awake! speak to us Sec Sold. Hear you, sir?

First Sold. The hand of death hath raught
him.
[Drums afar off
Hark! the drums

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard, he is of note our hour Is fully out.

Thurd Sold Come on, then, 33
He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching

Ant Their preparation is to-day by sea,
We please them not by land

Scar For both, my lord.
Ant I would they'd fight i' the fire or i' the air,

We'd fight there too. But thus it is, our foot 4
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us, order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven, 7
Where their appointment we may best discover
And look on their endeavour [Exeunt

Enter CÆSAR, and his Forces, marching

Cæs But being charg'd, we will be still by
land,
Which, as I take't, we shall, for his best force Is forth to man his galleys To the vales, 12
And hold our best advantage! [Exeunt.

Re-enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant Yet they are not join'd. Where yond pine does stand

I shall discover all. I'll bring thee word Straight how 'tis like to go [Exit

Scar Swallows have built 16
In Cleopatra's sails their nests, the augurers Say they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony Is valiant, and dejected, and, by starts, 20
His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has and has not.

[Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant All is lost!
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me,
My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and yonder 24
They cast their caps up and carouse together Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore!

'tis thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly, 28
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all. Bid them all fly, be gone.
[Exit SCARUS.

O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more;
Fortune and Antony part here, even here 32 Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts

That spangl'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar, and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am. 37
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm, Whose eyesbeck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home,

Whose bosom was my crown, my chief end, 40
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose, Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss
What, Eros! Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah! thou spell Avaunt!

Cleo Why is my lord enrag'd against his
love? 44

Ant Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,

And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take
thee,

And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians,
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot 48

Of all thy sex, most monster-like, be shown For poor'st diminutives, for doits, and let

Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails [Exit CLEOPATRA]

'Tis well thou'rt gone, 52
If it be well to live, but better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death

Might have prevented many Eros, ho!
The shirt of Nessus is upon me, teach me, 56

Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage,
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon,

And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,

Subdue my worthiest self The witch shall die
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and

I fall 61
Under this plot. she dies for't. Eros, ho!

[Exit]

SCENE XI.—Alexandria A Room in the Palace

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN

Cleo Help me, my women! O! he is more mad

Than Telamon for his shield, the boar of Thessaly

Was never so emboss'd.

Char To the monument!
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead. 4

The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off

Cleo To the monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slam myself

Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony', 8
And word it, prithee, piteously Hence, Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death

To the monument! [Exeunt]

SCENE XII.—The Same Another Room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS

Ant Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros Ay, noble lord
Ant Sometimes we see a cloud that's dra-gonish,

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock, 4

A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world

And mock our eyes with air thou hast seen these signs,

They are black vesper's pageants

Eros Ay, my lord 8

Ant That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dissolves, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water

Eros It does, my lord
Ant My good knave, Eros, now thy captain 12

Even such a body here I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape my knave

I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen, 15
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine,
Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto t

A million more, now lost, she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph 20

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros, there is left us Ourselves to end ourselves

Enter MARDIAN

O! thy vile lady,

She has robb'd me of my sword

Mar No, Antony,
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mungled 24

With thine entirely
Ant Hence, saucy eunuch, peace!

She hath betray'd me and shall die the death Mar Death of one person can be paid but once,

And that she has discharg'd What thou wouldst do 28

Is done unto thy hand, the last she spake
Was, 'Antony! most noble Antony!'

Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony, it was divided 32

Between her heart and lips She render'd life, Thy name so buried in her

Ant Dead, then? Dead
Mar Dead

Ant Unarm, Eros, the long day's task is
done,

And we must sleep [To MARDIAN] That thou depart'st hence safe, 36

Does pay thy labour richly, go [Exit MARDIAN] Off, pluck off

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart O! cleave, my sides,

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent, 40

Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace
No more a soldier, bruised pieces, go,

You have been nobly borne. From me awhile
[Exit EROS]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and 44
Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is torture, since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no further Now all labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles 48
Itself with strength, seal then, and all is done

Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for
me.

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze, Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter EROS

Eros What would my lord?

Ant Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back

With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman, less noble mind Than she, which by her death our Cæsar tells
'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art sworn,

Eros,
Than, when the exigent should come,—which now

Is come indeed,—when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then wouldst kill me do't, the time is
come

Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cæsar thou defeat'st Put colour in thy cheek

Eros The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts, Though enemy, lost aim and could not?

Ant Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and
see

Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down

His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Cæsar, drawn before him, branded His baseness that ensu'd?

Eros I would not see't.
Ant Come, then, for with a wound I must be cur'd

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn

Most useful for thy country
Eros O, sir! pardon me

Ant When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent services are all

But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come, Eros Turn from me then that noble countenance,

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies Ant Lo thee! [Turning from him

Eros My sword is drawn.
Ant Then let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.
Eros My dear master,

My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant 'Tis said, man, and farewell.
Eros Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike
now?

Ant Now, Eros.

Eros Why, there then, thus do I escape the sorrow [Kills himself

Of Antony's death.

Ant Thrice-nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou couldst not My queen and Eros

Have by their brave instruction got upon me
A nobleness in record, but I will be A bridegroom in my death, and run into't too
As to a lover's bed. Come, then, and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar to do thus [Falls on his sword

I learn'd of thee. How! not dead? not dead?
The guard, ho! O! dispatch me

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

First Guard What's the noise? 104
Ant I have done my work ill, friends. O!
make an end

Of what I have begun.
Sec Guard The star is fallen.

First Guard And time is at his period.
All Alas, and woe!

Ant Let him that loves me strike me dead
First Guard Not I 108

Sec Guard Nor I.
Thrd Guard Nor any one [Exeunt Guard

Der Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly

This sword but shown to Cæsar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him. 112

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio Where's Antony?
Der There, Diomed, there

Dio Lives he?
Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit DERCETAS

Ant Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me 116

Sufficing strokes for death.
Dio Most absolute lord,

My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
Ant When did she send thee?

Dio Now, my lord.
Ant Where is she?

Dio Lock'd in her monument. She had a propheying fear 120

Of what hath come to pass, for when she saw—
Which never shall be found—you did suspect

She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead, 124

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaim the truth, and I am come,

I dread, too late
Ant Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard,

I prithee Dio What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho! 128

Come, your lord calls!

Enter four or five of the Guard of ANTONY

Ant Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides,

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

First Guard Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear 133
All your true followers out

All. Most heavy day!
Ant Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with your sorrows, bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it 137
Seeming to bear it lightly Take me up,
I have led you oft, carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. 140

[Exeunt, bearing ANTONY]

SCENE XIII.—The Same A Monument

Enter CLEOPATRA and her maids aloft, with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo O Charmian! I will never go from hence Char Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo No, I will not.
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise, our size of sorrow, 4 Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter, below, DIOMEDES.

How now! is he dead?
Dio His death's upon him, but not dead
Look out o' the other side your monument, 8
His guard have brought him thither

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo O sun!
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in, darkling
stand

The varying star o' the world O Antony, Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras,
help, 12

Help, friends below! let's draw him hither
Ant Peace!

Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself

Cleo So it should be, that none but Antony 16
Should conquer Antony, but woe 'tis so!

Ant I am dying, Egypt, dying, only I here importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last 20
I lay upon thy lips

Cleo I dare not, dear,—
Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not,
Lest I be taken not the imperious show
Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall 24
Be brooch'd with me, if knife, drugs, serpents, have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour 28 Demurring upon me. But come, come, Antony,—

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up Assist, good friends

Ant O! quick, or I am gone Cleo Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs
my lord! 32

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's
power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee
up,

And set thee by Jove's side Yet come a little, 36
Wishers were ever fools O! come, come, come,

[They heave ANTONY aloft to CLEOPATRA
And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast liv'd,

Quicken with kissing, had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All A heavy sight! 40
Ant I am dying, Egypt, dying

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little Cleo No, let me speak, and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel, 44

Provok'd by my offence
Ant One word, sweet queen

Of Cæsar seek your honour with your safety O!
Cleo They do not go together

Ant Gentle, hear me
None about Cæsar trust, but Proculeius 48

Cleo My resolution and my hands I'll trust,
None about Cæsar

Ant The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at, but please your thoughts

In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,

The noblest, and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to 56

My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd Now my spirit is going,
I can no more

Cleo Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide 60

In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty? O! see my women,

[ANTONY dies
The crown o' the earth doth melt My lord!

O! wither'd is the garland of the war, 64
The soldier's pole is fall'n, young boys and girls

Are level now with men, the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable

Beneath the visiting moon. [Swoons
Char O, quietness, lady! 68

Irás She is dead too, our sovereign Char Lady!

Irás Madam!
Char O madam, madam, madam!

Irás Royal Egypt!
Empress!

Char Peace, peace, Iras! 72
Cleo No more, but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares It were for me

To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods, 76
To tell them that this world did equal theirs

Till they had stol'n our jewel All's but naught, Patience is sottish, and impatience does

Become a dog that's mad, then is it sin 80
To rush into the secret house of death,

Ere death dare come to us? How do you,
women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian!

My noble girls! Ah, women, women, look! 84
 Our lamp is spent, it's out Good sirs, take heart,— We'll bury him, and then, what's brave, what's noble,
 Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
 And make death proud to take us Come, 88
 away,
 This case of that huge spirit now is cold;
 Ah! women, women. Come, we have no friend
 But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt, those above bearing off ANTONY's body]

ACT V

SCENE I—Alexandria CÆSAR's Camp

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MÆCENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others

Cæs Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield, Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
 The pauses that he makes

Dol Cæsar, I shall. [Exit]

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY

Cæs Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st 4
 Appear thus to us?

Der I am call'd Dercetas,
 Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd, whilst he stood up and spoke
 He was my master, and I wore my life 8
 To spend upon his haters If thou please
 To take me to thee, as I was to him
 I'll be to Cæsar, if thou pleasest not,
 I yield thee up my life

Cæs What is't thou sayst? 12

Der I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead

Cæs The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack, the round world
 Should have shook lions into civil streets, 16
 And citizens to their dens The death of Antony
 Is not a single doom in the name lay
 A moiety of the world

Der He is dead, Cæsar, 20
 Not by a public munster of justice,
 Nor by a hired knife, but that self hand,
 Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
 Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Split the heart This is his sword, 24
 I robb'd his wound of it, behold it stain'd
 With his most noble blood

Cæs Look you sad, friends?
 The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
 To wash the eyes of kings

Agr And strange it is, 28
 That nature must compel us to lament
 Our most persisted deeds

Mec His taints and honours
 Wag'd equal with him.

Agr A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity, but you, gods, will give us
 Some faults to make us men Cæsar is touch'd

Mec When such a spacious mirror is set before him,

He needs must see himself

Cæs O Antony!
 I have follow'd thee to this, but we do lance 36
 Diseases in our bodies I must perforce
 Have shown to thee such a declining day,
 Or look on thine, we could not stall together
 In the whole world. But yet let me lament, 40
 With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
 That thou, my brother, my competitor
 In top of all design, my mate in empire,
 Friend and companion in the front of war, 44
 The arm of mine own body, and the heart Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide
 Our equalness to this Hear me, good friends,—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meet season 49
 The business of this man looks out of him,
 We'll hear him what he says Whence are you?

Egyp A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress, 52

Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
 Of thy intents desires instruction,
 That she preparedly may frame herself
 To the way she's forc'd to Cæs Bid her have good heart, 56

 She soon shall know of us, by some of ours, How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her, for Cæsar cannot live
 To be ungente

Egyp So the gods preserve thee! 60
 [Exit]

Cæs Come hither, Proculeius Go and say,
 We purpose her no shame, give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require,
 Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke 64
 She do defeat us, for her life in Rome
 Would be eternal in our triumph Go,
 And with your speediest bring us what she says,
 And how you find of her

Pro Cæsar, I shall [Exit]
 Cæs Gallus, go you along [Exit GALLUS, Where's Dolabella,

To second Proculeius?

Agr } Dolabella!
 Mec }

Cæs Let him alone, for I remember now
 How he's employ'd, he shall in time be ready Go with me to my tent, where you shall see 73
 How hardly I was drawn into this war, How calm and gentle I proceeded still
 In all my writings Go with me, and see 76
 What I can show in this. [Exeunt]

SCENE II—The Same The Monument

Enter aloft, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar,
 Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,
 A munster of her will, and it is great 4
 To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
 Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change,

Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's

Cleo Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
sir,

Enter, below, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers

Pro Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt,

And bids thee study on what fair demands

Thou mean'st to have him grant thee

Cleo What's thy name?

Pro My name is Proculeius

Cleo Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you, but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,

That have no use for trusting. If your master

Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell

him,

That majesty, to keep decorum, must

No less beg than a kingdom if he please

To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son

He gives me so much of mine own as I

Will kneel to him with thanks

Pro Be of good cheer,

You're fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing

Make your full reference freely to my lord,

Who is so full of grace, that it flows over

On all that need, let me report to him

Your sweet dependancy, and you shall find

A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness

Where he for grace is kneel'd to

Cleo Pray you, tell him

I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him

The greatness he has got. I hourly learn

A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly

Look him i' the face

Pro This I'll report, dear lady

Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied

Of him that caus'd it

Gal You see how easily she may be surpris'd

[PROCULEIUS and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder, and come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates, discovering the lower room of the monument

[To PROCULEIUS and the Guard] Guard her till

Cæsar come. [Exit

Iras Royal queen!

Char O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen

Cleo Quick, quick, good hands

[Drawing a dagger

Pro Hold, worthy lady, hold!

[Seizes and disarms her

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this

Reliev'd, but not betray'd

Cleo What, of death too,

That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty by

The undoing of yourself, let the world see

His nobleness well acted, which your death

Will never let come forth.

Cleo Where art thou, death?

Come hither, come! come, come, and take a

queen

Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro O! temperance, lady

If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll run,

Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I

Will not wait union'd at your master's court,

Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye

Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up

And show me to the shouting varletry

Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt

Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud

Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water-flies

Blow me into abhorring! rather make

My country's high pyramids my gibbet,

And hang me up in chains!

Pro You do extend

These thoughts of horror further than you shall

Find cause in Cæsar

Enter DOLABELLA

Dol Proculeius,

What thou hast done thy master Cæsar knows,

And he hath sent for thee, as for the queen,

I'll take her to my guard.

Pro So, Dolabella,

It shall content me best, be gentle to her

[To CLEOPATRA] To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,

If you'll employ me to him

Cleo Say, I would die

[Exeunt PROCULEIUS and Soldiers

Dol Most noble empress, you have heard of

me?

Cleo I cannot tell

Dol Assuredly you know me

Cleo No matter, sir, what I have heard or

known

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams,

Is't not your trick?

Dol I understand not, madam

Cleo I dream'd there was an Emperor An-

tony

O! such another sleep, that I might see

But such another man

Dol If it might please ye,—

Cleo His face was as the heavens, and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth

Dol Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo His legs bestrid the ocean, his rear'd arm

Crested the world, his voice was property'd

As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends,

But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,

There was no winter in't, an autumn 'twas

That grew the more by reaping, his delights

Were dolphin-like, they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in, in his livery

Walk'd crowns and crownets, realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol Cleopatra,—

Cleo Think you there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Dol Gentle madam, no

Cleo You lie, up to the hearing of the gods
But, if there be, or ever were, one such, 96
It's past the size of dreaming, nature wants stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy, yet to imagine An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite

Dol Hear me, good madam 100
Your loss is as yourself, great, and you bear it As answering to the weight would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,

By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites 104
My very heart at root

Cleo I thank you, sir
Know you what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol I am loath to tell you what I would you knew

Cleo Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol Though he be honourable,— 108

Cleo He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol Madam, he will, I know't
[Within, 'Make way there!—Cæsar!]

Enter CÆSAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECÆNAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants

Cæs Which is the Queen of Egypt?

Dol It is the emperour, madam 112
[CLEOPATRA kneels]

Cæs Arise, you shall not kneel

I pray you, rise, rise, Egypt

Cleo Sir, the gods
Will have it thus, my master and my lord
I must obey

Cæs Take to you no hard thoughts, 116
The record of what injures you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance

Cleo Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well 120
To make it clear, but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before Have often sham'd our sex

Cæs Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce 124
If you apply yourself to our intents,— Which towards you are most gentle,—you shall find

A benefit in this change, but if you seek To lay on me a cruelty by taking 128
Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely I'll take my leave 132

Cleo And may through all the world 'tis yours, and we,
Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest,
shall

Hang in what place you please Here, my good
lord

Cæs You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo [Giving a Scroll] This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, 137

I am possess'd of 'tis exactly valued.

Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Sel Here, madam 140

Cleo This is my treasurer, let him speak, my
lord

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing Speak the truth, Seleucus

Sel Madam, 144

I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,

Speak that which is not

Cleo What have I kept back?

Sel Enough to purchase what you have made known

Cæs Nay, blush not, Cleopatra, I approve
Your wisdom in the deed

Cleo See! Cæsar! O, behold, 149

How pomp is follow'd, mine will now be yours,

And, should we shift estates, yours would be
mine

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does 152

Even make me wild O slave! of no more trust

Than love that's hir'd. What! goest thou back?

thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee, but I'll catch thine eyes,

Though they had wings slave, soulless villain, dog! 156

O rarely base!

Cæs Good queen, let us entreat you

Cleo O Cæsar! what a wounding shame is
this,

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,

Doing the honour of thy lordliness 160

To one so meek, that mine own servant should

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by

Addition of his envy Say, good Cæsar

That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, 164

Immortal toys, things of such dignity

As we greet modern friends withal and say,

Some nobler token I have kept apart

For Livia and Octavia, to induce 168

Their mediation, must I be unfolded

With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites
me

Beneath the fall I have [To SELEUCUS] Prithce, go hence,

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits 172

Through the ashes of my chance Wert thou a
man,

Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs Forbear, Seleucus

Cleo [Exit SELEUCUS]

Cleo Be it known that we, the greatest, are murthered

For things that others do, and, when we fall, 176

We answer others' merits in our name,

Are therefore to be pitied.

Cæs Cleopatra,

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,

Put we'll the roll of conquest still be't yours,

Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe, 181

Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with you

Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd,

Make not your thoughts your prisons no, dear queen, 184

For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel Feed, and sleep
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend, and so, adieu. 188

Cleo My master, and my lord!
Cæs Not so Adieu.

[Flourish Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.]

Cleo He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not Be noble to myself but, hark thee, Charmian

[Whispers CHARMIAN]

Iras Finish, good lady, the bright day is done, 192

And we are for the dark.

Cleo Hie thee again

I have spoke already, and it is provided,
Go, put it to the haste

Char. Madam, I will

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol Where is the queen?

Char Behold, sir [Exit
Cleo Dolabella] 196

Dol Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you thus Cæsar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three days 200
You with your children will he send before Make your best use of this, I have perform'd
Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo Dolabella,

I shall remain your debtor
Dol I your servant. 204

Adieu, good queen, I must attend on Cæsar

Cleo Farewell, and thanks

[Exit DOLABELLA.]

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shall be shown
In Rome, as well as I, mechanic slaves 208
With greasy aprons, rules and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view, in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour

Iras The gods forbid! 212

Cleo Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras Saucy lictors

Will catch at us, like strumpets, and scald rimmers Ballad us out o' tune, the quick comedians

Extemporally will stage us, and present 216
Our Alexandrian revels Antony

Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' the posture of a whore

Iras O, the good gods! 220

Cleo Nay, that's certain.

Iras I'll never see it, for, I am sure my nails Are stronger than mine eyes

Cleo Why, that's the way

To fool their preparation, and to conquer 224
Their most absurd intents.

Re-enter CHARMIAN

Now, Charmian,

Show me, my women, like a queen, go fetch
My best attires, I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony Sirrah Iras, go 228
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed,
And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave

To play till doomsday Bring our crown and all [Exit IRAS A noise heard

Wherefore's this noise?

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard Here is a rural fellow 232
That will not be denied your highness' presence
He brings you figs

Cleo Let him come in [Exit Guard] What poor an instrument

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty 236
My resolution 's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me, now from head to foot
I am marble-constant, now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a basket

Guard This is the man 240
Cleo Avoid, and leave him [Exit Guard
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clo Truly, I have him, but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal, those that do die of it do seldom or never recover

Cleo Remember'st thou any that have died on't? 248

Clo Very many, men and women too I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm, but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm 258

Cleo Get thee hence, farewell

Clo I wish you all joy of the worm 260 [Sets down the basket]

Cleo Farewell

Clo You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind

Cleo Ay, ay, farewell. 264

Clo Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people, for indeed there is no goodness in the worm

Cleo Take thou no care, it shall be heeded Clo Very good Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding 270

Cleo Will it eat me?

Clo You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five 278

Cleo Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clo Yes, forsooth, I wish you joy of the worm
[Exit

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c

Cleo Give me my robe, put on my crown, I have 282

Immortal longings in me, now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip Yare, yare, good Iras, quick. Methinks I hear Antony call, I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act, I hear him mock
The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men 288
To excuse their after wrath husband, I come Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire, and air, my other elements
I give to baser life So, have you done? 292
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips
Farewell, kind Charmian, Iras, long farewell [Kisses them IRAS falls and dies

Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part, 296
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking 300

Char Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say,
The gods themselves do weep

Cleo This proves me base
If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have Come, thou mortal
wretch, 305

[To the asp, which she applies to her breast
With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie, poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and dispatch O! couldst thou
speak, 308
That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass Unpoliced

Char O eastern star!
Cleo Peace, peace!
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char O, break! O, break! 312
Cleo As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,— O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too [Applying another asp to her arm

What should I stay— [Dies Char In this vile world? So, fare thee
well 316

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close,
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown s'awry, 320
I'll mend it, and then play

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?

Char Speak softly, wake her not.

First Guard Cæsar hath sent—

Char Too slow a messenger [Applies an asp

O! come apace, dispatch, I partly feel thee. 324
First Guard Approach, ho! All's not well, Cæsar's begun'd

Sec Guard There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar, call him

First Guard What work is here! Charmian, is this well done?

Char It is well done, and fitting for a princess 328

Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah! soldier

[Dies

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol How goes it here?

Sec Guard All dead

Dol Cæsar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this, thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou 333
So sought'st to hinder

[Within, 'A way there!—a way for Cæsar!'

Re-enter CÆSAR and all his Train

Dol O! sir, you are too sure an augurer

That you did fear is done

Cas Bravest at the last, 336

She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol Who was last with them?

First Guard A simple countryman that brought her figs 340

This was his basket

Cas Poison'd then.

First Guard O Cæsar!
This Charmian liv'd but now, she stood, and spake

I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress, tremblingly she stood, 344
And on the sudden dropp'd

Cas O noble weakness!

If they had swallow'd poison 'twould appear
By external swelling, but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony 348

In her strong toil of grace

Dol Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown,
The like is on her arm

First Guard This is an asp's trail, and these fig-leaves 352

Have slime upon them, such as the asp leaves
Upon the caves of Nile

Cas Most probable

That so she died, for her physician tells me
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite 356

Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument.

She shall be buried by her Antony
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it 360

A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them, and their story is

No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,

In solemn show, attend this funeral, 365
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity [Exeunt

ACT I

SCENE I.—Britain The Garden of CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter two Gentlemen

First Gent You do not meet a man but frowns, our bloods
 No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
 Still seem as does the king

Sec Gent But what's the matter?

First Gent His daughter, and the heir of s kingdom, whom
 He purpos'd to his wife's sole son,—a widow
 That late he married,—hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded,

Her husband banish'd, she imprison'd all
 Is outward sorrow, though I think the king
 Be touch'd at very heart

Sec Gent None but the king?

First Gent He that hath lost her too, so is the queen

That most desir'd the match, but not a courtier, Although they wear their faces to the bent
 Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at Sec Gent And why so?

First Gent He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing

Too bad for bad report, and he that hath her,—
 I mean that married her, alack! good man!
 And therefore banish'd—is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth
 For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he

Sec Gent You speak him far

First Gent I do extend him, sir, within himself,

Crush him together rather than unfold
 His measure duly

Sec Gent What's his name and birth?

First Gent I cannot delve him to the root his father

Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
 Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
 But had his titles by Tenantius whom He serv'd with glory and admir'd success,
 So gain'd the sur addition Leonatus,
 And had, besides this gentleman in question,
 Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time Died with their swords in hand, for which their father—

Then old and fond of issue—took such sorrow
 That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
 Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
 As he was born The king, he takes the babe
 To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,

Breeds him and makes him of his bedchamber,
 Puts to him all the learnings that his time Could make him the receiver of, which he took,
 As we do air, fast as twas minister'd,
 And in's spring became a harvest, liv'd in court,—

Which rare it is to do—most prais'd, most lov'd,
 A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
 A glass that feated them, and to the graver
 A child that guided dotards, to his mistress,
 For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
 Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue,
 By her election may be truly read What kind of man he is

Sec Gent I honour him,
 Even out of your report But pray you, tell me,
 Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent His only child
 He had two sons,—if this be worth your hearing, Mark it,—the eldest of them at three years old,
 I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stol'n, and to this hour no guess in knowledge 60

Which way they went

Sec Gent How long is this ago?

First Gent Some twenty years

Sec Gent That a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow, 64
That could not trace them!

First Gent Howsoe'er 'tis strange, Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir

Sec Gent I do well believe you.

First Gent We must forbear Here comes 68
the gentleman,

The queen, and princess [Exit

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN

Queen No, be assur'd you shall not find me,
daughter,

After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you, you re my prisoner, but 72
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys That lock up your restraint For you, Posthumus,

So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate, marry, yet 76
The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day

Queen You know the peril 80
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the king Hath charg'd you should not speak together [Exit

Imo O!
Dissembling courtesy How fine this tyrant 84
Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband,

I something fear my father's wrath, but nothing,—

Always reserv'd my holy duty,—what
His rage can do on me You must be gone, 88
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again

Post My queen! my mistress! 92
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness

Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyal st husband that did e'er plight troth
My residence in Rome at one Philario's, 97
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter, thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, 100

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN

Queen Be brief, I pray you,
If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure. [Aside] Yet I'll move him

To walk this way I never do him wrong, 104
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,

Pays dear for my offences [Exit

Post Should we be taking leave

As long a term as yet we have to live,

The loathness to depart would grow Adieu! 109

Imo Nay, stay a little

Were you but riding forth to air yourself

Such parting were too petty Look here, love,

This diamond was my mother's, take it, heart,

But keep it till you woo another wife, 113

When Imogen is dead.

Post How! how! another?

You gentle gods, give me but this I have,

And sear up my embracements from a next 116

With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here [Putting on the ring

While sense can keep it on! And, sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,

To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120

I still win of you, for my sake wear this,

It is a manacle of love, I'll place it

Upon this fairest prisoner

[Putting a bracelet on her arm

Imo O the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords

Post Alack! the king! 124

Cym Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If after this command thou fraught the court

With thy unworthiness, thou diest Away!

Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post The gods protect you 128

And bless the good remainders of the court!

I am gone [Exit

Imo There cannot be a pinch in death

More sharp than this is

Cym O disloyal thing,

That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st instead 132

A year's age on me.

Imo I beseech you, sir,

Harm not yourself with your vexation,

I am senseless of your wrath, a touch more rare

Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym Past grace? obedience?

Imo Past hope, and in despair, that way, 137 past grace

Cym That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle

And did avoid a puttock. 140

Cym Thou took'st a beggar, wouldst have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo No, I rather added

A lustre to it.

Cym O thou vile one!

Imo Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus,

You bred him as my playfellow, and he is 145

A man worth any woman, overbuys me

Almost the sum he pays Cym What! art thou mad?
Imo Almost, sir, heaven restore me! Would I were 148
 A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus
 Our neighbour shepherd's son!
Cym. Thou foolish thing!

Re-enter QUEEN

They were agam together, you have done
 Not after our command. Away with her, 152
 And pen her up
Queen Beseech your patience Peace!
 Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort
 Out of your best advice.
Cym Nay, let her languish 156
 A drop of blood a day, and, being aged,
 Die of this folly!

Queen. [Exeunt CYMBELINE and Lords
 Fie! you must give way

Enter PISANIO

Here is your servant How now, sir! What news?

Pis My lord your son drew on my master
Queen Ha! 160

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis There might have been,
 But that my master rather play'd than fought,
 And had no help of anger, they were parted
 By gentlemen at hand

Queen I am very glad on't 164 Imo Your son's my father's friend, he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
 I would they were in Affric both together,
 Myself by with a needle, that I might prick 168 The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis On his command he would not suffer me
 To bring him to the haven, left these notes
 Of what commands I should be subject to, 172
 When't pleas'd you to employ me

Queen Thus hath been Your faithful servant, I dare lay mine honour
 He will remain so

Pis I humbly thank your highness
Queen Pray, walk awhile

Imo [To PISANIO] About some half-hour
 hence, 176
 I pray you, speak with me You shall at least Go see my lord aboard, for this time leave me
 [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same A Public Place

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

First Lord Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt, the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice Where air comes out, air comes in, there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent. 5

Clo If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
 Have I hurt him?

Sec Lord [Aside] No faith, not so much as his patience 9

First Lord Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt, it is a throughfare 12 for steel if it be not hurt.

Sec Lord [Aside] His steel was in debt it went o' the backside the town.

Clo The villain would not stand me Sec Lord [Aside] No, but he fled forward still, toward your face 17

First Lord Stand you! You have land enough of your own, but he added to your having, gave you some ground. 20

Sec Lord [Aside] As many inches as you have oceans Puppies!

Clo I would they had not come between us 24

Sec Lord [Aside] So would I till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground

Clo And that she should love this fellow and refuse me! 29

Sec Lord [Aside] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned

First Lord Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together, she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Sec Lord [Aside] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her 37

Clo Come, I'll to my chamber Would there had been some hurt done!

Sec Lord [Aside] I wish not so, unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo You'll go with us?

First Lord I'll attend your lordship 44

Clo Nay, come, let's go together

Sec Lord Well, my lord. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—A Room in CYMBELINE's Palace

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO

Imo I would thou grew'st unto the shores of the haven,
 And question'dst every sail if he should write,
 And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost.

As offer'd mercy is What was the last 4
 That he spake to thee?

Pis It was his queen, his queen!

Imo Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis And kiss'd it, madam

Imo Senseless linen, happier therein than I!
 And that was all?

Pis No, madam, for so long 8
 As he could make me with this eye or ear Distinguish him from others, he did keep
 The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
 Still waving, as the fits and starts of's mind 12 Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
 How swift his ship

Imo Thou shouldst have made him
 As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him

Pis. Madam, so I did. 16

Imo I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the dimmution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle,
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from 20
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then Have turn'd mine eye, and wept But, good Pisano,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage 24

Imo I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say, ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours Such thoughts and such, or I could make him swear 28

The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest and his honour, or have charg'd
him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons, for then 32
I am in heaven for him, or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwix two charming words, comes in my father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the north Shakes all our buds from growing

Enter a Lady

Lady The queen, madam, 37
Desires your highness' company

Imo Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd

I will attend the queen

Pis Madam, I shall. [Exeunt

SCENE IV — *Rome A Room in PHILARIO'S
House*

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard

Iach Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain, he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of, but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by iters 8

Phi You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within

French I have seen him in France we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he 14

Iach This matter of marrying his king's daughter,—wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own,—words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter

French And then, his banishment. 19

Iach Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance? 26

Phi His father and I were soldiers together, to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life Here comes the Briton let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality 32

Enter POSTHUMUS

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine, how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing 37

French Sir, we have known together in Orleans

Post Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 42

French Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness.
I was glad I did atone my countryman and you, it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature 48

Post By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller, rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences, but, upon my mended judgment,—if I offend not to say it is mended,— my quarrel was not altogether slight 54

French Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both

Iach Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference? 60

French Safely, I think 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses, this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, vir-tuous, wise, chaste constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France

Iach That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out 72

Post She holds her virtue still and I my mind

Iach You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy 76

Post Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend. 79

Iach As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlusters many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady 87

Post I praised her as I rated her, so do I my stone.

Iach What do you esteem it at?

Post More than the world enjoys Iach Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle 93

Post You are mistaken, the one may be sold, or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift, the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods

Iach Which the gods have given you?

Post Which, by their graces, I will keep 100

Iach You may wear her in title yours, but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds Your ring may be stolen, too, so your brace of unprizeable estimations the one is but frail and the other casual, a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last 107

Post Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves, notwithstanding I fear not my ring 113

Phi Let us leave here, gentlemen

Post Sir, with all my heart This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me, we are familiar at first. 117

Iach With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend. 121

Post No, no

Iach I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something, but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation, and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world

Post You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion, and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach What's that? 132

Post A repulse, though your attempt, as you call it, deserves more,—a punishment too

Phi Gentlemen, enough of this, it came in too suddenly, let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted. 137

Iach Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke! 140

Post What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach Yours, whom in constancy you think stands so safe I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved

Post I will wage against your gold, gold to it my ring I hold dear as my finger, 'tis part of it

Iach You are afraid, and therein the wiser
 If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear 154

Post This is but a custom in your tongue, you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear 158

Post Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return Let there be covenants drawn between s my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking, I dare you to this match Here s my ring

Phi I will have it no lay 164

Iach By the gods, it is one If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours, so is your diamond too if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours, provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment 173

Post I embrace these conditions, let us have articles betwixt us Only, thus far you shall answer if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand that you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate if she remain unseduced,—you not making it appear otherwise, —for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword. 183

Iach Your hand, a covenant We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded 188

Post Agreed

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO

French Will this hold, think you?

Phi Signior Iachimo will not from it Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt

SCENE V—Britain A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS

Queen Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers

Make haste, who has the note of them?

First Lady I, madam

Queen Dispatch [Exeunt Ladies

Now, Master doctor, have you brought those drugs? 4

Cor Pleaseth your highness, ay, here they are, madam [Presenting a small box

But I beseech your Grace, without offence,— My conscience bids me ask,—wherefore you have

Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, 8

Which are the movers of a languishing death,
 But though slow, deadly?

Queen I wonder, doctor,

Thou ask'st me such a question have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so 13
 That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,—

Unless thou think'st me devilish,—is't not meet 16
 That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging,—but none human,— 20
 To try the vigour of them and apply Allayments to their act, and by them gather Their several virtues and effects
 Cor Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your
 heart, 24
 Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious Queen O! content thee

Enter PISANIO

[Aside] Here comes a flattering rascal, upon
 him
 Will I first work he's for his master, 28
 And enemy to my son How now, Pisanio!
 Doctor, your service for this time is ended,
 Take your own way
 Cor [Aside] I do suspect you, madam,
 But you shall do no harm
 Queen [To PISANIO] Hark thee, a word.
 Cor [Aside] I do not like her She doth think she has 33
 Strange lingering poisons, I do know her spirit,
 And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense awhile, 37 Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs,
 Then afterward up higher, but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, 40
 More than the locking-up the spirits a time,
 To be more fresh, reviving She is fool'd
 With a most false effect, and I the truer,
 So to be false with her

Queen. No further service, doctor, 44
 Until I send for thee
 Cor I humbly take my leave

Queen Weeps she still, sayst thou? Dost thou think in time
 She will not quench, and let instructions enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work 48 When thou shalt bring me word she loves my
 son,
 I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then As great as is thy master, greater, for His fortunes all he speechless, and his name 52 Is at last gasp, return he cannot, nor Continue where he is, to shift his being
 Is to exchange one misery with another,
 And every day that comes comes to decay 56
 A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
 To be depender on a thing that leans,
 Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,
 So much as but to prop him?

[The QUEEN drops the box PISANIO takes it up
 Thou tak'st up 60

Thou know'st not what, but take it for thy labour
 It is a thing I made, which hath the king
 Five times redeem'd from death, I do not know What is more cordial nay, I prithee, take it, 64
 It is an earnest of a further good That I mean to thee Tell thy mistress how
 The case stands with her, do't as from thyself Think what a chance thou changest on, but think 68
 Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son, Who shall take notice of thee I'll move the
 king
 To any shape of thy preferment such As thou'lt desire, and then myself, I chiefly, 72
 That set thee on to this desert, am bound
 To load thy merit richly Call my women, Think on my words [Exit PISANIO]

A sly and constant knave,
 Not to be shak'd, the agent for his master, 76
 And the remembrancer of her to hold The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him
 that
 Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
 Of leigers for her sweet, and which she after, 80
 Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd
 To taste of too

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies

So, so,—well done, well done
 The violets, cowslips, and the prime-roses Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio 84
 Think on my words

[Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies.]

Pis And shall do
 But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
 I'll choke myself, there's all I'll do for you.
 [Exit.]

SCENE VI — The Same Another Room in the Palace

Enter IMOGEN

Imo A father cruel, and a step-dame false,
 A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
 That hath her husband banish'd O! that husband,
 My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n, 5
 As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
 Is the desire that's glorious bless'd be those,
 How mean so'er, that have their honest wills, 8 Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
 Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO

Pis Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
 Comes from my lord with letters.
 Iach. Change you, madam? 12
 The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
 And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a letter
 Thanks, good sir

Imo You are kindly welcome.
 Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door most rich!

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, 16
 She is alone the Arabian bird, and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
 Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
 Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight, 20 Rather, directly fly

Imo He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest

LEONATUS

So far I read aloud,
 But even the very middle of my heart 27
 Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully
 You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you, and shall find it so
 In all that I can do

Iach Thanks, fairest lady What! are men mad? Hath nature given them
 eyes 32

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
 Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
 The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones
 Upon the number'd beach? and can we not 36 Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo What makes your admiration?

Iach It cannot be i' the eye, for apes and monkeys

'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way and 40
 Contemn with mows the other, nor i' the judgment,

For idiots in this case of favour would Be wisely definite, nor i' the appetite,
 Sluttery to such neat excellence oppos'd 44
 Should make desire vomit emptiness,
 Not so allur'd to feed

Imo What is the matter, trow?

Iach The cloyed will,—
 That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub 48 Both fill'd and running,—ravening first the lamb,

Longs after for the garbage

Imo What, dear sir,
 Thus raps you? are you well?

Iach Thanks, madam, well
 [To PISANIO] Beseech you, sir, 52
 Desire my man's abode where I did leave him, He's strange and peevish

Pis. I was going, sir

To give him welcome. [Exit Imo Continues well my lord his health, beseech you? 56

Iach Well, madam

Imo Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is Iach Exceeding pleasant, none a stranger
 there

So merry and so gamesome he is call'd 60
 The Briton reveller

Imo When he was here
 He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
 Not knowing why

Iach I never saw him sad.
 There is a Frenchman his companion, one, 64
 An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
 loves

A Gallian girl at home he furnaces
 The taick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton—
 Your lord, I mean—laughs from 's free lungs, cries, O! 68
 Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,
 What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose But must be, will his free hours languish for 72 Assured bondage?

Imo Will my lord say so?

Iach Ay madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter

It is a recreation to be by
 And hear him mock the Frenchman, but, heavens know, 76

Some men are much to blame
Imo Not he, I hope

Iach Not he, but yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much,
 In you,—which I account his beyond all talents, 80

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
 To pity too

Imo What do you pity, sir?

Iach Two creatures, heartily
Imo Am I one, sir?

You look on me what wrack discern you in
 me 84

Deserves your pity?

Iach Lamentable! What!
 To hide me from the radiant sun and solace
 I' the dungeon by a snuff! 44

Imo I pray you, sir,
 Deliver with more openness your answers 88
 To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach That others do,
 I was about to say, enjoy your—But It is an office of the gods to venge it, 92
 Not mine to speak on't

Imo You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me, pray
 you,—

Since doubting things go ill often hurts more Than to be sure they do, for certainties 96
 Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
 The remedy then born,—discover to me
 What both you spur and stop

Iach Had I this cheek
 To bathe my lips upon, this hand, whose touch, Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
 To the oath of loyalty, this object, which 102
 Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye, Firing it only here, should I—damn'd then—Slave with lips as common as the stairs 105
 That mount the Capitol join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood,—falsehood, as

With labour,—then by-peeping in an eye, 108
 Base and illustrious as the smoky light

That's fed with stinking tallow, it were fit
 That all the plagues of hell should at one time Encounter such revolt

Imo My lord, I fear, 112

Has forgot Britain.

Iach And himself Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change, but tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue Charms this report out

Imo Let me hear no more 117
Iach O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick A lady
So fair,—and fasten'd to an empery 120 Would make the great'st king double,—to be partner'd

With tom-boys hir'd with that self-exhibition Which your own coffers yield! with disease'd ventures

That play with all infirmities for gold 124
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil d stuff

As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd,
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you Recoil from your great stock

Imo Reveng'd! 128
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse,—if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach Should he make me 132
Live like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets, Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure, 136
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure

Imo What ho, Pisanio!

Iach Let me my service tender on your lips

Imo Away! I do condemn mine ears that have 141

So long attended thee If thou wert honourable,

Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue,
not

For such an end thou seek'st, as base as strange 144

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains

Thee and the devil alike What ho, Pisanio! 148

The king my father shall be made acquainted

Of thy assault, if he shall think it fit,

A saucy stranger in his court to mart

As in a Romish stew and to expound 152

His beastly mind to us, he hath a court

He little cares for and a daughter who

He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach O happy Leonatus! I may say 156

The credit that thy lady hath of thee

Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long!

A lady to the worthiest sir that ever 160

Country call'd has, and you his mistress, only

For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.

I have spoken this, to know if your amance

Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord
That which he is, new o'er, and he is one 165
The truest manner'd, such a holy witch
That he enchants societies into him, Half all men's hearts are his

Imo You make amends 168

Iach He sits 'mongst men like a descended god

He hath a kind of honour sets him off,

More than a mortal seeming Be not angry,

Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd 172

To try your taking of a false report, which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment

In the election of a sir so rare,

Which you know cannot err The love I bear 176

him

Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made
you,

Unlike all others chaffless Pray, your pardon

Imo All's well, sir Take my power i' the court for yours

Iach My humble thanks I had almost forgot 180

To entreat your Grace but in a small request,

And yet of moment too, for it concerns

Your lord, myself, and other noble friends,

Are partners in the business

Imo Pray, what is't? 184

Iach Some dozen Romans of us and your
lord,

The best feather of our wing, have mingled sums

To buy a present for the emperor,

Which I, the factor for the rest, have done 188

In France, 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels

Of rich and exquisite form, their values great,

A am something curious, being strange,

I ve them in safe stowage May it please 192

you

To take them in protection?

Imo Willingly,

And pawn mine honour for their safety since

My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them

In my bedchamber

Iach They are in a trunk, 196

Attended by my men, I will make bold

To send them to you, only for this night,

I must aboard to-morrow

Imo O! no, no

Iach Yes, I beseech, or I shall short my word 200

By lengthening my return From Galha

I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise

To see your Grace

Imo I thank you for your pains,

But not away to-morrow!

Iach O! I must, madam 204

Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please

To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night

I have outstood my time, which is material

To the tender of our present.

Imo I will write 208

Send your trunk to me, it shall safe be kept,

And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I.—Britain Before CYMBELINE'S PalaceEnter CLOTEN and two Lords

Clo Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't, and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure

First Lord What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl

Sec Lord [Aside] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out

Clo When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

Sec Lord No, my lord, [Aside] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank!

Sec Lord [Aside] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth. A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Sec Lord [Aside] You are cock and capon too, and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo Sayest thou?

Sec Lord It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to

Clo No, I know that, but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors

Sec Lord Ay, it is fit for your lordship only

Clo Why, so I say

First Lord Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo A stranger, and I not know on't!

Sec Lord [Aside] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not

First Lord There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends

Clo Leonatus! a banished rascal, and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

First Lord One of your lordship's pages.

Clo Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

First Lord You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo Not easily, I think.

Sec Lord [Aside] You are a fool, granted, therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate

Clo Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go Sec Lord I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and First Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother

Should yield the world this ass! a woman that 60
Bears all down with her brain, and thus her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart
And leave eighteen. Alas! poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st 64
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd,
A mother hourly coming plots, a wooer More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act 68
Of the divorce he'd make. The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour, keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind, that thou mayst
stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land!
[Exit]

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber, in one part of it a Trunk

IMOGEN reading in her bed a Lady attending

Imo Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady Please you, madam

Imo What hour is it?

Lady Almost midnight, madam

Imo I have read three hours then, mine eyes are weak,

Fold down the leaf where I have left, to bed 4

Take not away the taper, leave it burning,

And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,

I prithee, call me. Sleep has seized me wholly

[Exit Lady]

To your protection I commend me, gods! 8

From fairies and the tempters of the night

Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps]

IACHIMO comes from the trunk

Iach The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus 12

Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd

The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,

How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily,

And whiter than the sheets! That I might 16 touch!

But kiss one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,

How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus, the flame of the taper

Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids, 20

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied

Under these windows, white and azure lac'd

With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,

To note the chamber. I will write all down 24

Such and such pictures, there the window, such

Th' adornment of her bed, the arras, figures,

Why, such and such, and the contents o' the story

Ah! but some natural notes about her body, 28

Above ten thousand meaner moveables

Would testify, to enrich mine inventory

O sleep! thou ape of death, he dull upon her,

And be her senses but as a monument 32

Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off,—

[Taking off her bracelet]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
 'Tis mine, and thus will witness outwardly,
 As strongly as the conscience does within, 36
 To the madding of her lord On her left breast
 A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
 I the bottom of a cowslip here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make this secret 40
 Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en
 The treasure of her honour No more To what end?
 Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late 44
 The tale of Tereus, here the leaf's turn'd down Where Philomel gave up I have enough
 To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning 48
 May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear, Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here [Clock strikes
 One, two, three time, time!
 [Goes into the trunk The scene closes

SCENE III—An Ante chamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartments

Enter CLOTEN and Lords

First Lord Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace

Clo It would make any man cold to lose 4
 First Lord But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship You are most hot and furious when you win

Clo Winning will put any man into courage
 If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough It's almost morning, is't not?

First Lord Day, my lord 11
 Clo I would this music would come I am advised to give her music o' mornings, they say it will penetrate

Enter Musicians

Come on, tune If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so, we'll try with tongue too if none will do, let her remain, but I'll never give o'er First, a very excellent good-concanted thing, after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it and then let her consider 21

SONG

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
 And Phoebus gins arise,
 His steeds to water at those springs 24
 On chalid flowers that lies
 And winking Mary buds begin
 To open their golden eyes
 With every thing that pretty is 28
 My lady sweet, arise Arise, arise!

So, get you gone If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better, if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'- guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Exeunt Musicians.

Sec Lord Here comes the king. 36

Clo I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early, he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother 41

Cym Attend you here the door of our stern
 daughter?

Will she not forth?

Clo I have assail'd her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice 45

Cym The exile of her minion is too new,
 She hath not yet forgot him, some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, 48
 And then she's yours

Queen You are most bound to the king,
 Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter Frame yourself
 To orderly soliciting, and be friended 52
 With aptness of the season, make denials Increase your services, so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her, that you in all obey her 56
 Save when command to your dismissal tends,
 And therein you are senseless

Clo Senseless! not so

Enter a Messenger

Mess So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome,

The one is Caius Lucius

Cym A worthy fellow, 60

Albeit he comes on angry purpose now,
 But that's no fault of his we must receive him
 According to the honour of his sender,
 And towards himself, his goodness forespent on us, 64

We must extend our notice Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the queen and us, we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen. [Exeunt all but CLOTEN.

Clo If she be up, I'll speak with her, if not,
 Let her lie still, and dream. By your leave, ho!

[Knocks

I know her women are about her What
 If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold 72 Which buys admittance, oft it doth, yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer, and 'tis gold

Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief, 76

Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man.
 What

Can it lot do and undo? I will make
 One of her women lawyer to me, for I yet not understand the case myself. 80
 By your leave, [Knocks.

Enter a Lady

Lady Who's there, that knocks?

Clo A gentleman

Lady No more?

Clo Yes, and a gentlewoman's son

Lady [Aside] That's more Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours 84
Can justly boast of What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo Your lady's person is she ready?

Lady Ay,
To keep her chamber

Clo There's gold for you, sell me your good report 88

Lady How! my good name? or to report of
you
What I shall think is good?—The princess!

Enter IMOGEN

Clo Goodmorrow, farrest, sister, yoursweet hand [Exit Lady]

Imo Goodmorrow, sir You lay out too much pains 92
For purchasing but trouble, the thanks I give Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
And scarce can spare them

Clo Still, I swear I love you.

Imo If you but said so, 'twere as deep with
me 96
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not

Clo This is no answer

Imo But that you shall not say I yield being silent

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy 101
To your best kindness One of your great knowing

Should learn, being taught, forbearance

Clo To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin 104
I will not.

Imo Fools cure not mad folks

Clo Do you call me fool?

Imo As I am mad, I do
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad, 108
That cures us both I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal, and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce
By the very truth of it, I care not for you, 113
And am so near the lack of charity,— To accuse myself,—I hate you, which I had rather

You felt than make't my boast

Clo You sin against 116 Obedience, which you owe your father For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court, it is no contract,
none, 120

And though it be allow'd in meaner parties—Yet who than he more mean?—to knit their souls—

On whom there is no more dependancy

But brats and beggary—in self-figur'd knot, 124 Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by The consequence o' the crown, and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hiding for livery, a squire's cloth, 128
A pantler, not so eminent

Imo Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom, thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made 133
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being preferr'd so well

Clo The south-fog rot him!
Imo He never can meet more mischance than come 137
To be but nam'd of thee His meanest garment
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee, 140
Were they all made such men How now, Pisanio!

Enter PISANIO

Clo 'His garment! Now, the devil—

Imo To Dorothy my woman hue thee presently,—

Clo 'His garment!'

Imo I am sprighted with a fool, 144 Frighted, and anger'd worse Go, bid my woman

Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm it was thy master's, 'shrew me
If I would lose it for a revenue 148
Of any king's in Europe I do think I saw't this morning, confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm I kiss'd it,
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord 152
That I kiss aught but he Pis 'Twill not be lost.

Imo I hope so, go, and search

[Exit PISANIO]
Clo You have abus'd me
'His meanest garment!'

Imo Ay, I said so, sir 155

If you will make't an action, call witness to't.

Clo I will inform your father

Imo Your mother too
She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent [Exit]

Clo I'll be reveng'd 160
'His meanest garment! Well. [Exit]

SCENE IV—Rome A Room in PHILARIO'S
House

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO

Post Fear it not, sir, I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers

Ph. What means do you make to him?

Post Not any, but abide the change of time,
Quake in the present winter's state and wish That warmer days would come, in these sear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love, they failing,
I must die much your debtor

Phi Your very goodness and your company
O'erpay all I can do By this, your king Hath heard of great Augustus Caius Lucius Will do's commission thoroughly, and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearsages, 13
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief

Post I do believe—
Statist though I am none, nor like to be— 16
That this will prove a war, and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid Our countrymen 20
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at their discipline,— Now winged,—with their courage will make known 24

To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world

Phi See! Iachimo!

Enter IACHIMO

Post The swiftest harts have pced you by
land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails, 28
To make your vessel nimble

Phi Welcome, sir

Post I hope the briefness of your answer
made

The speediness of your return

Iach Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon 32 Post And therewithal the best, or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them

Iach Here are letters for you

Post Their tenour good, I trust

Iach 'Tis very like 36

Phi Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
When you were there?

Iach He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post All is well yet
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not 40
Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which 44

Was mine in Britain, for the ring is won.

Post The stone's too hard to come by

Iach Not a whit,

Your lady being so easy

Post Make not, sir, Your loss your sport, I hope you know that we Must not continue friends

Iach Good sir, we must, 49

If you keep covenant. Had I not brought

The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant

We were to question further, but I now 52

Profess myself the winner of her honour,

Together with your ring, and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but

By both your wils

Post If you can make't apparent 56
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours, if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine or masterless leaves both 60
To who shall find them

Iach Sir, my circumstances
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe whose strength
I will confirm with oath, which, I doubt not, 64 You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find

You need it not

Post Proceed

Iach First, her bedchamber,— Where I confess I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching,—it was hang'd 68

With tapestry of silk and silver, the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for The press of boats or pride, a piece of work 72
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value, which I wonder'd
Could be rarely and exactly wrought, Since the true life on't was—

Post This is true, 76

And thus you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other

Iach More particulars

Must justify my knowledge

Post So they must,

Or do your honour injury

Iach The chimney 80

Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece

Chaste Dian bathing, never saw I figures

So likely to report themselves, the cutter

Was as another nature, dumb, outwent her, 84

Motion and breath left out.

Post This is a thing

Which you might from relation likewise reap,

Being, as it is, much spoke of Iach The roof o' the chamber

With golden cherubins is fretted, her and- 88

irons—

I had forgot them—were two winking Cupids

Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely

Depending on their brands

Post This is her honour!

Let it be granted you have seen all this,—and 92

praise

Be given to your remembrance,—the descrip- 96

tion

Of what is in her chamber nothing saves

The wager you have laid.

Iach Then, if you can,

Be pale I beg but leave to air this jewel, see!

[Showing the bracelet

And now 'tis up again; it must be married 97

To that your diamond, I'll keep them.

Post Jove!

Once more let me behold it. Is it that

Which I left with her?

Iach Sir,—I thank her,—that 100
 She stripp'd it from her arm, I see her yet,
 Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
 And yet enrich'd it too She gave it me, and said
 She priz'd it once
Post May be she pluck'd it off 104
 To send it me
Iach She writes so to you, doth she?
Post O' no, no, no, 'tis true Here, take this 105
 too,
 It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
 Kills me to look on't. Let there be no honour Where there is beauty, truth where semblance,
 love 109
 Where there's another man the vows of women
 Of no more bondage be to where they are made Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing 112
O above measure false
Phi Have patience, sir,
 And take your ring again, 'tis not yet won
 It may be probable she lost it, or Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted, 116
 Hath stol'n it from her?
Post Very true,
 And so I hope he came by't Back my ring
 Render to me some corporal sign about her,
 More evident than this, for this was stol'n, 120
Iach By Jupiter, I had it from her arm Post Hark you, he swears, by Jupiter he swears
 'Tis true, nay, keep the ring 'tis true I am sure
 She would not lose it, her attendants are 124
 All sworn and honourable, they induc'd to steal
 it!
 And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her,
 The cognizance of her incontinency Is this, she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly 128
 There, take thy hire, and all the fiends of hell Divide themselves between you!
Phi Sir, be patient
 This is not strong enough to be believ'd
 Of one persuaded well of—
Post Never talk on't, 132
 She hath been colted by him Iach If you seek
 For further satisfying, under her breast, Worthy the pressing, lies a mole, right proud
 Of that most delicate lodging by my life, 136
 I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger
 To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?
Post Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, 140
 Were there no more but it Iach Will you hear more?
Post Spare your arithmetic, never count the turns,
 Once, and a million!
Iach I'll be sworn,— Post No swearing
 If you will swear you have not done't, you he,
 And I will kill thee if thou dost deny 145
 Thou'st made me cuckold,

Iach O' that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal
 I will go there and do't, i' the court, before 148
 Her father I'll do something—Phi Quite besides
 The government of patience! You have won
 Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
 He hath against himself
Iach With all my heart 152
 [Exeunt]

SCENE V.—The Same Another Room in the Same

Enter POSTHUMUS

Post Is there no way for men to be, but women
 Must be half-workers? We are all bastards, all,
 And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where 4
 When I was stamp'd some corner with his tools
 Made me a counterfeit, yet my mother seem'd
 The Dian of that time, so doth my wife
 The nonpareil of this O' vengeance, vengeance, 8
 Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
 And pray'd me oft forbearance, did it with A pudency so rosy the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn, that I thought her 12
 As chaste as unsunn'd snow O' all the devils!
 This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?
 Or less—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, 16
 Cried 'O!' and mounted, found no opposition
 But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard Could I find out
 The woman's part in me! For there's no motion That tends to vice in man but I affirm 21
 It is the woman's part, be it lying, note it,
 The woman's, flattering, hers, deceiving, hers, Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers, revenges, hers, 24
 Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
 All faults that man may name, nay, that hell
 knows,
 Why, hers, in part, or all, but rather, all, 28
 For even to vice
 They are not constant, but are changing still One vice but of a minute old for one
 Not half so old as that I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them Yet 'tis greater skill 33
 In a true hate to pray they have their will
 The very devils cannot plague them better
 [Exit]

ACT III

SCENE I.—Britain A Hall in CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter at one door CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords, and at another CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants

Cym Now say what would Augustus Cæsar wish us?

Luc When Julius Cæsar—whose remembrance yet Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues
Be theme and hearing ever—was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,— 5
Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,—for him
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, 8 Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately

Is left untender'd

Queen And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever

Clo There be many Cæsars
Ere such another Julius Britain is 12
A world by itself, and we will nothing pay For wearing our own noses

Queen That opportunity
Which then they had to take from 's, to resume,
We have again Remember, sir, my liege, 16
The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle, which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters, 20
With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,

But suck them up to the topmast A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here, but made not here his brag Of 'came, and saw, and overcame with
shame— 24

The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten, and his ship ping—

Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks for joy whereof— 29
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point—
O giglot fortune!—to master Cæsar's sword, Made Lud's town with rejoicing-fires bright, 32
And Britons strut with courage

Clo Come, there's no more tribute to be paid Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time and as I said, there is no more such Cæsars, other of them may have crooked noses, but to owe such straight arms, none

Cym Son let your mother end 39

Clo We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan I do not say I am one but I have a hand Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? 'Tis Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket or put the moon in his pocket we will pay him tribute for light, else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now

Cym You must know
Till the injurious Romans did extort 48
This tribute from us, we were free, Cæsar's ambition—

Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch
The sides o' the world—against all colour here
Did put the yoke upon 's, which to shake off 52
Becomes a war-like people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be We do say then to Cæsar Our ancestor was that Mulmutus which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Cæsar

Hath too much mangled, whose repair and franchise 57

Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry Mulmutus made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put 60
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king

Luc I am sorry, Cymbelime,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar—Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Himself domestic officers—thine enemy 65
Relieve it from me, then war and confusion
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee look For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied, 68
I thank thee for myself

Cym Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me, my youth I spent Much under him, of him I gather'd honour,
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce, 72
Behoves me keep at utterance I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons cold
So Cæsar shall not find them

Luc Let proof speak 77

Clo His majesty bids you welcome Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer, if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle, if you beat us out of it, it is yours if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you, and there's an end 84

Luc So sir

Cym I know your master's pleasure and he
mine

All the remain is 'Welcome!' [Exeunt

SCENE II — Another Room in the Same

Enter PISANIO, reading a letter

Pis How! of adultery! Wherefore write you
not

What monster's her accuser? Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian— 4
As poisonous-tongu'd as handed—hath prevail'd

On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No
She's punish'd for her truth and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults 8
As would take in some virtue O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes How! that I should murder her?
Upon the love and truth and vows which I 12
Have made to thy command 'I, her 'her blood?
If it be so to do good service, never

Let me be counted serviceable How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity 16
So much as this fact comes to?—Do't the
letter

That I have sent her by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity —O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless 20 bauble,

Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st at

So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes I am ignorant in what I am commanded

Enter IMOGEN

Imo How now, Pisanio! 24

Pis Madam, here is a letter from my lord

Imo Who? thy lord? that is my lord, Leonatus

O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters, 28
He'd lay the future open You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content, yet not
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him,— Some griefs are med cinable, that is one of
them, 33

For it doth physic love,—of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, thy leave Bless'd be You bees that make these locks of counsel! 36
Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike,
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables Good news,
gods!

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes Tal e notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven what your own love will out of this advise you, follow So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love, 40

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS

O! for a horse with wings! Hear st thou, 49
Pisanio?

He is at Milford-Haven, read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I 52

Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio,— Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord, who long st,—

O! let me 'bate,—but not like me, yet long'st,
But in a fainter kind —O! not like me 56
For mine's beyond beyond, say, and speak thick,—

Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,

To the smothering of the sense,—how far it is To this same blessed Milford, and, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy as 61
T' inherit such a haven, but, first of all,

How we may steal from hence, and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-
going 64

And our return, to excuse, but first, how get
hence

Why should excuse be born or ere begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter Prithce, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride 68
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too

Imo Why, one that rode to's execution,
man,

Could never go so slow I have heard of riding wagers, 72

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run! the clock's behalf But this is foolery, Go bid my woman feign a sickness, say She'll home to her father, and provide me presently 76

A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit

A franklin's housewife

Pis Madam, you're best consider Imo I see before me, man, nor here, nor here,

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them, 80
That I cannot look through Away, I prithee,
Do as I bid thee There's no more to say,
Accessible is none but Milford way [Exeunt

SCENE III—Wales A mountainous Country with a Cave

Enter from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS

Bel A goodly day not to keep house, with such
Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys, this gate

Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you

To a morning's holy office, the gates of monarchs 4

Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun Hail, thou fair
heaven! 7

We house! the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do

Gut Hail, heaven!

Arv Hail, heaven!

Bel Now for our mountain sport Up to yond hill,

Your legs are young, I'll tread these flats Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow, 12
That it is place which lessens and sets off,
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts of princes, of the tricks in war,
This service is not service, so being done, 16
But being so allow'd, to apprehend thus

Draws us a profit from all things we see,
And often, to our comfort shall we find

The sharded beetle in a safer hold 20
Than is the full-wing'd eagle O! this life

Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,

Prouder than rusting in unpaid-for silk, 24
Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd, no life to ours

Gut Out of your proof you speak, we, poor unfledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor
know not 28

What air's from home Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best, sweeter to you

That have a sharper known, well corresponding With your stiff age, but unto us it is 32

A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
A prison for a debtor, that not dares

To stride a limit

Arv What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear 36
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing,

We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey, 40
Like war-like as the wolf for what we eat,
Our valour is to chase what flies, our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely

Bel How you speak! 44
Did you but know the city's usuries
And felt them knowingly, the art o' the court,
As hard to leave as keep, whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that 48
The fear's as bad as falling, the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour, which dies i'
the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph 52
As record of fair act, nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well, what's worse,
Must curtsy at the censure O boys! this story
The world may read in me, my body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note, Cymbeline lov'd me,
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off, then was I as a tree 60 Whose boughs did bend with fruit, but, in one
night,

A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,

And left me bare to weather

Gui Uncertain favour! 64

Bel My fault being nothing,—as I have told you oft,—

But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans, so 68
Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years This rock and these demesnes have been my world,

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all 72
The fore-end of my time But, up to the mountains!

This is not hunter's language He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast,
To him the other two shall minister, 76
And we will fear no poison which attends

In place of greater state I'll meet you in the valleys

[Exeunt GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to the king,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive. 81
They think they are mine, and, though train'd up thus meanly

I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit

The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
In simple and low things to prince it much 85

Beyond the trick of others This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove! 88
When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
The war-like feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story say, Thus mine enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on 's neck, even then 92
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture

That acts my words The younger brother, Cadwal,—

Once Arviragus,—in as like a figure, 96 Strikes life into my speech and shows much
more

His own conceiving Hark! the game is rous'd
O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows Thou diest unjustly banish me, whereon, 100
At three and two years old, I stole these babes, Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rett'st me of my lands Eurphile, Thou wast their nurse, they took thee for their mother, 104

And every day do honour to her grave
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father The game is up
[Exit]

SCENE IV —Near Milford-Haven

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN

Imo Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place

Was near at hand ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now Pisanio! man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind, 4 That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

From the inward of thee? One, but painted
thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication, put thyself 8
Into a haviour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staid senses What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me with A look untender? If 't be summer news, 12
Smile to't before, if winterly thou need'st But keep that count'nance still. My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-crafted him, And he's at some hard point. Speak, man, thy tongue 16

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis Please you, read,
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune. 20

Imo—Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed the testimonies whereof he bleeding in me I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven she hath my letter for the purpose, where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal

Pis What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper

Hath cut her throat already No, 'tis slander, Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath Rides on the posting winds and doth belie All corners of the world, kings, queens, and states, Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave 40 This viperous slander enters What cheer, madam?

Imo False to his bed! What is it to be false? To lie in watch there and to think on him?

To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him, And cry myself awake? that's false to's bed, is it?

Pis Alas! good lady
Imo I felse! Thy conscience witness! Iachumo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency, Thou then look'dst like a villain, now methinks Thy favour's good enough Some jay of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion, And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls, I must be ripp'd, to pieces with me! O! Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought Put on for villany, not born where't grows, But worn a bait for ladies

Pis Good madam, hear me
Imo True honest men being heard, like false

Aeneas, Were in his time thought false, and Simon's weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity From most true wretchedness, so thou, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men, 64 Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd From thy great fail Come, fellow, be thou honest,

Do thou thy master's bidding When thou seest him,

A little witness my obedience, look! 68 I draw the sword myself, take it, and hit

The innocent mansion of my love, my heart. Fear not, 'tis empty of all things but grief,

Thy master is not there, who was indeed 72 The riches of it do his bidding, strike

Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause, But now thou seem'st a coward Pis Hence, vile instrument! Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo Why, I must die, 76 And if I do not by thy hand, thou art

No servant of thy master's Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine That cravens my weak hand Come, here's my heart

Something's afore't, soft, soft! we'll no defence,

Obedient as the scabbard What is here? The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus

All turn'd to heresy! Away, away! 84

Corruptors of my faith, you shall no more Be stomachers to my heart Thus may poor fools

Believe false teachers, though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor 88 Stands in worse case of woe

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,

And make me put into contempt the suits 92 Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find

It is no act of common passage, but A strain of rareness, and I grieve myself To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her 96

That now thou tr'ist on, how thy memory Will then be pang'd by me Pruthee, dispatch, The lamb entreats the butcher, where's thy knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, When I desire it too

Pis O, gracious lady! 101 Since I receiv'd command to do this business I have not slept one wink

Imo Do't, and to bed then Pis I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first

Imo Wherefore then Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd 105

So many miles with a pretence? this place? Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court, 108 For my being absent?—whereunto I never Purpose return—Why hast thou gone so far, To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,

The elected deer before thee? Pis But to win time 112

To lose so bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a course Good lady,

Hear me with patience Imo Talk thy tongue weary, speak

I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear, 116 Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,

Nor tent to bottom that But speak Pis Then, madam,

I thought you would not back again Imo Most like,

Bringing me here to kill me Pis Not so, neither, 120

But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well It cannot be

But that my master is abus'd, some villain, Some villain, ay, and singular in his art, 124

Hath done you both this cursed injury Imo Some Roman courtesan

Pis No, on my life. I'll give but notice you are dead and send him

Some bloody sign of it, for 'tis commanded 128

I should do so you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it

Imo Why, good fellow, What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?

Or in my life what comfort, when I am 132
Dead to my husband?

Pis If you'll back to the court,—
Imo No court, no father, nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing Cloten!
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege

Pis If not at court 137
Then not in Britain must you bide

Imo Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume 140

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't,
In a great pool a swan's nest prithee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis I am most glad
You think of other place The ambassador, 14
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow, now, if you could wear a mund
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, t' appear itself, must not yet be 148
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view, yea, haply, near The residence of Posthumus, so nigh at least That though his actions were not visible, yet 152 Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves

Imo O! for such means
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure

Pis Well, then, here's the point
You must forget to be a woman, change 157
Command into obedience, fear and niceness—
The handmaids of all women, or more truly Woman it pretty self—into a waggish courage,
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and 161
As quarrelous as the weasel, nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O! the harder heart, 164
Alack! no remedy—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget Your laboursome and dainty trums, wherein You made great Juno angry

Imo Nay, be brief 168
I see into thy end, and am almost A man already

Pis First, make yourself but like one Forethinking this, I have already fit—
'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all 172
That answer to them, would you in their serving,

And with what mutation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, fore noble Lucius Present yourself, desire his service, tell him 176 Wherein you are happy,—which you'll make him know,

If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable,

And, doubling that, most holy Your means abroad, 180

You have me, rich, and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplication

Imo Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away,
There s'more to be consider'd, but we'll even 184
All that good time will give us, this attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with A prince's courage Away, I prithee

Pis Well, madam, we must take a short farewell, 188

Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court My noble mistress, Here is a box, I had it from the queen,
What's in't is precious, if you are sick at sea, 192
Or stomach-quail'd at land, a dram of this Will drive away distemper To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods Direct you to the best!

Imo Amen. I thank thee [Exeunt

SCENE V — A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, Lords, and Attendants

Cym Thus far, and so farewell

Luc Thanks, royal sir
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence,
And am right sorry that I must report ye My master's enemy

Cym Our subjects, sir, 4
Will not endure his yoke, and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs Appear unking-like

Luc So, sir I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven. 8

Madam, all joy befall your Grace

Queen And you!
Cym My lords, you are appointed for that office,

The due of honour in no point omit.
So, farewell, noble Lucius

Luc Your hand, my lord 12
Clo Receive it friendly, but from this time
forth

I wear it as your enemy

Luc Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner Fare you well.

Cym Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords, 16

Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!

[Exeunt LUCIUS and Lords.

Queen He goes hence frowning, but it honours us

That we have given him cause

Clo 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it. 20

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor

How it goes here It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and horsemen be in readiness,
The powers that he already hath in Gallia 24

Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves

His war for Britain.

Queen 'Tis not sleepy business,
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly 27 Cym Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day, she looks us like 32
A thing more made of malice than of duty
We have noted it. Call her before us, for We have been too slight in sunderance

[Exit an Attendant]

Queen Royal sir
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd 36
Hath her life been, the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her, she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes, 40
And strokes death to her

Re-enter Attendant

Cym Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Attendant Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer

That will be given to the loudest noise we make

Queen My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you, 48
Which daily she was bound to proffer, this She wish'd me to make known, but our great court

Made me to blame in memory

Cym Her doors lock'd!
Not seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which

I fear 52
Prove false! [Exit]

Queen Son, I say, follow the king Clo That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,

I have not seen these two days.

Queen Go, look after [Exit CLOTEN]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus! 56
He hath a drug of mine, I pray his absence Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd
her, 60

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus Gone she is To death or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either, she being down, 64
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN

How now, my son!

Clo 'Tis certain she is fled Go in and cheer the king, he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Queen [Aside] All the better, may 68
This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit]

Clo I love and hate her, for she's fair and royal,

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman, from every one 72
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all I love her therefore, but Disdaining me and throwing favours on The low Posthumus slanders so her judgment 76 That what's else rare is chok'd, and in that point

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her For, when fools 79 Shall—

Enter PISANIO

Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither Ah! you precious pandar Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends

Pis O! good my lord
Clo Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter 84

I will not ask again Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot 88

A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis Alas! my lord, How can she be with him? When was she muss'd?

He is in Rome

Clo Where is she, sir? Come nearer,
No further halting, satisfy me home 92

What is become of her?

Pis O! my all-worthy lord

Clo All-worthy villain!

Discover where thy mistress is at once
At the next word, no more of 'worthy lord!' 96

Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death

Pis Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight [Presenting a letter]

Clo Let's see't I will pursue her too

Even to Augustus' throne

Pis [Aside] Or this, or perish.

She's far enough, and what he learns by this

May prove his travel, not her danger

Clo Hum!

Pis [Aside] I'll write to my lord she's dead.

O Imogen! 104

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return agen!

Clo Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis Sir, as I think 107

Clo It is Posthumus' hand, I know't Sir-rah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man, thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment 116

Pis Well, my good lord

Clo Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine Wilt thou serve me?

Pis Sir, I will

Clo Give me thy hand here's my purse Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress

Clo The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither let it be thy first service, go

Pis I shall, my lord

Clo Meet thee at Milford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing, I'll remember't anon,—even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee I would these garments were come She said upon a time,—the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities With that suit upon my back will I ravish her first kill him, and in her eyes, there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath din'd,—which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again She hath despised me rejoicing, and I'll be merry in my revenge

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes

Be those the garments?

Pis Ay, my noble lord

Clo How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis She can scarce be there yet

Clo Bring this apparel to my chamber, that is the second thing that I have commanded thee the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee My revenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true

Pis Thou bidd'st me to my loss, for true to thee

Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true To Milford go

And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,

You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed

Be cross'd with slowness, labour be his meed!

[Exit]

SCENE VI—Wales Before the Cave of BELARIUS

Enter IMOGEN, in boy's clothes

Imo I see a man's life is a tedious one, I have tr'd myself and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed, I should be sick But that my resolution helps me Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,

Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched, such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd Two beggars told me

I could not miss my way, will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis A punishment or trial? Yes, no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars My dear lord! Thou art one o' the false ones Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone, but even before I was At point to sink for food But what is this? Here is a path to't, 'tis some savage hold, I were best not call, I dare not call, yet famine, Ere clean it o' erthrow nature, makes it valiant Plenty and peace breeds cowards, hardness ever Of hardness is mother Ho! Who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak, if savage, Take or lend Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter Best draw my sword, and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't

Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit to the cave]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and

Are master of the feast, Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant, 'tis our match, The sweat of industry would dry and die But for the end it works to Come, our stomachs

Will make what's homely savoury, weariness Can snore upon the flint when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard Now, peace be here,

Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui I am thoroughly weary

Arv I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite

Gui There is cold meat i' the cave, we'll browse on that,

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd

Bel [Looking into the cave] Stay, comenotin, But that it eats our victuals, I should think 40 Here were a fairy Gui What's the matter, sir?

Bel By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon! Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

44

Re-enter IMOGEN

Imo Good masters, harm me not Before I enter'd here, I call'd, and thought To have begg'd or bought what I have took. Good troth,

I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though I had found

Gold strew'd i' the floor Here's money for my meat,

I would have left it on the board so soon As I had made my meal, and parted

With prayers for the provider

Gu. Money, youth? 52
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
 As 'tis no better reckon'd but of those Who worship dirty gods

Imo. I see you're angry
 Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should 56
 Have died had I not made it

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir I have a kinsman who 60
 Is bound for Italy, he embark'd at Milford
 To whom being going almost spent with hunger,
 I am fall'n in this offence

Bel. Prithee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good
 minds 64

By this rude place we live in Well encounter'd!
 'Tis almost night, you shall have better cheer
 Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it.
 Boys, bid him welcome

Gu. Were you a woman, youth, 68
 I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty,

I bid for you, as I do buy

Arv. I'll make't my comfort
 He is a man, I'll love him as my brother,
 And such a welcome as I'd give to him 72
 After a long absence, such is yours most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends

Imo. 'Mongst friends,
 If brothers [Aside] Would it had been so, that they

Had been my father's sons, then had my prize 76
 Been less, and so more equal ballasting
 To thee, Posthumus

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gu. Would I could free't!

Arv. Or I, whate'er it be,

What pain it cost, what danger 80

Bel. Hark, boys [Whispering]

Imo. Great men, 81

That had a court no bigger than this cave,
 That did attend themselves and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them,—laying by 84

That nothing-gift of differing multitudes,— Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me,
 gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
 Since Leonatus' false

Bel. It shall be so 88

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in Discourse is heavy, fasting, when we have sup'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
 So far as thou wilt speak it

Gu. Pray, draw near 92

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir

Arv. I pray, draw near [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII — Rome A Public Place

Enter two Senators and Tribunes

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ

That since the common men are now in action
 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
 And that the legions now in Gallia are 4

Full weak to undertake our wars against

The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite

The gentry to this business He creates

Lucius pro-consul, and to you the tribunes, 8

For this immediate levy, he commends

His absolute commission Long live Cæsar!

First Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

Sec Sen. Ay

First Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

First Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy 13

Must be supplyant, the words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time

Of their dispatch

First Tri. We will discharge our duty 16

[Exeunt]

ACT IV

SCENE I — Wales The Forest, near the Cave of BELARIUS

Enter CLOTEN

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather,—saving reverence of the word,—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits Therein I must play the workman I dare speak it to myself,—for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber,—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his, no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions, yet this imper-ceivable thing loves him in my despite What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face, and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations My horse is tied up safe, out, sword, and to a sore purpose!

Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place, and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN

Bel. [To IMOGEN] You are not well, remain here in the cave,

We'll come to you after hunting
Arv [To IMOGEN] Brother, stay here,
 Are we not brothers?

Imo So man and man should be,
 But clay and clay differs in dignity, 4
 Whose dust is both alike I am very sick

Gui Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.
Imo So sick I am not, yet I am not well, 8
 But not so citizen a wanton as To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave

 me,
 Stick to your journal course, the breach of custom

Is breach of all I am ill, but your being by me
 Cannot amend me, society is no comfort 12
 To one not sociable I am not very sick,
 Since I can reason of it, pray you, trust me here,
 I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
 Stealing so poorly

Gui I love thee I have spoke it,
 How much the quantity, the weight as much, 17
 As I do love my father

Bel What! how! how!
Arv If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
 In my good brother's fault I know not why 20
 I love this youth, and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
 'My father, not this youth'

Bel [Aside] O noble stram! 24
 O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
 Cowards father cowards, and base things sire
 base

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace

I'm not their father, yet who this should be 28
 Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me
 'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn

Arv Brother, farewell.

Imo I wish ye sport

Arv You health So please you, sir

Imo [Aside] These are kind creatures Gods, what lies I have heard! 32

Our courtiers say all's savage but at court Experience, O! thou disprov'st report

The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish
 Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish 36

I am sick still, heart-sick Pisanio, I'll now taste of thy drug [Swallows some]

Gui I could not stir him,
 He said he was gentle but unfortunate,

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest 40

Arv Thus did he answer me, yet said hereafter

I might know more

Bel To the field to the field!

[To IMOGEN] We'll leave you for this time, go in and rest

Arv We'll not be long away

Bel Pray be not sick, 44

For you must be our housewife

Imo Well or ill,

I am bound to you

Bel And shalt be ever

[Exit IMOGEN]

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had

Good ancestors

Arv How angel-like he sings! 48

Gui But his neat cookery! he cut our roots

In characters,

And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick

And he her dieter

Arv Nobly he yokes

A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh 52

Was that it was, for not being such a smile,

The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly

From so divine a temple, to commix

With winds that sailors rail at

Gui I do note 56

That grief and patience rooted in him, both

Mingle their spurs together

Arv Grow, patience!

And let the stinking-elder, grief, untwine

His perishing root with the increasing vine! 60

Bel It is great morn'ing Come, away!—

Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN

Clo I cannot find those runagates, that villain

Hath mock'd me. I am famt

Bel 'Those runagates!'

Means he not us? I partly know him, 'tis 64

Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush

I saw him not these many years, and yet

I know 'tis he We are held as outlaws hence!

Gui He is but one You and my brother search 68

What companies are near, pray you, away,

Let me alone with him

[Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.]

Clo Soft! What are you

That fly me thus? some villain mountainers?

I have heard of such. What slave art thou?

Gui A thing

More slavish did I ne'er than answering 73

A 'slave' without a knock.

Clo Thou art a robber,

A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief

Gui To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I 76

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?

Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,

Why I should yield to thee?

Clo Thou villain base, 80

Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui No, nor thy tailor, rascal,

Who is thy grandfather he made those clothes,

Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo Thou precious varlet,

My tailor made them not.

Gui Hence then, and thank

The man that gave them thee. Thou art some 85

fool,

I am loath to beat thee.

Clo Thou injurious thief,

Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gua What's thy name?
Clo Cloten, thou villain. 88
Gua Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
 I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,

'Twould move me sooner
Clo To thy further fear,
 Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know 92
 I am son to the queen.

Gua I'm sorry for't, not seeming
 So worthy as thy birth.

Clo Art not afraid?
Gua Those that I reverence those I fear, the wise,
 At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo Die the death 96
 When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
 I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
 And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads Yield, rustic mountaineer [Exeunt fighting

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel No companies abroad. 101 Arv None in the world. You did mistake him, sure

Bel I cannot tell, long is it since I saw him, But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of
 favour 104

Which then he wore, the snatches in his voice,
 And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Arv In this place we left them
 I wish my brother make good time with him, 108
 You say he is so fell

Bel Being scarce made up,
 I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
 Of roaring terrors, for defect of judgment
 Is oft the cease of fear But see, thy brother 112

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN'S head.

Gua. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
 There was no money in't Not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had
 none,

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne 116
 My head as I do his.

Bel What hast thou done?
Gua. I am perfect what cut off one Cloten's
 head,

Son to the queen, after his own report,
 Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore,
 With his own single hand he'd take us in, 121 Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—

they grow,
 And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone Gua. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose, 124

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
 Protects not us, then why should we be tender
 To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
 Play judge and executioner all himself, 128
 For we do fear the law? What company

Discover you abroad?

Bel No single soul
 Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants Though his humour 132

Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
 From one bad thing to worse, not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
 To bring him here alone Although, perhaps,
 It may be heard at court that such as we 137
 Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,—

As it is like him,—might break out, and swear
 He'd fetch us in, yet is't not probable 141
 To come alone, either he so undertaking, Or they so suffering, then, on good ground we fear,

If we do fear this body hath a tail 144
 More perilous than the head

Arv Let ordinance
 Come as the gods foresay it, howsoever,
 My brother hath done well

Bel I had no mind
 To hunt this day, the boy Fidele's sickness 148 Did make my way long forth

Gua With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en

His head from him, I'll throw't into the creek Behind our rock, and let it to the sea, 152
 And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten That's all I reckon. [Exit

Bel I fear 'twill be reveng'd Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't! though valour
 Becomes thee well enough

Arv Would I had done't 156
 So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
 I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed, I would revenges,

That possible strength might meet, would seek us through 160
 And put us to our answer

Bel Well, 'tis done —
 We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
 Where there's no profit I prithee, to our rock,
 You and Fidele play the cooks, I'll stay 164 Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
 To dinner presently

Arv Poor sick Fidele!
 I'll willingly to him, to gain his colour
 I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood, 168
 And praise myself for charity [Exit

Bel O thou goddess!
 Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
 In these two princely boys They are as gentle
 As zephyrs, blowing below the violet, 172
 Not wagging his sweet head, and yet as rough,
 Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rud'st wind,
 That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
 And make him stoop to the vale 'Tis wonder That an invisible instinct should frame them
 To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught, Civility not seen from other, valour

That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop 180
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us

Re-enter GUIDERIUS

Gui Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother, his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music]

Bel My ingenious instrument!
Hark! Polydore, it sounds, but what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark! 188

Gui Is he at home?
Bel He went hence even now Gui What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys 193
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, with IMOGEN, as dead, bearing her in his arms

Bel Look! here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms 196
Of what we blame him for

Arv The bird is dead
That we have made so much on I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch,
Than have seen this

Gui O, sweetest, fairest lily! 201
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself

Bel O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find 204
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare Might easiest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made,
but I,

Thou died'st, a most rare boy, of melancholy 208
How found you him?

Arv Stark, as you see
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at, his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui Where?
Arv O' the floor, 212
His arms thus leagu'd, I thought he slept, and put

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui Why, he but sleeps
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed, 216
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee

Arv With fairest flowers
While summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave, thou shalt not lack The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor 221

The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, Out-sweeten'd not thy breath. the ruddock would, 224

With charitable bill,—O bill! sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie Without a monument,—bring thee all this, Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none, 228

To winter-ground thy corse

Gui Prithce, have done,
And do not play in wench-like words with that Which is so serious Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what 232
Is now due debt To the grave!

Arv Say, where shall's lay him?
Gui By good Euphrile, our mother

Arv Be't so
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground, 236

As once our mother, use like note and words,
Save that Euphrile must be Fidele

Gui Cadwal,
I cannot sing, I'll weep, and word it with
thee, 240

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse Than priests and fanes that he.

Arv We'll speak it then.
Bel Great griefs, I see, medicine the less, for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys, 244
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that, though mean and mighty rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence—
That angel of the world—doth make distinction 248

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely,
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince

Gui Pray you, fetch him hither
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax' 252
When neither are alive

Arv If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.
[Exit BELARIUS.]

Gui Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east,

My father hath a reason for't.
Arv 'Tis true. 256
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv So, begin.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages
Thou thy worldly task hast done, 260
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages, Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke
Care no more to clothe and eat,
To thee the reed is as the oak,
The sceptre, learning, physic, must 268
All follow thee, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning flash,
Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have
 And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the body of CLOTEN

Gui. We have done our obseques. Come, lay him down.
Bel. Here's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight, more.
 The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the
 night
 Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces
 You were as flowers, now wither'd, even so
 These herblets shall, which we upon you strew
 Come on, away, apart upon our knees
 The ground that gave them first has them again,
 Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.
[Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven, which is the way?

I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pitikins! can it be six mile yet?
 I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep

[Seeing the body of CLOTEN.] But, soft! no bedfellow! O gods and goddesses!
 These flowers are like the pleasures of the world, This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream

For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
 And cook to honest creatures, but 'tis not so,
 'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
 Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,

I tremble still with fear, but if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
 As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
 The dream's here still, even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me, not imagin'd, felt A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!
 I know the shape of 's leg, this is his hand,
 His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh,
 The brawns of Hercules, but his Jovial face—
 Murder in heaven? How! 'Tis gone. Pisanio,
 All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
 And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
 Conspir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
 Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio,
 From this most bravest vessel of the world Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas!

Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me!
 where's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
 And left this head on. How should this be?
 Pisanio?
 'Tis he and Cloten, malice and lucre in them Have laid this woe here. O! 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
 The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
 And cordial to me, have I not found it Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home,

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's. O!
 Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
 That we the horrid may seem to those Which chance to find us. O! my lord, my lord [Falls on the body]

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain, other Officers, and a Soothsayer

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
 You here at Milford-Haven with your ships
 They are in readiness

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners
 And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
 That promise noble service, and they come Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind

Luc. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers

Be muster'd, bid the captains look to't. Now,
 sir,

What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—

I fast and pray'd for their intelligence,—thus I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
 From the spongy south to this part of the west,
 There vanish'd in the sunbeams, which portends,

Unless my sins abuse my divination,
 Success to the Roman host

Luc. Dream often so,

And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime

It was a worthy building. How! a page!
 Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead rather,
 For nature doth abhor to make his bed
 With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
 Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He's alive, my lord

Luc. He'll, then, instruct us of this body Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he

That, otherwise than noble nature did, 364 Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wrack? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo I am nothing, or if not,
Nothing to be were better This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good, 369
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas!
There are no more such masters, I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service, 372 Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master

Luc 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than Thy master in bleeding Say his name, good friend

Imo Richard du Champ —[Aside] If I do
he and do

No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it —Say you, sir?

Luc Thy name?

Imo Fidele, sir
Luc Thou dost approve thyself the very same, 380

Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No less belov'd The Roman emperor's letters, Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner 385
Than thine own worth prefer thee Go with me

Imo I'll follow, sir But first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep 388
As these poor pickaxes can dig, and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh, 392
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me

Luc Ay, good youth,
And rather father thee than master thee
My friends, 396

The boy hath taught us manly duties, let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave, come, arm him Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd 401
As soldiers can Be cheerful, wipe thine eyes
Some falls are means the happier to arise

[Exeunt]

SCENE III —A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIO, and Attendants

Cym Again, and bring me word how 'tis with her, [Exit an Attendant].
A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger.
Heavens!

How deeply you at once do touch me Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone, my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me, her son gone,

So needful for this present it strikes me, past 8
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from
thee

By a sharp torture.

Pis Sir, my life is yours, 12
I humbly set it at your will, but, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,

Hold me your loyal servant

First Lord Good my liege, 16
The day that she was missing he was here,
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him, 20
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym The time is troublesome [To PISANIO] We'll ship you for a season, but our jealousy
Does yet depend.

First Lord So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, 24
Are landed on your coast, with a supply Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent Cym Now for the counsel of my son and

queen!

I am amaz'd with matter

First Lord Good my liege, 28
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of, come more, for more you're ready

The want is, but to put those powers in motion
That long to move

Cym I thank you. Let's withdraw, 32
And meet the time as it seeks us We fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here Away!

[Exeunt all but PISANIO]

Pis I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him Imogen was slain 'tis strange, 37
Nor hear I from my mistress who did promise To yield me often tidings, neither know I
What is betid to Cloten, but remain 40
Perplex'd in all the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest, not true to be true

These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd, 45 Fortune brings in whose boats that are not steer'd. [Exit]

SCENE IV —Wales Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gur The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gur. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans 4

Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after

Bel Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains, there secure us
To the king's party there's no going, newness Of Cloten's death,—we being not known, not muster'd

Among the bands,—may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd, and so extort from's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death

Drawn on with torture

Gut This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you, Nor satisfying us

Arr It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their
eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are

Bel O! I am known
Of many in the army, many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life, aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, But to be still hot summer's tanlings and The shrinking slaves of winter

Gut Than be so
Better to cease to be Pray, sir, to the army
I and my brother are not known, yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd

Arr By this sun that shines, I'll further what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gut By heavens! I'll go
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care, but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans

Arr So say I, amen
Bel No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care Have with you, boys!

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie Lead, lead—[Aside] The time seems long, their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born.

ACT V

SCENE I—Britain The Roman Camp

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief

Post Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for I wish'd

Thou shouldst be colour'd thus You married ones,

If each of you should take this course, how many

Must murder wives much better than themselves

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!

Every good servant does not all commands,
No bond but to do just ones Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put on this, so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance But, alack!

You snatch some hence for little faults, that's
love,

To have them fall no more, you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift

But Imogen is your own, do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom, 'tis enough

That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress-piece!
I'll give no wound to thee Therefore good
heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant, so I'll fight Against the part I come with, so I'll die

For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death and thus, unknown,

Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate Let me make men know More valour in me than my habits show

Gods! put the strength o' the Leonati in me
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin The fashion, less without and more within

[Exit]

SCENE II.—Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter, from one door, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army, the British at another, LEONATUS

*POSTHUMUS following like a poor soldier
They march over and go out Alarums Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHU-*

MUS, he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom

Takes off my manhood I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't Revengingly enfeebles me, or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours.

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
 If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
 This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
 Is that we scarce are men and you are gods
 [Exit]

The battle continues the Britons fly, CYMBELINE is taken, then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS

Bel Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground

The lane is guarded, nothing routs us but 12
The villany of our fears

Gua } Stand, stand, and fight!
Arv }

Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons, they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt Then, re-enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN

Luc Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself,
 For friends kill friends, and 'the disorder's such As war were hoodwink'd lach 'Tis their fresh supplies 16

Luc It is a day turn'd strangely or betimes
 Let's re-inforce, or fly [Exeunt]

SCENE III — Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post I did
 Though you, it seems, come from the fiers

Lord I did
Post No blame be to you, sir, for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought The king himself 4
 Of his wings destitute, the army broken,

And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane, the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work 8

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling

Merely through fear, that the strait pass was damm'd

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
 To die with lengthen'd shame

Lord Where was this lane? 13 Post Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf,

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
 An honest one, I warrant, who deserv'd 16
 So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
 In doing this for his country, athwart the lane,
 He, with two striplings,—lads more like to run
 The country base than to commit such slaughter,— 20

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
 Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,
 Made good the passage, cried to those that fled,
 'Our Britam's harts die flying, not our men' 24
 To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.
 Stand!

Or we are Romans, and will give you that 8 Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,
 But to look back in frown stand, stand!' These three, 28

Three thousand confident, in act as many,—
 For three performers are the file when all The rest do nothing,—with this word, 'Stand,
 stand!'

Accommodated by the place, more charming 32
 With their own nobleness,—which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance,—gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that some,
 turn'd coward

But by example,—O! a sin of war, 36
 Damn'd in the first beginners,—gan to look
 The way that they did, and to grin like lions Upon the pikes o' the hunters Then began

A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon, 40
 A rout, confusion thick, forthwith they fly Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles, slaves,

The strides they victors made And now our cowards—

Like fragments in hard voyages—became 44
 The life o' the need, having found the back door open

Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens! how they wound,
 Some slain before, some dying, some their friends

O'er-borne i' the former wave, ten, chas'd by
 one, 48

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty,
 Those that would die or ere resist are grown
 The mortal bugs o' the field

Lord This was strange chance
 A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys! 52

Post Nay, do not wonder at it, you are made Rather to wonder at the things you hear
 Than to work any Will you rime upon't,

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one 56
 'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.'

Lord Nay, be not angry, sir
Post 'Lack! to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend,
 For if he'll do, as he is made to do, 61
 I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rime

Lord Farewell, you're angry [Exit Post Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery! 64

To be i' the field, and ask, 'what news?' of me!
 To-day how many would have given their honours

To have sav'd their carcases! took heel to do't,
 And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd, Could not find death where I did hear his groan, 66

Nor feel him where he struck being an ugly monster,

'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we 72

That draw his knives i' the war Well, I will find him,
 For being now a favourer to the Briton,
 No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
 The part I came in, fight I will no more, 76
 But yield me to the veriest hound that shall Once touch my shoulder Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman, great the answer be Britons must take For me, my ransom's
 death, 80
 On either side I come to spend my breath,
 Which neither here I'll keep nor bear agen,
 But end it by some means for Imogen

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers

First Cap Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken 84
 'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels

Sec Cap There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
 That gave th' affront with them.

First Cap So 'tis reported, But none of 'em can be found Stand! who is
 there? 88

Post A Roman,
 Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
 Had answer'd him

Sec Cap Lay hands on him, a dog!
 A lag of Rome shall not return to tell 92
 What crows have peck'd them here He brags his service
 As if he were of note bring him to the king

Enter CYMBELINE, attended BELARIUS, GUIDE-RIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler, then exeunt omnes

SCENE IV — Britain A Prison

Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaolers

First Gaol You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you,
 So graze as you find pasture

Sec Gaol Ay, or a stomach [Exeunt Gaolers
Post Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
 a way,

I think, to liberty Yet am I better 4
 Than one that's sick o' the gout, since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
 By the sure physician death, who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd 8

More than my shanks and wrists you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt,
 Then, free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry?
 So children temporal fathers do appease, 12
 Gods are more full of mercy Must I repent?
 I cannot do it better than in gyves
 Desir'd more than constram'd, to satisfy,
 If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take 16

No stricter render of me than my all
 I know you are more clement than vile men,
 Who of their broken debtors take a third,
 A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
 On their abatement that's not my desire,
 For Imogen's dear life take mine, and though
 'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life, you coin'd it,
 'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp, 24

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake
 You rather mine, being yours, and so great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
 And cancel these cold bonds O Imogen! 28
 I'll speak to thee in silence [Sleeps

Solemn music Enter as in an apparition SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to POSTHUMUS, an old man, attired like a warrior leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to POST-HUMUS with music before them Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to POSTHUMUS, with wounds, as they died in the wars They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping

Sici No more, thou thunder-master, show
 Thy spite on mortal flies

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, 32
 That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges

Hath my poor boy done augit but well,
 Whose face I never saw? 36

I died whilst in the womb he stay'd

Attending nature's law

Whose father then—as men report,

Thou orphans' father art— 40 Thou shouldst have been, and shielded
 him

From this earth-vexing smart

Moth Lucina lent not me her aid,
 But took me in my throes, 44
 That from me was Posthumus ript, Came crying 'mongst his foes,
 A thing of pity!

Sici Great nature, like his ancestry, 48
 Moulded the stuff so fair,
 That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,
 As great Silicius' heir

First Bro When once he was mature for man,
 In Britain where was he 53
 That could stand up his parallel,
 Or fruitful object be In eye of Imogen, that best 56
 Could deem his dignity?

Moth With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
 To be exil'd, and thrown From Leonati's seat, and cast 60
 From her his dearest one,
 Sweet Imogen?

Sici Why did you suffer Iachimo,
 Slight thing of Italy, 64

To taint his nobler heart and brain
 With needless jealousy,
 And to become the geck and scorn
 O' the other's villany?

Sec Bro For this from stiller seats we came,
 Our parents and us twain,
 That striking in our country's cause Fell bravely and were slain,
 Our fealty and Tenantus' right
 With honour to maintain.

First Bro Like hardiment Posthumus hath To Cymbeline perform'd
 Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
 Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
 The graces for his merits due,
 Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici Thy crystal window ope, look out,
 No longer exercise
 Upon a valiant race thy harsh
 And potent injuries

Moth Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
 Take off his miseries

Sici Peep through thy marble mansion, help!
 Or we poor ghosts will cry
 To the shining synod of the rest Against thy deity

Both Bro Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
 And from thy justice fly

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees

Jup No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing, hush! How dare you ghosts
 Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
 Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts? 96
 Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers
 Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd,
 No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours 100 Whom best I love I cross, to make my gift,
 The more delay'd, delighted Be content,
 Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift
 His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent
 Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in 105
 Our temple was he married Rise, and fade!
 He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
 And happier much by his affliction made 108
 This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine,
 And so, away no further with your din
 Express impatience, lest you stir up mine 112
 Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline

[Ascends]
Sici He came in thunder, his celestial breath
 Was sulphurous to smell the holy eagle
 Stoop'd, as to foot us, his ascension is 116
 More sweet than our bless'd fields, his royal bird Prunes the immortal wing and cloyes his beak,

As when his god is pleas'd.
All Thanks, Jupiter!
Sici The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd 120

His radiant roof Away! and, to be blest,
 Let us with care perform his great behest.
[The Ghosts vanish]

Post [Awaking] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot 72
 A father to me, and thou hast created 124
 A mother and two brothers But—O scorn!— Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born

And so I am awake Poor wretches, that depend
 On greatness' favour dream as I have done, 128 Wake, and find nothing But, alas! I swerve Many dream not to find, neither deserve, 80 And yet are steep'd in favours, so am I,
 That have this golden chance and know not why 132
 What fancies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!

84 Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers let thy effects
 So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, 136
 As good as promise

When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air, and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty

92 'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen Tongue and brain not, either both or nothing,
 Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such 148
 As sense cannot untie Be what it is,
 The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy

Re-enter Gaolers.

First Gaol Come, sir, are you ready for
 death? 153

Post Over-roasted rather, ready long ago

First Gaol Hanging is the word, sir if you be ready for that, you are well cooked

Post So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot 158

First Gaol A heavy reckoning for you, sir, but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of 1. at, depart reeling with too much drink, sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much, purse and brain both empty, the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O!
 the charity of a penny cord, it sums up thousands in a trice you have no true debtor and creditor but it, of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book and counters, so the acquaintance follows. 174

Post I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

First Gaol Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache, but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer, for look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go 181

Post Yes, indeed do I, fellow
First Gaol Your death has eyes in's head, then, I have not seen him so pictured you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one 190

Post I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink and will not use them

First Gaol What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking 197

Enter a Messenger

Mess Knock off his manacles, bring your prisoner to the king

Post Thou bring'st good news, I am called to be made free 201

First Gaol I'll be hang'd, then

Post Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler, no bolts for the dead 204

[Exeunt all but first Gaoler]

First Gaol Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are venter knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman, and there be some of them too, that die against their wills, so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good, O! there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses. I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exit]

SCENE V—CYMBELINE'S Tent

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne Woe is my heart
That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast 4

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found He shall be happy that can find him, if

Our grace can make him so

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing, 8
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living.
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am 12
The heir of his reward, which I will add

[To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS]
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
By whom, I grant, she lives 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are report it.

Bel. Sir, 16
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen
Further to boast were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest

Cym. Bow your knees
Arise, my knights o' the battle. I create you 20
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies

There's business in these faces Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, 24
And not o' the court of Britain

Cor. Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider, 28
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded 32
Most cruel to herself What she confess'd
I will report, so please you these her women
Can trip me if I err, who with wet cheeks
Were present when she finish'd

Cym. Prithee, say 36
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you, only

Affected greatness got by you, not you,
Married your royalty, was wife to your place,
Abhor'd your person

Cym. She alone knew this, 40
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess 44
Was as a scorpion to her sight, whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is't can read a woman? Is there more? 48

Cor. More, sir, and worse She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral, which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring, By inches waste you, in which time she pur-pos'd, 52

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show, yea, and in time—When she had fitted you with her craft—to work

Her son into the adoption of the crown, 56
But failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shameless-desperate, open'd, in despite Of heaven and men, her purposes, repented

The evils she hatch'd were not effected 60, 66
Despairing died

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

First Lady We did, so please your highness
Cym Mine eyes
 Were not in fault, for she was beautiful, Mine ears, that heard her flattery, nor my
 heart, 64
 That thought her like her seeming it had been vicious
 To have mistrusted her yet, O my daughter!
 That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
 And prove it in thy feeling Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute that 69
 The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
 Of many a bold one, whose kinsmen have made suit
 That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter 72
 Of you their captives, which ourself have granted
 So, think of your estate

Luc Consider, sir, the chance of war the day
 Was yours by accident, had it gone with us, 76
 We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword But since the gods

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
 May be call'd ransom, let it come, sufficeth, 80
 A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer, Augustus lives to think on't, and so much
 For my peculiar care This one thing only
 I will entreat, my boy, a Briton born, 84 Let him be ransom'd, never master had A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
 So tender over his occasions, true,
 So feat, so nurse-like Let his virtue 'in 88 With my request, which I'll make bold your highness

Cannot deny, he hath done no Briton harm, Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,
 And spare no blood beside 92

Cym I have surely seen him,
 His favour is familiar to me Boy,
 Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
 And art mine own. I know not why nor wherefore, 96

To say, live, boy 'ne'er thank thy master, live
 And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
 Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it, Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, 100
 The noblest ta'en.

Imo I humbly thank your highness.
Luc I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,
 And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo No, no, alack!
 There's other work in hand I see a thing 104
 Bitter to me as death, your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself.

Luc The boy disdains me,
 He leaves me, scorns me, briefly due their joys
 That place them on the truth of girls and boys.

Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? 109
 I love thee more and more, think more and
 more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak,

Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo He is a Roman, no more kin to me 113 Than I to your highness, who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer

Cym Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
 To give me hearing

Cym Ay, with all my heart, 117
 And lend my best attention What's thy name?

Imo Fidele, sir

Cym Thou'rt my good youth, my page,
 I'll be thy master walk with me, speak freely

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart]

Bel Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv One said another 121

Not more resembles,—that sweet rosy lad

Who died, and was Fidele What think you?

Gui The same dead thing alive 124

Bel Peace, peace! see further, he eyes us not, forbear,

Creatures may be alike, were't he, I am sure He would have spoke to us

Gui But we saw him dead.

Bel Be silent, let's see further

Pis [Aside] It is my mistress 128

Since she is living, let the time run on

To good, or bad

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward]

Cym Come, stand thou by our side

Make thy demand aloud —[To IACHIMO] Sir, step you forth.

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely, 132

Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,

Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him

Imo My boon is, that this gentleman may render 136

Of whom he had this ring

Post [Aside] What's that to him?

Cym That diamond upon your finger, say

How came it yours?

Iach Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken
 that 140

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym How! me?

Iach I am glad to be constrain'd to utter
 that

Which torments me to conceal. By villany

I got this ring, 'twas Leonatus' jewel, 144

Whom thou didst banish, and—which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd

'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
 my lord?

Cym All that belongs to this.

Iach That paragon, thy daughter,—

For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits 148

Quail to remember,—Give me leave, I faint Cym My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength,
 I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will ¹⁵²
 Than die ere I hear more Strive, man, and
 speak
Iach Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,— accurs'd
 The mansion where!—'twas at a feast—O, would ¹⁵⁶
 Our viands had been poison'd, or at least Those which I heav'd to head!—the good Posthumus,—
 What should I say? he was too good to be Where ill men were, and was the best of all ¹⁶⁰
 Amongst the rar'st of good ones,—sitting sadly Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
 For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast Of him that best could speak, for feature laming ¹⁶⁴
 The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva, Postures beyond brief nature, for condition,
 A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving, Fairness which strikes the eye
Cym I stand on fire ¹⁶⁹
 Come to the matter
Iach All too soon I shall,
 Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly This Posthumus—
 Most like a noble lord in love, and one ¹⁷²
 That had a royal lover—took his hunt,
 And, not dispraising whom we prais'd,—therein
 He was as calm as virtue,—he began His mistress' picture, which by his tongue being made, ¹⁷⁶
 And then a mind put in't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
 Prov'd us unspeaking sots
Cym Nay, nay, to the purpose Iach Your daughter's chastity, there it begins ¹⁸⁰
 He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
 And she alone were cold, whereat I, wretch, Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with
 him
 Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore Upon his honour'd finger, to attain ¹⁸⁵
 In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
 By hers and mine adultery He, true knight,
 No lesser of her honour confident ¹⁸⁸
 Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring,
 And would so, had it been a carbuncle
 Of Phœbus' wheel, and might so safely, had it Been all the worth of scar Away to Britain
 Post I in this design Well may you, sir, ¹⁹³
 Remember me at court, where I was taught
 Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
 'Twixt amorous and villainous Being thus quench'd ¹⁹⁶
 Of hope, not longing, mine Italian bram
 'Gan in your duller Britain operate
 Most vilely, for my vantage, excellent,

And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd, ²⁰⁰
 That I return'd with simular proof enough
 To make the noble Leonatus mad,
 By wounding his belief in her renown
 With token thus, and thus, averring notes ²⁰⁴
 Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,—
 Oh cunning! how I got it!—nay, some marks
 Of secret on her person, that he could not
 But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd, ²⁰⁸
 I having ta'en the forfeit Whereupon,— Methinks I see him now,—

Post [Coming forward] Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend!—Ay me, most credulous fool,
 Egregious murderer, thief, any thing ²¹²
 That's due to all the villains past, in being,
 To come O! give me cord, or knife, or poison,
 Some upright justicer Thou king, send out
 For torturers ingenious, it is I ²¹⁶
 That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
 By being worse than they I am Posthumus,
 That kill'd thy daughter, villain-like, I lie,
 That caus'd a lesser villain than myself, ²²⁰
 A sacrilegious thief, to do't, the temple
 Of virtue was she, yea, and she herself
 Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
 The dogs o' the street to bay me, every villain
 Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and ²²⁵
 Be villany less than 'twas! O Imogen!
 My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!

Imo Peace, my lord! hear, hear!
Post Shall's have a play of this? Thouscorn-ful page, ²²⁹

There lie thy part [Striking her she falls

Pis O, gentlemen, help!

Mine, and your mistress! O! my Lord Posthumus,

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now Help, help!
 Mine honour'd lady!

Cym Does the world go round? ²³³

Post How come these staggers on me?

Pis Wake, my mistress!

Cym If this be so, the gods do mean to strike
 me

To death with mortal joy

Pis How fares my mistress? ²³⁶

Imo O! get thee from my sight

Thou gav'st me poison dangerous fellow,
 hence!

Breathe not where princes are

Cym The tune of Imogen!

Pis Lady, ²⁴⁰

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if

That box I gave you was not thought by me

A precious thing I had it from the queen.

Cym New matter still?

Imo It poison'd me

Cor O gods! ²⁴⁴

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,

Which must approve thee honest 'If Pisano

Have,' said she, 'given his mistress that confection

Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd ²⁴⁸

As I would serve a rat.

Cym What's this, Cornelius?

Cor The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only 252
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem, I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life, but in short time 257
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions Have you ta'en of it?

Imo Most like I did, for I was dead

Bel My boys, 260

There was our error

Gui This is, sure, Fidele

Imo Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think that you are upon a rock, and now

Throw me again [Embracing him]

Post Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym How now, my flesh, my child!

What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo [Kneeling] Your blessing, sir

Bel [To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not,

You had a motive for't

Cym My tears that fall 269

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead

Imo I am sorry for't, my lord.

Cym O, she was naught, and long of her it was 272

That we meet here so strangely, but her son

Is gone, we know not how, nor where

Pis My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord

Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me 276

With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,

It was my instant death. By accident,

I had a feigned letter of my master's 280

Then in my pocket, which directed him

To seek her on the mountains near to Milford,

Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,

Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts 284

With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate

My lady's honour, what became of him

I further know not.

Gui Let me end the story

I slew him there

Cym Marry, the gods forfend! 288

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips

Pluck a hard sentence prithe, valiant youth,

Deny't again

Gui I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym He was a prince 292

Gui Almost incivillone The wrongs he did me

Were nothing prince-like, for he did provoke

me

With language that would make me spurn the sea

If it could so roar to me I cut off's head, 296

And am right glad he is not standing here

To tell this tale of mine

Cym

I am sorry for thee

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must

Endure our law Thou'rt dead

Imo That headless man 300

I thought had been my lord

Cym

Bind the offender,

And take him from our presence

Bel Stay, sir king

This man is better than the man he slew,

As well descended as thyself, and hath, 304

More of thee mented than a band of Clotens

Had ever scar for [To the Guard] Let his arms alone,

They were not born for bondage

Cym Why, old soldier,

Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,

By tasting of our wrath? How of descent 309

As good as we?

Arv In that he spake too far.

Cym And thou shalt die for't

Bel We will die all three

But I will prove that two on's are as good 312

As I have given out him My sons, I must

For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,

Though, haply, well for you.

Arv Your danger's ours.

Gui And our good hus

Bel Have at it, then, by leave 316

Thou hadst, great king, a subject who was call'd

Belarius

Cym What of him? he is

A banish'd traitor

Bel He it is that hath

Assum'd this age indeed, a banish'd man, 320

I know not how a traitor

Cym Take him hence

The whole world shall not save him.

Bel Not too hot

First pay me for the rursing of thy sons,

And let it be confiscate all so soon 324

As I have receiv'd it.

Cym Nursing of my sons!

Bel I am too blunt and saucy, here's my knee

Ere I arise I will prefer my sons,

Then spare not the old father Mighty sir 328

These two young gentlemen, that call me father,

And think they are my sons are none of mine,

They are the issue of your loins, my liege,

And blood of your begetting

Cym How! my issue! 332

Bel So sure as you your father's. I, old

Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd

Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason, that I suffer'd 336

Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—

For such and so they are—these twenty years

Have I train'd up, those arts they have as I Could put into them, my breeding was, sir, as

Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euphile,

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment I mov'd her to't,

Having receiv'd the punishment before, 344
 For that which I did then, beaten for loyalty Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
 The more of you 'twas felt the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious
 sir, 348

Here are your sons again, and I must lose
 Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
 The benediction of these covering heavens Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy 352

To inlay heaven with stars
Cym Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
 The service that you three have done is more Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children
 If these be they, I know not how to wish 356
 A pair of worthier sons

Bel Be pleas'd awhile
 This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
 Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius,
 This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, 360
 Your younger princely son, he, sir, was lapp'd
 In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
 Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,

I can with ease produce
Cym Guiderius had 364
 Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star,
 It was a mark of wonder

Bel This is he,
 Who hath upon him still that natural stamp
 It was wise nature's end in the donation, 368
 To be his evidence now

Cym O! what, am I
 A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more. Blest pray you be,
 That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
 You may reign in them now. O Imogen! 373
 Thou hast lost by this a kingdom

Imo No, my lord,
 I have got two worlds by 't. O my gentle brothers!

Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter 376
 But I am truest speaker you call'd me brother,
 When I was but your sister, I you brothers
 When ye were so indeed.

Cym Did you e'er meet?
Arv Ay, my good lord.

Gui And at first meeting lov'd, 380
 Continu'd so, until we thought he died.

Cor By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym O rare instinct!
 When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which 384 Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
 How parted with your brothers? how first met
 them?

Why fled you from the court, and whither?
 These, 388

And your three motives to the battle, with I know not how much more, should be demanded,

And all the other by-dependances,

From chance to chance, but nor the time nor place 392

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
 Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
 And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
 On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting Each object with a joy the counterchange 397
 Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
 And smoke the temple with our sacrifices [To BELARIUS] Thou art my brother, so we'll hold thee ever 400

Imo You are my father too, and did relieve
 me,

To see this gracious season.
Cym All o'erjoy'd
 Save these in bonds, let them be joyful too,
 For they shall taste our comfort

Imo My good master, 404
 I will yet do you service

Luc Happy be you!
Cym The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought

He would have well becom'd this place and grac'd

The thankings of a king
Post I am, sir, 408

The soldier that did company these three In poor besecming, 'twas a fitment for The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, Speak, Iachimo, I had you down and might 412
 Have made you finish.

Iach [Kneeling] I am down again,
 But now my heavy conscience sinks my knees,
 As then your force did. Take that life, beseech
 you,

Which I so often owe, but your ring first, 416
 And here the bracelet of the truest princess
 That ever swore her faith.

Post Kneel not to me
 The power that I have on you is to spare you,
 The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
 And deal with others better

Cym Nobly doom'd 422
 We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law, Pardon's the word to all

Arv You help us, sir,
 As you did mean indeed to be our brother, 424 Joy'd are we that you are

Post Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd, 428
 Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows

Of mine own kindred when I wak'd, I found This label on my bosom, whose containing

Is so from sense in hardness that I can 432
 Make no collection of it, let him show
 His skill in the construction.

Luc Philarmonus!

Sooth Here, my good lord.

Luc Read, and declare the meaning

Sooth. Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air, and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp, 444
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much [To CYMBELINE] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call mollis aer and mollis aer 448
We term it mulier which mulier, I divine,
Is thus most constant wife, who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle, Unknown to you, [To POSTHUMUS] unsought, were clipp'd about 452

With this most tender air

Cym This hath some seeming Sooth The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee, and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth, who, by Belarius stolen, 456
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue Promises Britain peace and plenty

Cym Well,
My peace we will begin And, Caius Lucius, 460
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire, promising To pay our wonted tribute, from the which

We were dissuaded by our wicked queen, 464 Whom heavens—in justice both on her and hers—

Have laid most heavy hand

Soth The fingers of the powers above do tune

The harmony of this peace The vision 468
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd, for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft, 472
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd which foreshow'd our princely
eagle,

The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, 476
Which shines here in the west.

Cym Laud we the gods,
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects Set we forward: let 480
A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together, so through Lud's town march

And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify, seal it with feasts 484
Set on there Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace [Exeunt

Before the Palace of Antioch

Enter GOWER

*To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come,
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes* 4
*It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves, and holy-ales
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives* 8
*The purchase is to make men glorious,
 Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius

*This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
 The fairest in all Syria,
 I tell you what mine authors say
 Thus king unto him took a fere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face
 As heaven had lent her all his grace, With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke Bad child, worse father! to entice his own
 To evil should be done by none
 By custom what they did begin
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sunful dame
 Made many princes thither frame.

SCENE I.—Antioch A Room in the Palace

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants

Ant Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large
 receiv'd

The danger of the task you undertake Per I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul Embolden'd with the glory of her praise, 4
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise

Ant Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,

For the embracements even of Jove himself,
 At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd, 8
 Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections [Music

Enter the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS

Per See, where she comes apparell'd like the spring, 12
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives renown to men!
 Her face the book of praises, where is read Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath 17
 Could never be her mild companion
 You gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
 That hath inflam'd desire in my breast 20
 To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree

Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness! 24

Ant Prince Pericles,—

Per That would be son to great Antiochus

Ant Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd,
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain,
And which, without desert, because thine eye 32
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire Tell thee with speechless tongues and semblance pale, 36

That without covering, save yon field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars,
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist 40

Per Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught

My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must, 44
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error
I'll make my will then, and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe, 48

Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do,
My riches to the earth from whence they came,

[To the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS]

But my unspotted fire of love to you 53
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow

Ant Scorning advice, read the conclusion
then, 56

Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed Daugh Of all say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous!

Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness! 60

Per Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

I am no viper, yet I feed

On mother's flesh which did me breed,

I sought a husband, in which labour

I found that kindness in a father

He's father, son, and husband mild,

I mother, wife, and yet his child

How they may be, and yet in two,

As you will live, resolve it you

Sharp physic is the last but, O you powers! 72 That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?

Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill 77

But I must tell you now my thoughts revolt,

For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who finger'd to make men his lawful music, Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken,

But being play'd upon before your time, 84
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime
Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy
life,

For that's an article within our law, 88
As dangerous as the rest Your time's expir'd Either expound now or receive your sentence

Per Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act, 92
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown,

For vice repeated is like the wandering wind, 96
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself,
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts 100

Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
By man's oppression, and the poor worm doth die for't.

Kings are earth's gods, in vice their law's their
will,

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know, and it is fit, 105

What being more known grows worse, to smother it

All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant [Aside] Heaven! that I had thy head he has found the meaning, 109

But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting, 112

We might proceed to cancel of your days,
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise
Forty days longer we do respite you, 116

If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son
And until then your entertain shall be

As doth befit our honour and your worth. 120

[Exeunt all but PERICLES]

Per How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like a hypocrite,

The which is good in nothing but in sight!
If it be true that I interpret false, 124

Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul,
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasplings with your child,—
Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father,—
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed,
And both like serpents are, who though they feed 132

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.

Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men Blush not in actions blacker than the night, Will shun no course to keep them from the light. 136

One sin, I know, another doth provoke, Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame 140
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear

[Exit

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS

Ant He hath found the meaning, for which we mean

To take his head 144
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy, Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner,
And therefore instantly this prince must die 148
For by his fall my honour must keep high Who attends us there?

Enter THALIARD

Thal Doth your highness call?

Ant Thaliard,
You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy, 153
And for your faithfulness we will advance you Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold,

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
him 156

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it Say, is it done?

Thal My lord, 'tis done

Ant Enough 160

Enter a Messenger

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste
Mess My lord, Prince Pericles is fled [Exit

Ant [To THALIARD] As thou Wilt live, fly after, and, as an arrow shot
From a well-experienced archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return 165 Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead.'

Thal My lord,
If I can get him within my pistol's length, 168 I'll make him sure enough so, farewell to your highness

Ant Thaliard, adieu! [Exit THALIARD
Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head [Exit

SCENE II.—Tyre A Room in the Palace

Enter PERICLES

Per [To those without] Let none disturb us.—
Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest, as not an hour
In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night— 4
The tomb where grief should sleep—can breed me quiet?

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
—d danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,

Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here,
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits, 9
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me
Then it is thus the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread, 12
Have after-nourishment and life by care,
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now and cares it be not done
And so with me the great Antiochus,— 16
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great can make his will his act,— Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence,

Nor boots it me to say I honour him, 20
If he suspect I may dishonour him,
And what may make him blush in being known, He'll stop the course by which it might be known
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land, 24
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state,
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence 28

Which care of them, not pity of myself,—
Who am no more but as the tops of trees, Which fence the roots they grow by and defend
them — 31
Make both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish

Enter HELICANUS and other Lords

First Lord Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

Sec Lord And keep your mind, till you return to us,

Peaceful and comfortable 36
Hel Peace, peace! and give experience
tongue

They do abuse the king that flatter him,
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin,
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark, 40 To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing,

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life 45
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please,
I cannot be much lower than my knees

Per All leave us else, but let your cares o'er-look 48

What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us [Exeunt Lords

Helicanus, thou

Hast mov'd us, what seest thou in our looks?

Hel An angry brow, dread lord 52

Per If there be such a dart in prince's frowns, How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment?

Per Thou know'st I have power 56

To take thy life from thee Hel [Kneeling] I have ground the axe myself,

Do you but strike the blow

Per Rise, prithee, rise,
Sit down, thou art no flatterer 60
I thank thee for it, and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!

Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant, 64

What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself

Per Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,

That munster'st a potion unto me 68
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself

Attend me then I went to Antioch,
Where as thou know'st, against the face of death

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty, 72
From whence an issue I might propagate
Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder,
The rest, hark in thine ear, as black as incest,
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father Seem'd not to strike, but smooth, but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss
Which fear so grew in me, I luther fled, 80
Under the covering of a careful night,

Who seem'd my good protector, and, being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous, and tyrants' fears 84
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years

And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air

How many worthy princes' bloods were shed, 88
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,

To lop that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,

When all, for mine, if I may call't, offence, 92
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it,—

Hel Alas! sir
Per Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks, 96

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest, ere it came,

And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them 100

Hel Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak, Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,

And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,

Who either by public war or private treason 104
Will take away your life

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,

Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life 108
Your rule direct to any, if to me,

Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per I do not doubt thy faith,
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence? 112

Hel We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,

From whence we had our being and our birth
Per Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee, 116
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself

The care I had and have of subjects' good On thee I'll lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath,
Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both 121

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,

Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince
[Exeunt]

SCENE III — The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace

Enter THALIARD

Thal So this is Tyre, and this the court Here must I kill King Pericles, and if I do not, I am sure to be hanged at home 'tis dangerous Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets now do I see he had some reason for it, for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one Hush! here come the lords of Tyre 10

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question me of your king's departure
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, 13

Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.
Thal [Aside] How! the king gone!

Hel If further yet you will be satisfied, 16
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,

He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—

Thal [Aside] What from Antioch?
Hel Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not— 20

Took some displeasure at him, at least he judg'd so,
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,

To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil, 24

With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal [Aside] Well, I perceive

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would,
But since he's gone, the king it sure must please 28

He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea.
I'll present myself [Aloud] Peace to the lords of Tyre.

Hel Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal From him I come,
With message unto princely Pericles,
But since my landing I have understood Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,

My message must return from whence it came

Hel We have no reason to desire it, Commended to our master, not to us
Yet, ere you shall depart, thus we desire,
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre

[Exeunt

SCENE IV — Tarsus A Room in the Governor's House

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants

Cle My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it,

For who digs hills because they do aspire Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher O my distressed lord! even such our griefs are, Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's
eyes,

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise

Cle O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air, our eyes do weep Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder,

That if heaven slumber while their creatures want,

They may awake their helps to comfort them
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak help me with tears

Dio I'll do my best, sir

Cle Thus Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets, Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd
the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at,
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd, Like one another's glass to trim them by Their tables were stor'd full to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight,
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio O! 'tis too true

Cle But see what heaven can do! By thus our change,

These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and air

Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,

As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise, Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it,
Those mothers who, to nouse up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping,
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial
Is not this true?

Dio Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness

Cle O! let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs

Enter a Lord

Lord Where's the lord governor?
Cle Here

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect

Lord We have deserv'd, upon our neighbouring shore,

A portl' sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle I thought as much

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor,

And so in ours Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,

Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,

To beat us down, the which are down already,
And make a conquest of unhappy me,

Whereas no glory's got to overcome Lord That's the least fear, for by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,

And come to us as favourers, not as foes Cle Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit
But bring they what they will and what they can,

What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest and we are half way
there

Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,

And what he craves
Lord I go, my lord

Cle Welcome is peace if he on peace consist,
If wars we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per Lord governor, for so we hear you are Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes

We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre, &
And seen the desolation of your streets
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load,

[Exit

84

And these our ships, you happily may think 92
 Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
 Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,
 And give them life whom hunger starv'd half 96
 dead

All The gods of Greece protect you!
 And we'll pray for you

Per Arise, I pray you, rise
 We do not look for reverence, but for love,
 And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle The which when any shall not gratify,
 Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
 Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
 The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
 Till when—the which, I hope, shall ne'er be 105
 seen—

Your Grace is welcome to our town and us Per Which welcome we'll accept, feast here 108 awhile,

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile 108
 [Exeunt

ACT II

Enter GOWER

Here have you seen a mighty king
 His child, I wis, to incest bring A better prince and benign lord,
 That will prove awful both in deed and word 4
 Be quiet, then, as men should be,
 Till he hath pass'd necessity
 I'll show you those in troubles reign, Losing a mate, a mountain gain 8
 The good in conversation,
 To whom I give my benison,
 Is still at Tarsus, where each man Thinks all is writ he speken can 12
 And, to remember what he does,
 Build his statue to make him glorious
 But tidings to the contrary
 Are brought your eyes what need speak I?

DUMB SHOW

Enter, from one side, PERICLES, talking with CLEON, all their Train with them Enter, at another door, a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES, who shows the letter to CLEON, then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON, &c, severally

Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
 Not to eat honey like a drone
 From others' labours for though he strive To killen bad, keep good alive, 20
 And to fulfil his prince's desire,
 Sends word of all that haps in Tyre
 How Thahard came full bent with sin
 And had intent to murder him 24
 And that in Tarsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest
 He, doing so, put forth to seas,
 Where when men been, there's seldom ease 29
 For now the wind begins to blow,
 Thunder above and deeps below
 Make such unquiet, that the ship

Should house him safe is wrack'd and split, 32
 And he, good prince, having all lost,
 By waves from coast to coast is tost
 All perishes of man, of pelf,
 Ne aught escapen but himself 36
 Till Fortune, tur'd with doing bad, Threw him ashore, to give him glad
 And here he comes What shall be next,
 Pardon old Gower, thus longs the text [Exit

SCENE I — Pentapohs An open Place by the Sea-side

Enter PERICLES, wet

Per Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!

Wind, rain and thunder, remember, earthly man
 Is but a substance that must yield to you,
 And I, as fits my nature, do obey you 4
 Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks, Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
 breath

Nothing to think on but ensuing death
 Let it suffice the greatness of your powers 8
 To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes,
 And having thrown him from your watery grave,
 Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave

Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish What, ho, Pilch! 12

Sec Fish Ha! come and bring away the nets

First Fish What, Patch-breech, I say!

Thurd Fish What say you, master?

First Fish Look how thou surrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannon 17

Thurd Fish Fauth, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us 20
 even now

First Fish Alas! poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves 24

Thurd Fish Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish half flesh, a plague on them! they ne'er come but I look to be washed Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea 30

First Fish Why, as men do a-land, the great ones eat up the little ones, I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale, a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful Such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all. 38

Per [Aside] A pretty moral

Thurd Fish But master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry

Sec Fish. Why, man? 43

Thurd Fish Because he should have swallowed me too, and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per [Aside] Simonides!

Thrid Fish We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey 52

Per [Aside] How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men,
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect! 56

[Aloud] Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen

Sec Fish Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it 60

Per Y' may see the sea hath cast me on your coast

Sec Fish What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way!

Per A man whom both the waters and the wind, 64

In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him,
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg

First Fish No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than e can do with working 70

Sec Fish Anst thou catch any fishes then?
Per I never practised it

Sec Fish Nay then thou wilt starve, sure, for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't

Per What I have been I have forgot to know, 76

But what I am want teaches me to think on,
A man throng'd up with cold, my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help,
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, 81
For that I am a man, pray see me buried

First Fish Die, quoth-a? Now, gods forbid!
I have a gown here, come, put it on, keep thee warm Now, afore me, a handsome fellow!
Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome 89

Per I thank you, sir

First Fish Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg 92

Per I did but crave

Sec Fish But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping

Per Why, are all your beggars whipped
then? 97

Sec Fish O! not all, my friend, not all, for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle But, master, I'll go draw up the net. 101

[Exit with Thrid Fisherman Per How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

First Fish Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are? 104

Per Not well.

First Fish Why, I'll tell you this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides

Per The good King Simonides do you call
him? 109

First Fish Ay, sir, and he deserves to be so called for his peaceable reign and good government 112

Per He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government How far is his court distant from this shore?

First Fish Marry, sir, half a day's journey, and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love 120

Per Were my fortunes equal to my desires,
I could wish to make one there

First Fish O! sir, things must be as they may, and what a man cannot get, he may law fully deal for his wife's soul,— 125

Re-enter Second and Thrid Fishermen, drawing up a net

Sec Fish Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law, 'twill hardly come out, Ha! bobs on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour

Per An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it

Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself, 132
And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life,
'Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield 136
'Twixt me and death,'—and pointed to this brace,

'For that it sav'd me, keep it, in like necessity—
The which the gods protect thee from!—'t may defend thee'

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it, 140
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd they have given
't again

I thank thee for't, my shipwrack now's no ill,
Since I have here my father's gift in's will 144

First Fish What mean you, sir?

Per To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king,
I know it by this mark He lov'd me dearly, 148
And for his sake I wish the having of it,
And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's
court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman,
And if that ever my low fortunes better, 152
I'll pay your bounties, till then rest your debtor

First Fish Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms 157

First Fish Why, do'e take it; and the gods give thee good on't!

Sec Fish Ay, but hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the water, there are certain condolements, certain vails I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it

Per Believe it, I will 165
By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel,
And spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his bidding on my arm 168
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided 172
Of a pair of bases

Sec Fish We'll sure provide, thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself 176

Per Then honour be but a goal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill [Exeunt]

SCENE II — The Same A public Way Platform leading to the Lists A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the KING, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants

Sim Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord They are, my liege,
And stay your coming to present themselves

Sim Return them, we are ready, and our daughter, 4

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.]

Thai It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express 8

My commendations great, whose merit's less Sim 'Tis fit it should be so, for princes are

A model, which heaven makes like to itself
As jewels lose their glory if neglected, 12

So princes their renowns if not respected
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device

Thai Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform. 16

Enter a Knight, he passes over the stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess

Sim Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai A knight of Sparta, my renowned
father,

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun, 20

The word, Lux tua vita mihi Sim He loves you well that holds his life of you. [The Second Knight passes over]

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai A prince of Macedon, my royal father,
And the device he bears upon his shield 25

Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady,
The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dulzura que por fuerza

[The Thrd Knight passes over]

Sim And what's the third?
Thai The third of Antioch, 28

And his device, a wreath of chivalry,

The word, Me pompa provexit apex

[The Fourth Knight passes over]

Sim What is the fourth?

Thai A burning torch that's turned upside down, 32

The word, Quod me alit me extinguit

Sim Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame as it can kill

[The Fifth Knight passes over]

Thai The fifth, a hand environed with clouds, 36

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried,
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides

[The Sixth Knight, PERICLES, passes over]

Sim And what's

The sixth and last, the which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd? 41

Thai He seems to be a stranger, but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top,
The motto, In hac spe vivo 44

Sim A pretty moral,

From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortune yet may flourish.

First Lord He had need mean better than his outward show 48

Can any way speak in his just commend,
For, by his rusty outside he appears

To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance

Sec Lord He well may be a stranger, for he comes 52

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.
Thrd Lord And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust

Sim Opimon's but a fool, that makes us scan 56

The outward habit by the inward man But stay, the knights are coming, we'll withdraw

Into the gallery [Exeunt Great shouts, and all cry,
'The mean knight!']

SCENE III — The Same A Hall of State.

A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Marshal, Ladies, Lords, Knights from tilting, and Attendants

Sim Knights,

To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,

As in a title-page, your worth in arms, 4
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit, Since every worth in show commends itself

Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast
You are princes and my guests. 8

Thai But you, my knight and guest,
To whom this wreath of victory I give,

And crown you king of this day's happiness.
Per 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit 12

Sim Call it by what you will, the day is yours,

And here, I hope, is none that envies it
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed, 16
And you're her labour'd scholar Come, queen o' the feast,—

For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place,

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace

Knights We are honour'd much by good

Simonides 20

Sim Your presence glads our days, honour
we love,

For who hates honour, hates the gods above

Marshal Sir, yonder is your place

Per Some other is more fit.

First Knight Contend not, sir, for we are
gentlemen 24

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes

Envy the great nor do the low despise

Per You are right courteous knights

Sim Sit, sir, sit

Per By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts, 28

These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

Thai [Aside] By Juno, that is queen of marriage,

All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,

Wishing him my meat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman 32

Sim He's but a country gentleman,

He has done no more than other knights have
done,

He has broken a staff or so, so let it pass

Thai To me he seems like diamond to glass

Per Yon king's to me like to my father's picture, 37

Which tells me in that glory once he was,

Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,

And he the sun for them to reverence 40

None that beheld him, but like lesser lights

Did veil their crowns to his supremacy,

Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the
night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light

Whereby I see that Time's the king of men, 45

He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they crave

Sim. What, are you merry, knights? 48

First Knight Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,

We drink this health to you.

Knights We thank your Grace

Sim. Yet pause awhile, 53

Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,

As if the entertainment in our court

Had not a show might countervail his worth. 56

Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father?

Sim. O! attend, my daughter

Princes in this should live like gods above,

Who freely give to every one that comes 60

To honour them,

And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at

Therefore to make his entrance more sweet, 64 Here say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to
him

Thai Alas! my father, it befits not me

Unto a stranger knight to be so bold,

He may my proffer take for an offence, 68

Since men take women's gifts for impudence

Sim How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else

Thai [Aside] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better 72

Sim And further tell him, we desire to know of him,

Of whence he is, his name, and parentage

Thai The king, my father, sir, has drunk to
you

Per I thank him. 76

Thai Wishing it so much blood unto your life

Per I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely

Thai And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage

Per A gentleman of Tyre, my name, Pericles, 81

My education been in arts and arms,

Who, looking for adventures in the world,

Was by the rough seas left of ships and men, 84
And after shipwreck, driven upon this shore

Thai He thanks your Grace, names himself Pericles,

A gentleman of Tyre,

Who only by misfortune of the seas 88
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore

Sim Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles, 92

And waste the time which looks for other revels

Even in your armours, as you are address'd,

Will very well become a soldier's dance

I will not have excuse, with saying this 96

Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads

Since they love men in arms as well as beds

[The Knights dance]

So this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd
Come, sir, 100

Here is a lady that wants breathing too

And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre

Are excellent in making ladies trip,

And that their measures are as excellent. 104

Per In those that practise them they are,
my lord

Sim O! that's as much as you would be dem'd

Of your fair courtesy

[The Knights and Ladies dance]

Unclasp, unclasp,

Thanks, gentlemen, to all, all have done well,

[To PERICLES] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct 109

These knights unto their several lodgings!

Yours, sir,

We have given order to be next our own.

Per I am at your Grace's pleasure
Sim Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
 And that's the mark I know you level at,
 Therefore each one betake him to his rest,
 To-morrow all for speeding do their best 116

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV — Tyre A Room in the Governor's House

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES

Hel No, Escanes, know this of me,
 Antiochus from incest liv'd not free,
 For which, the most high gods not minding longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store 4

Due to this heinous capital offence,
 Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
 When he was seated in a chariot

Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with
 him, 8

A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
 Their bodies, even to loathing, for they so stunk,
 That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall Scorn now their hand should give them burial 12

Esca 'Twas very strange

Hel And yet but just, for though
 This king were great, his greatness was no guard
 To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward

Esca 'Tis very true 16

Enter two or three Lords

First Lord See, not a man in private conference

Or council has respect with him but he Sec Lord It shall no longer grieve without reproof

Thurd Lord And curs'd be he that will not second it 20

First Lord Follow me then Lord Helicane, a word

Hel With me? and welcome Happy day,
 my lords

First Lord Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
 And now at length they overflow their banks 24

Hel Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love

First Lord Wrong not yourself then, noble Helicane,

But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
 Or know what ground's made happy by his
 breath 28

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out,
 If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there,
 And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
 Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral, 32
 And leaves us to our free election.

Sec Lord Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
 Like goodly buildings left without a roof 36
 Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,

That best know'st how to rule and how to reign,
 We thus submit unto, our sovereign.

All Live, noble Helicane! 40

Hel For honour's cause forbear your sufferings

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,

Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease 44
 A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you To forbear the absence of your king,

If in which time expir'd he not return,
 I shall with aged patience bear your yoke 48

But if I cannot win you to this love,
 Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,

And in your search spend your adventurous
 worth,

Whom if you find, and win unto return, 52
 You shall like diamonds sit about his crown

First Lord To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield,

And since Lord Helicane enjoined us,
 We with our travels will endeavour it 56

Hel Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands
 [Exeunt]

SCENE V — Pentapolis A Room in the Palace

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter, the Knights meet him

First Knight Good morrow to the good Simonides

Sim Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
 A married life 4

Her reason to herself is only known,
 Which yet from her by no means can I get

Sec Knight May we not get access to her,
 my lord?

Sim Faith, by no means, she hath so strictly tied 8

Her to her chamber that 'tis impossible
 One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery,

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
 And on her virgin honour will not break it. 12

Thurd Knight Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves [Exeunt Knights.]

Sim So,

They're well dispatch'd, now to my daughter's letter

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
 Or never more to view nor day nor light. 17

'Tis well, mistress, your choice agrees with
 mine,

I like that well how absolute she's in't,
 Not minding whether I dislike or no! 20

Well, I do commend her choice,
 And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft! here he comes I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per All fortune to the good Simonides! 24

Sim. To you as much sir! I am beholding
to you
For your sweet music this last night I do Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony 28 Per It is your Grace's pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.

Sim Sir, you are music's master Per The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim Let me ask you one thing 32
What do you think of my daughter, sir?

Per A most virtuous princess

Sim And she is fair too, is she not?

Per As a fair day in summer, wondrous fair

Sim My daughter, sir, thinks very well of
you, 37

Ay, so well, that you must be her master,

And she will be your scholar therefore look to it

Per I am unworthy for her schoolmaster 40

Sim She thinks not so, peruse this writing else

Per [Aside] What's here?

A letter that she loves the knight of Tyre!

'Tis the king's subtilty to have my life 44

O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her 48

Sim Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain

Per By the gods, I have not

Never did thought of mine levy offence, 52

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure

Sim Traitor, thou liest

Per Traitor!

Sim Ay, traitor

Per Even in his throat, unless it be the
king, 56

That calls me traitor, I return the lie

Sim [Aside] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage

Per My actions are as noble as my thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent 60

I came unto your court for honour's cause

And not to be a rebel to her state,

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy 64

Sim No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

Per Then, as you are as virtuous as 'fair,'

Resolve your angry father, if my tongue 68

Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe

To any syllable that made love to you.

Tha Why, sir, say if you had,

Who takes offence at that would make me glad? 72

Sim Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

[Aside] I am glad on't, with all my heart.

I'll tame you, I'll bring you in subjection.

Will you, not having my consent, 76

Bestow your love and your affections Upon a stranger? [Aside] who, for aught I
know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary, 80

As great in blood as I myself —

[Aloud] Therefore, hear you, mistress, either frame

Your will to mine, and you, sir, hear you,

Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you— 84

Man and wife

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it
too,

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy,

And for a further grief,—God gave you joy!

What! are you both pleas'd?

Tha Yes, if you love me, sir 88

Per Even as my life, or blood that fosters it

Sim What! are you both agreed?

Tha Yes, if 't please your majesty

Per It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed, 92

Then with what haste you can get you to bed

[Exeunt

ACT III

Enter GOWER

Now sleep yslak'd hath the rout,

No din but snores the house about,

Made louder by the o'er-fed breast

Of this most pompous marriage-feast 4

The cat, with eyne of burning coal,

Now couches fore the mouse's hole,

And crickets sung at the oven's mouth,

E'er the blither for their drouth 8

Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,

Where, by the loss of maidenhead,

A babe is moulded Be attent,

And time that is so briefly spent 12

'Tith your fine fancies quaintly eche,

What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech

DUMB SHOW

Enter, from one side, PERICLES and SIMONIDES, with Attendants, a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES, the Lords kneel to

PERICLES Then enter THAISA with child, and

LYCHORIDA SIMONIDES shows his daughter the letter, she rejoices she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and all depart

By many a dorn and painful perch,

Of Pericles the careful search 16

By the four opposing coigns,

Whence the world together joins,

Is made with all due diligence,

That horse and sail and high expense, 20

Can stand the quest At last from Tyre,—

Fame answering the most strange inquire—

To the court of King Simonides

Are letters brought, the tenour these 24

Antiochus and his daughter dead,

The men of Tyrus on the head

Of Helicanus would set on

*The crown of Tyre, but he will none
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress, Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis, Yrashed the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
'Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?'
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre
His queen, with child, makes her desire,— Which who shall cross?—along to go,
Omit we all their dole and woe Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow half the flood Hath their keel cut but Fortune's mood
Varies again the grisd north Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives
The lady shrieks, and well-a-need Does fall in travail with her fear
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself perform
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak*

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard

Per Thou God of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass, Having call'd them from the deep O! still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders, gently quench
Thy numble, sulphurous flashes O! how Lychorrida,
How does my queen? Thou stormest venom-
ously,
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death, Unheard Lychorida! Lucina, O!
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity Aboard our dancing boat, make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails!

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida!

Lyc Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had concert, would die, as I Am like to do take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen
Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lyc Patience, good sir, do not assist the storm
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort Per O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here
below,
Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you Lyc Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge,
Per Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe
Quiet and gentle thy conditions!
For thou art the rudelest welcome to this world That e'er was prince's child Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb, even at the first Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here Now, the good
gods
Throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two Sailors

First Sail What courage, sir? Gods save you!
Per Courage enough I do not fear the flaw,
It hath done to me the worst Yet for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet
First Sail Slack the bolins there! thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself Sec Sail But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not First Sail Sir, your queen must overboard the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead Per That's your superstition
First Sail Pardon us, sir, with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight Per As you think meet Most wretched
queen!
Lyc Here she lies, sir Per A terrible child bed hast thou had, my dear,
No light, no fire the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly, nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze,
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells! O Lychorida!
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels, and bid Nicander Bring me the satin coffer lay the babe
Upon the pillow Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her suddenly, woman, [Exit LYCHORIDA]

Sec Sail Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitum'd ready 72 Per I thank thee Mariner, say what coast is this?
Sec Sail We are near Tarsus
Per Thither, gentle mariner, 76
 Alter thy course for Tyre When canst thou reach it?
Sec Sail By break of day, if the wind cease Per O! make for Tarsus
 There will I visit Cleon, for the babe 80
 Cannot hold out to Tyros, there I'll leave it
 At careful nursing Go thy ways, good mariner, I'll bring the body presently [Exeunt]

SCENE II — Ephesus A Room in CERIMON'S House

Enter CERIMON, a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked Cer Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON

Phil Doth my lord call?

Cer Get fire and meat for these poor men,
 'T has been a turbulent and stormy night. 4

Ser I have been in many, but such a night as this

Till now I ne'er endur'd

Cer Your master will be dead ere you return, There's nothing can be minister'd to nature 8
 That can recover him [To PHILEMON] Give this to the 'pothecary,
 And tell me how it works

[Exeunt all except CERIMON]

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent Good morrow, sir

Sec Gent Good morrow to your lordship

Cer Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early? 12

First Gent Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,

Shook as the earth did quake,

The very principals did seem to rend, 16

And all to topple Pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house

Sec Gent That is the cause we trouble you so early,

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer O! you say well 20

First Gent But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose

'Tis most strange, 24

Nature should be so conversant with pain,

Being thereto not compell'd

Cer I hold it ever,

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater

Than nobleness and riches, careless heirs 28

May the two latter darken and expend,

But immortality attends the former,

Making a man a god 'Tis known I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have— 33

Together with my practice—made familiar
 To me and to my and the blest infusions
 That dwell in vegetables, in metals, stones, 36
 And can speak of the disturbances That nature works, and of her cures, which doth give me
 A more content in course of true delight
 Than to be thirsty after tottering honour, 40
 Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
 To please the fool and death Sec Gent Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth
 Your charity, and hundreds call themselves 44
 Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd
 And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even
 Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon 47
 Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay

Enter two Servants, with a chest

First Serv So, lift there

Cer What is that?

First Serv Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest

'Tis of some wrack

Cer Set it down, let's look upon't

Sec Gent 'Tis like a coffin, sir

Cer Whate'er it be, 52

'Tis wondrous heavy Wrench it open straight,

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon

us

Sec Gent 'Tis so, my lord

Cer How close tis caulk'd and bitum'd! 56

Did the sea cast it up?

First Serv I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore

Cer Come, wrench it open.

Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense 60

Sec Gent A delicate odour

Cer As ever hit my nostril So, up with it

O you most potent gods! what's here? a corse!

First Gent Most strange! 64

Cer Shrouded in cloth of state, balm'd and entreasur'd

With full bags of spices! A passport too!

Apollo, perfect me i' the characters!

Here I give to understand, 68

If e'er this coffin drive a-land,

I, King Pericles, have lost

This queen worth all our mundane cost.

Who finds her, give her burying, 72

She was the daughter of a king.

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!

It thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart 76

That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd to-

night,

Sec Gent. Most likely, sir

Cer Nay, certainly to-night,

For look, how fresh she looks They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within, 80

Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

[Exit Second Servant.]

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The overpress'd spirits I heard * 84
Of an Egyptian, that had nine hours hen dead,
Who was by good appliances recovered

Re-enter Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire Well said, well said, the fire and cloths
The rough and woeful music that we have, 88
Cause it to sound, beseech you
The viol once more,—how thou stirr'st, thou block!

The music there! I pray you, give her air
Gentlemen, 92
This queen will live, nature awakes, a warmth
Breathes out of her, she hath not been entranc'd Above five hours See! how she 'gins to blow Into life's flower again

First Gent The heavens 96
Through you increase our wonder and set up Your fame for ever

Cer She is alive! behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost, 100
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold,
The diamonds of a most praised water
Do appear, to make the world twice rich Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature, 104

Rare as you seem to be! [She moves
Thai O dear Diana!
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this? 108

Sec Gent Is not this strange?
First Gent Most rare

Cer Hush, gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands, to the next chamber bear
her 108
Get linen, now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal Come, come,
And Æsculapius guide us!

[Exeunt, carrying THAISA away]

SCENE III—*Tarsus A Room in CLEON'S
House*

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, and LYCHORIDA, with MARINA in her arms

Per Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be
gone,

My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands
In a ligious peace You and your lady Take from my heart all thankfulness, the gods
Make up the rest upon you! 5

Cle Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,

Yet glance full wanderingly on us
Dion. O your sweet queen!

That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither, 8

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!
Per We cannot but obey

The powers above us Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis My gentle babe Marina—whom, 12

For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so—here
I charge your charity withal, and leave her
The infant of your care, beseeching you 15
To give her princely traming, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Cle Fear not, my lord, but think Your Grace, that fed my country with your corn—

For which the people's prayers still fall upon
you— 19

Must in your child be thought on If neglecton Should therein make me vile, the common body,
By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty,
But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine, 24
To the end of generation!

Per I believe you,
Your honour and your goodness teach me to't, Without your vows 'Till she be married, madam

By bright Diana, whom we honour, all 28
Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain,
Though I show ill m't So I take my leave Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child

Dion I have one myself, 32
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord

Per Madam, my thanks and prayers Cle We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge
o' the shore,

Then give you up to the mask'd Nep'tune and 36
The gentlest winds of heaven

Per I will embrace
Your offer Come, dearest madam. O! no tears, Lychorida, no tears

Look to your little mistress, on whose grace 40
You may depend hereafter Come, my lord
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV—*Ephesus A Room in CERIMON'S
House*

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer, which are now
At your command Know you the character?

Thai It is my lord's 4
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, Even on my earing time, but whether there

Deliver'd, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say But since King Pericles, 8

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,

And never more have joy.

Cer Madam, if this you purpose as you
speak, 12

Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.

Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you. 16

Thai My recompense is thanks, that's all, Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.

[Exeunt]

ACT IV

Enter GOWER

*Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcom'd and settled to his own desire
 His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus, Unto Diana there a votaress
 Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast-growing scene must find
 At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
 In music, letters, who hath gain'd
 Of education all the grace,
 Which makes her both the heart and place
 Of general wonder But, alack!
 That monster envy, oft the wrack
 Of earned praise, Marina's life
 Seeks to take off by treason's knife
 And in this kind hath our Cleon
 One daughter, and a wench full grown,
 Even ripe for marriage-rite this maid Hight Philoten, and it is said
 For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be Be't when she weav'd the sleided silk
 With fingers, long, small, white as milk,
 Or when she would with sharp needl wound
 The cambric, which she made more sound 24
 By hurting it when to the lute
 She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
 That still records with moan or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dian still Thus Philoten contends in skill
 With absolute Marina so
 With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts,
 And not as given This so darks
 In Philoten all graceful marks,
 That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
 A present murderer does prepare For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter
 The sooner her vile thoughts to stead, Lychorida, our nurse, is dead
 And curs'd Dionyza hath
 The pregnant instrument of wrath
 Prest for this blow The unborn event
 I do commend to your content
 Only I carry winged time
 Post on the lame feet of my rime,
 Which never could I so convey,
 Unless your thoughts went on my way
 Dionyza doth appear,
 With Leonine, a murderer.* [Exit

SCENE I—Tarsus An open Place near the Sea-shore

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE

Dion Thy oath remember, thou hast sworn to do't

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
 Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,
 To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy bosom,
 In flame too nicely, nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be A soldier to thy purpose

Leon I'll do't, but yet she is a goodly creature

4 Dion The fitter, then, the gods should have her Here
 She comes weeping for her only mistress' death Thou art resolv'd?

8 Leon I am resolv'd 12

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers

Mar No, I will rob Tellus of her weed, 12 To strew thy green with flowers, the yellows, blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds,
 Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave, 16

16 While summer days do last Ay me! poor maid, Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
 This world to me is like a lasting storm,
 Whurring me from my friends 20

20 Dion How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing, you have A nurse of me Lord! how your favour's
 chang'd 24

28 With this unprofitable woe Come,
 Gave me your flowers, ere the sea mar it
 Walk with Leonine, the air is quick there,
 And it pierces and sharpens the stomach
 Come, 28

32 Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her Mar No, I pray you,
 I'll not bereave you of your servant

Dion Come, come,
 36 I love the king your father, and yourself, 32
 With more than foreign heart We every day Expect him here, when he shall come and find
 Our paragon to all reports thus blasted, 35

40 He will repent the breadth of his great voyage, Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
 No care to your best courses Go, I pray you, Walk, and be cheerful once again, reserve

44 That excellent complexion, which did steal 40
 The eyes of young and old Care not for me,
 I can go home alone

Mar Well, I will go,
 48 But yet I have no desire to it 43

Dion Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
 Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least
 Remember what I have said

Leon I warrant you, madam Dion I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while, 47

Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood
 What! I must have care of you

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.
 [Exit DIONYZA

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west,

Mar When I was born, the wind was north

Leon. Was 't so?

Mar My father, as nurse said, did never fear,

But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands haling ropes,
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck 56
Leon When was this?
Mar When I was born
Never were waves nor wind more violent,
And from the ladder-tackle washes off 60
A canvas-climber 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt out?'
And with a dropping industry they skip From stern to stern, the boatswain whistles, and The master calls, and trebles their confusion 64 Leon Come, say your prayers
Mar What mean you?
Leon If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it Pray, but be not tedious, 68
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn To do my work with haste
Mar Why will you kill me?
Leon To satisfy my lady
Mar Why would she have me kill'd? 72
Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature, believe me, la, 76
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly,
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger? 81
Leon My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do't Mar You will not do't for all the world, I hope 84
You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart I saw you lately, When you caught hurt in parting two that fought,
Good sooth, it show'd well in you, do so now,
Your lady seeks my life, come you between, 89
And save poor me, the weaker Leon I am sworn,
And will dispatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling
First Pirate Hold, villain! 92 [LEONINE runs away
Sec Pirate A prize! a prize!
Thrd Pirate Half-part, mates, half-part Come, let's have her aboard suddenly [Exeunt Pirates with MARINA

Re-enter LEONINE.
Leon These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes, 96
And they have seiz'd Marina Let her go, There's no hope she'll return I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea But I'll see further, Perhaps they will but please themselves upon
her, 100
Not carry her aboard If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

[*Exit*SCENE II — Mitylene A Room in a BrothelEnter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT

Pand Boul
Boul Sir?
Pand Search the market narrowly, Mitylene is full of gallants, we lost too much money thus mart by being too wenchless 5
Bawd We were never so much out of creatures We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do, and they with continual action are even as good as rotten 9 Pand Therefore, let's have fresh ones, what-e'er we pay for them If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper 13
Bawd Thou sayst true, 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as, I think, I have brought up some eleven— 16
Boul Ay, to eleven, and brought them down again But shall I search the market?
Bawd What else, man? The stuff we have a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden 21
Pand Thou sayst true, they're too unwholesome, o' conscience The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage 24 Boul Ay, she quickly pooped him, she made him roast-meat for worms But I'll go search the market [Exit
Pand Three or four thousand chequens were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over Bawd Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old? 32 Pand O! our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger, therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over 39
Bawd Come, other sorts offend as well as we Pand As well as we! ay, and better too, we offend worse Neither is our profession any trade, it's no calling But here comes Boul Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA Boul Come your ways My masters, you say she's a virgin? 43
First Pirate O! sir, we doubt it not Boul Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see if you like her, so, if not, I have lost my earnest 49
Bawd Boul, has she any qualities?
Boul She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes, there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused Bawd What's her price, Boul?
Boul I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces 56
Pand Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently Wife, take her in, instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment 60 [Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.

Bawd Boul't, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry, He that will give most, shall have her first! Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you. 67

Boul't Performance shall follow. [Exit

Mar Alack! that Leonne was so slack, so slow

He should have struck, not spoke, or that these pirates—

Not enough barbarous—had not o'erboard thrown me

For to seek my mother! 72

Bawd Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar That I am pretty

Bawd Come, the gods have done their part in you

Mar I accuse them not 76

Bawd You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live

Mar The more my fault

To scape his hands where I was like to die 80

Bawd Ay, and you shall live in pleasure

Mar No

Bawd Yes indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well, you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar Are you a woman?

Bawd What would you have me be, an I be not a woman? 89

Mar An honest woman, or not a woman

Bawd Marry, whip thee, gosling, I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you

Mar The gods defend me! 95

Bawd If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boul't's returned

Re-enter BOULT

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market? 101

Boul't I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs, I have drawn her picture with my voice 104

Bawd And I prithee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul't Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description

Bawd We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on 113

Boul't To night, to night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers in the hams? 116

Bawd Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boul't Ay, he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation, but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow 120

Bawd Well, well, as for him, he brought his disease hither. Here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun 124

Boul't Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign

Bawd [To MARINA] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me, you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly, to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers, seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit

Mar I understand you not 136

Boul't O! take her home, mistress, take her home, these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice

Bawd Thou sayst true, I' faith, so they must, for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant

Boul't Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— 144

Bawd Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit

Boul't I may so?

Bawd Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well

Boul't Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet 150

Bawd Boul't, spend thou that in the town, report what a sojourner we have, you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn, therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report 156

Boul't I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night 160

Bawd Come your ways, follow me

Mar If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep

Diana, and my purpose! 164

Bawd What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt

SCENE III — Tarsus A Room in CLEON'S House

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA

Dion Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone? 164

Cle O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon

Dion I think You'll turn a child again 4

Cle Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady! Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth 8

I' the justice of compare. O villain Leonne! Whom thou hast poison'd too,

If thou hadst drunk to him 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact, what canst thou say 12
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion That she is dead Nurses are not the fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve
She died at night, I'll say so Who can cross it?
Unless you play the pious innocent, 17
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play'

Cle O! go to Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst

Dion Be one of those that think 21
The pretty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are, 24
And of how coward a spirit

Cle To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources

Dion Be it so, then, 28
Yet none does know but you how she came dead, Nor none can know, Leontine being gone
She did distain my child, and stood between Her and her fortunes, none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face, 33
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malkin Not worth the time of day It pierc'd me thorough,

And though you call my course unnatural, 36
You not your child well loving, yet I find It greets me as an enterprise of kindness Perform'd to your sole daughter

Cle Heavens forgive it!
Dion And as for Pericles, 40
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn, her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express 44
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done

Cle Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost with thine angel's face, Seize with thine eagle's talons 48

Dion You are like one that superstitiously
Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies,
But yet I know you'll do as I advise [Exeunt

SCENE IV —Before the Monument of MARINA at Tarsus

Enter GOWER

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short,

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't,
Making—to take your imagination—
From bourn to bourn, region to region 4
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live, I do beseech you To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach
you, 8

The stages of our story Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
Attended on by many a lord and knight,

To see his daughter, all his life's delight 12

Old Helicanus goes along Behind
Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late Advanc'd in time to great and high estate 16 Well-sailing sh'ps and bounteous winds have brought

This king to Tarsus, think his pilot thought,
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone 20
Like moths and shadows see them move awhile,
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile

DUMB SHOW

Enter at one door PERICLES, with his Train, CLEON and DIONYZA at the other CLEON shows PERI-CLES the tomb of MARINA, whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sack-cloth, and in a mighty passion departs Exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe,
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, 25
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-shower'd,

Leaves Tarsus and again embarks He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs, 28
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ 32
By wicked Dionyza

[Reads inscription on MARINA's monument.

THE FAIREST, SWEET'ST, AND BEST LIES HERE, WHO WITHER'D IN HER SPRING OF YEAR
SHE WAS OF TYRUS THE KING'S DAUGHTER, ON WHOM FOUL DEATH HATH MADE THIS
SLAUGHTER. 37

MARINA WAS SHE CALL'D, AND AT HER BIRTH, THETIS, BEING PROUD, SWALLOW'D SOME PART
O' THE EARTH

THEREFORE THE EARTH, FEARING TO BE O'ER-FLOW'D, 40

HATH THETIS' BIRTH-CHILD ON THE HEAVENS BESTOW'D

WHEREFORE SHE DOES, AND SWEARS SHE'LL NEVER STINT,

MAKE RAGING BATTERY UPON SHORES OF FLINT

No visor does become black villany 44
So well as soft and tender flattery
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune, while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day 48
In her unholy service Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylene. [Exit.

SCENE V —Mitylene A Street before the Brothel

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

Sec Gent No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

First Gent But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing? 5

See Gent No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall's go hear the vestals sing?

First Gent I'll do any thing now that is virtuous, but I am out of the road of rutting for ever [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Same A Room in the Brothel

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT

Pand Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here

Bawd Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation, we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a puritan of the devil if he should cheapen a kiss of her

Boult Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disarmish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests 13

Pand Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised

Boult We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers. 21

Enter LYSIMACHUS

Lys How now! How a dozen of virginites?

Bawd Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult I am glad to see your honour in good health 25

Lys You may so, 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now! wholesome iniquity, have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon? 29

Bawd We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene

Lys If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou wouldst say 33

Bawd Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough

Lys Well, call forth, call forth. 36

Boult For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose, and she were a rose indeed if she had but—

Lys What, prythee? 40

Boult O! sir, I can be modest

Lys That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste [Exit BOULT]

Bawd Here comes that which grows to the stalk, never plucked yet, I can assure you —

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature? 47

Lys Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you, leave us.

Bawd I beseech your honour, give me leave, a word, and I'll have done presently

Lys I beseech you do 52

Bawd [To MARINA] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man

Mar I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him 56

Bawd Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to

Mar If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed, but how honourable he is in that I know not 61

Bawd Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold 64

Mar What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive

Lys Ha' you done?

Bawd My lord, she's not paced yet, you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together 71

Lys Go thy ways [Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and BOULT] Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar What trade, sir?

Lys Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend. 76

Mar I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it

Lys How long have you been of this profession? 80

Mar E'er since I can remember

Lys Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven?

Mar Earlier too, sir, if now I be one 84

Lys Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale

Mar Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place

Lys Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am? 92

Mar Who is my principal?

Lys Why, your herb-woman, she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place, come, come 100

Mar If you were born to honour, show it now,

If put upon you, make the judgment good. That thought you worthy of it

Lys How's this? how's this? Some more, be sage 104

Mar For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came, Diseases have been sold dearer than physic, 108 O! that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i' the purer air!

Lys I did not think 112
 Thou couldst have spoke so well, ne'er dream'd thou couldst
 Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it Hold, here's gold for
 thee,
 Persever in that clear way thou goest, 116
 And the gods strengthen thee!
Mar The good gods preserve you!
Lys For me, be you thoughten
 That I came with no ill intent, for to me 120
 The very doors and windows savour vilely Farewell Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy trammings hath been noble Hold, here's more gold for thee 124
 A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
 That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT

Boult I beseech your honour, one piece for
 me 129
Lys Avaunt! thou damned door-keeper
 Your house,

But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink and overwhelm you Away! [Exit Boult How's this? We must take another course with you If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel Come your ways

Mar Whither would you have me? 139 Boult I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it Come your ways We'll have no more gentlemen driven away Come your ways, I say

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd How now! what's the matter? 144 Boult Worse and worse, mistress, she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysima-chus

Bawd O! abominable 148 Boult She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods

Bawd Marry, hang her up for ever!
Boult The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball, saying his prayers too

Bawd Boult, take her away, use her at thy pleasure, crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable 157

Boult An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar Hark, hark, you gods! 160

Bawd She conjures, away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! 165
 [Exit.]

Boult Come, mistress; come your ways with
 me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult To take from you the jewel you hold so dear 169

Mar Prithce, tell me one thing first

Boult Come now, your one thing

Mar What canst thou wish thine enemy to be? 173

Boult Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress

Mar Neither of these are so bad as thou art,
 Since they do better thee in their command 177

Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change,
 Thou art the damned door-keeper to every 180

Coystril that comes inquiring for his Tib,
 To the choleric fisting of every rogue

Thy ear is liable, thy food is such As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs 184

Boult What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden
 one? 189

Mar Do any thing but this thou doest
 Empty

Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth,
 Serve by indenture to the common hangman

Any of these ways are yet better than this, 193 For what thou professes, a baboon, could he
 speak,

Would own a name too dear O! that the gods
 Would safely deliver me from this place 196

Here, here's gold for thee
 If that thy master would gain by me,

Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
 With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast,

And I will undertake all these to teach 201
 I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars Boult But can you teach all this you speak

 of? 204

Mar Prove that I cannot, take me home
 again,

And prostitute me to the basest groom
 That doth frequent your house.

Boult Well, I will see what I can do for thee, if I can place thee, I will 209

Mar But, amongst honest women.

Boult Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent, therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough Come, I'll do for thee what I can, come your ways. [Exeunt

ACT V

Enter GOWER.

Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances Into an honest house, our story says

*She sings like one immortal, and she dances
 As goddess-like to her admired lays*

Deep clerks she dumbs, and with her neeld composes

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses,
 Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry, 8
 That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
 Who pour their bounty on her and her gain
 She gives the cursed bawd Here we her place,
 And to her father turn our thoughts again, 12
 Where we left him, on the sea We there him lost, Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd Here where his daughter dwells and on this coast
 Suppose him now at anchor The city striv'd 16
 God Neptune's annual feast to keep from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
 His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense,
 And to him in his barge with fervour hies 20
 In your supposing once more put your sight
 Of heavy Pericles, think this his bark Where what is done in action, more, if might,
 Shall be discover'd, please you, sit and hark
 [Exit]

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene
 A Pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it, PERICLES within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge, to them HELI-CANUS.

Tyr Sail [To the Sailor of Mitylene] Where's the Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

O! here he is—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,
 And in it is Lysimachus, the governor, 4
 Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent Doth your lordship call? 8

Hel Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard.

I pray ye, greet them fairly

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the barge]

Enter from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords, the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr Sail Sir,

This is the man that can, in aught you would,
 Resolve you. 13

Lys Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve
 you!

Hel And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
 And die as I would do

Lys You wish me well 16
 Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
 I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel First, what is your place? 20

Lys I am the governor of this place you lie before

Hel Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;

A man who for this three months hath not spoken 24

To any one, nor taken sustenance

But to prorogue his grief

Lys Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel 'Twould be too tedious to repeat, 28
 But the main grief springs from the loss Of a beloved daughter and a wife

Lys May we not see him?

Hel You may, 32
 But bootless is your sight he will not speak

To any

Lys Yet let me obtain my wish

Hel Behold him [PERICLES discovered] This was a goodly person, 36

Till the disaster that, one mortal night,

Drove him to this

Lys Sir, King, all hail! the gods preserve you! 40

Hail, royal sir!

Hel It is in vain, he will not speak to you

First Lord Sir,

We have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,

Would win some words of him

Lys 'Tis well bethought 44
 She questionless with her sweet harmony
 And other chosen attractions, would allure,

And make a battery through his deafen'd ports
 Which now are midway stopp'd 48

She is all happy as the fair'st of all,

And with her fellow maids is now upon

The leafy shelter that abuts against

The island's side 52

[Whispers first Lord, who puts off in the barge of LYSIMACHUS]

Hel Sure, all's effectless, yet nothing we'll omit,

That bears recovery's name But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you,
 That for our gold we may provision have, 56

Wherein we are not destitute for want,

But weary for the staleness

Lys O! sir, a courtesy,
 Which if we should deny, the most just gods
 For every graff would send a caterpillar, 60

And so afflict our province Yet once more

Let me entreat to know at large the cause

Of your king's sorrow

Hel Sit, sir, I will recount it to you,
 But see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA, and a young Lady

Lys O! here is 64
 The lady that I sent for Welcome, fair one!

Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel She's a gallant lady

Lys She's such a one, that were I well assur'd Came of a gentle kind and noble stock, 68

I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty Expect even here, where is a kingly patient—

If that thy prosperous and artificial feat 72
 Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,

Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided
That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him

Lys Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous!

Lys Mark'd he your music?
Mar No, nor look'd on us

Lys See, she will speak to him

Mar Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear

Per Hum! ha!

Mar I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,

But have been gaz'd on like a comet, she speaks,

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief

Might equal yours if both were justly weigh'd

Though wayward Fortune did malign my state,

My derivation was from ancestors

Who stood equivalent with mighty kings,

But time hath rooted out my parentage,

And to the world and awkward casualties

Bound me in servitude — [Aside] I will desist,

But there is something glows upon my cheek,

And whispers in mine ear, 'Go not till he speak'

Per My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—

To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,

You would not do me violence

Per I do think so Pray you, turn your eyes upon me

You are like something that—What country-

woman?

Here of these shores?

Mar No, nor of any shores,

Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am

No other than I appear

Per I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a

one

My daughter might have been my queen's square brows,

Her stature to an inch, as wand-like straight,

As silver-voic'd, her eyes as jewel-like,

And cas'd as richly, in pace another Juno,

Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar Where I am but a stranger, from the deck

You may discern the place.

Per Where were you bred?

And how achiev'd you these endowments, which

You make more rich to owe?

Mar Should I tell my history, it would seem Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per Prithee, speak;

'ness cannot come from thee, for thou k'st

Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in I believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible, for thou lookest Like one I lov'd indeed What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say when I did push thee back,— Which was when I perceiv'd thee,—that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar So indeed I did

Per Report thy parentage I think thou said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,

And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,

If both were open'd

Mar Some such thing

I said, and said no more but what my thoughts

Did warrant me was likely

Per Tell thy story,

If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part

Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I

Have suffer'd like a girl, yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act What were thy friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee Come, sit by me

Mar My name is Marina

Per O! I am mock'd,

And thou by some incensed god sent hither

To make the world to laugh at me

Mar Patience, good sir,

Or here I'll cease

Per Nay, I'll be patient

Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,

To call thyself Marina

Mar The name

Was given me by one that had some power,

My father, and a king

Per How! a king's daughter?

And call'd Marina?

Mar You said you would believe me,

But, not to be a troubler of your peace,

I will end here

Per But are you flesh and blood?

Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?

Motion!—Well, speak on, Where were you

born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar Call'd Marina

For I was born at sea.

Per At sea! what mother?

Mar My mother was the daughter of a king,

Who died the minute I was born,

As my good nurse Lychonida hath oft

Deliver'd weeping

Per O! stop there a little

This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep

Did mock sad fools withal, this cannot be

My daughter's buried. Well, where were you bred?

I'll hear you more to the bottom of your story

And never interrupt you.

Mar You'll scorn to believe me, 'twere best

I did give o'er.

Per I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver Yet, give me leave How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar The king my father did in Tarsus leave
me, 172

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me, and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do 't,
A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me, 176
Brought me to Mitylene But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be
You think me an impostor, no, good faith,
I am the daughter to King Pericles, 180
If good King Pericles be

Per Ho, Helicanus!

Hel Calls my lord?
Per Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general, tell me, if thou canst, 185
What this mud is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel I know not, but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene, 188
Speaks nobly of her

Lys. She never would tell Her parentage, being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep

Per O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir,
Give me a gash, put me to present pain, 193
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness O! come hither, 196

Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget,
Thou that wast born at sea, burned at Tarsus,
And found at sea again O Helicanus!
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud 200

As thunder threatens us, this is Marina
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep

Mar First, sir, I pray, 204
What is your title?

Per I am Pericles of Tyre but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you said
Thou hast been god-like perfect, 208
Thou'rt heir of kingdoms, and another life
To Pericles thy father

Mar Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa? 212
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per Now, blessing on thee! rise, thou art
my child,
Give me fresh garments Mine own, Helicanus, She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been, 217

By savage Cleon, she shall tell t'ee all,
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge

She is thy very princess Who is this? 220

Hel Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per I embrace you
Give me my robes I am wild in my beholding O heavens! bless my girl But, hark! what music? 225

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt, How sure you are my daughter But, what music? 228

Hel My lord, I hear none

Per None!

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina Lys It is not good to cross him, give him
way 232

Per Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys My lord, I hear [Music

Per Most heavenly music

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber

Hangs upon mine eyes, let me rest [Sleeps

Lys A pillow for his head 237

So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends,

If this but answer to my just belief,

I'll well remember you 240

[Exeunt all but PERICLES

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision

Dia My temple stands in Ephesus, hie thee
thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice

There, when my maiden priests are met together,

Before the people all, 244

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife,

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call

And give them repetition to the life

Perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe, 248

Do it, and happy, by my silver bow!

Awake, and tell thy dream! [Disappears

Per Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,

I will obey thee! Helicanus!

Enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, and MARINA

Hel Sir? 252

Per My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon but I am

For other service first toward Ephesus

Turn our blown sails, ere soon I'll tell thee

why 256

[To LYSIMACHUS] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need?

Lys Sir, 260

With all my heart, and when you come ashore,

I have another suit

Per You shall prevail,

Were it to woo my daughter, for it seems

You have been noble towards her

Lys Sir, lend me your arm. 264

Per Come, my Marina [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus

Enter GOWER

Now our sands are almost run,

More a little, and then dumb

*This, my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me,
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylen
To greet the king. So he thriv'd,
That he is promis'd to be wiv'd
To fair Marina, but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade whereto being bound,
The interim, pray you, all confound
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd
At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king and all his company
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful doom* [Exit

SCENE III — The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess a number of Virgins on each side CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending

Enter PERICLES, with his Train, LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady

Per Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,
I here confess myself the King of Tyre,
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina, who, O goddess!
Wears yet thy silver livery She at Tarsus Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years
He sought to murder, but her better stars
Brought her to Mitylene, 'gainst whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard
us,
Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she
Made known herself my daughter Thai Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles!—

Per What means the nun? she dies! help, gentlemen!
Cer Noble sir,
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife

Per Reverend appearer, no,
I threw her o'erboard with these very arms
Cer Upon this coast, I warrant you Per 'Tis most certain Cer Look to the lady O! she's but o'erjoy'd

Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore I op'd the coffin, Found there rich jewels, recover'd her, and plac'd her
Here in Diana's temple.

Per May we see them?
Cer Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whether I invite you. Look! Thaisa is 4 Recovered.
Thai O! let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, 8 But curb it, spite of seeing O! my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, 32
Like him you are Did you not name a tempest,
A birth, and death?
12 Per The voice of dead Thaisa!
Thai That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd 36
Per Immortal Dian!
16 Thai Now I know you better
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring

[Shows a ring Per This, this no more, you gods! your present kindness 40
Makes my past miseries sport you shall do
well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen O! come, be burned
A second time within these arms

Mar My heart 44
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom
[Kneels to THAISA

Per Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,
For she was yielded there

Thai Bless'd, and mine own! 48
Hel Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai I know you not Per You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute,
Can you remember what I call'd the man? 52
I have nam'd him oft

Thai 'Twas Helicanus then Per Still confirmation!

Embrace him, dear Thaisa, this is he Now do I long to hear how you were found, 56

How possibly preserv'd, and whom to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle

Thai Lord Cerimon, my lord, this man, Through whom the gods have shown their power, that can 60

From first to last resolve you
Per Reverend sir

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you Will you deliver How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer I will, my lord 64
Beseech you, first go with me to my house

Where shall be shown you all was found with
her,

How she came placed here in the temple,
No needful thing omitted 68

Per Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision, I Will offer night-oblations to thee Thaisa,

This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis And now 72

This ornament
Makes me look dismal will I clip to form,
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd

To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify 76 Thai Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
 My father's dead
Per Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
 my queen,
 We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves 80
 Will in that kingdom spend our following days,
 Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
 Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay
 To hear the rest untold Sir, lead's the way 84

[Exeunt]

Enter GOWER.

*In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard Of monstrous lust the due and just reward
 In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen—*

Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen— 88
*Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast, Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last
 In Helicanus may you well descry
 A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty* 92
*In reverend Cerimon there well appears
 The worth that learned charity aye wears
 For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd
 name* 96
*Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
 That him and his they in his palace burn
 The gods for murder seemed so content To punish them, although not done, but meant* 100
*So on your patience evermore attending,
 New joy wait on you! Here our play hath ending* [Exit.]

POEMS

VENUS AND ADONIS

Vilva miretur vulgus mihi flavus Apollo Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY

RIGHT HONOURABLE

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden only if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours till I have honoured you with some graver labour But if the first hear of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest I leave it to your honourable survey and your honour to your heart's content, which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation

Your honour's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn, Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase,
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn, Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto
him, 5
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare, 8 Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are,
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife, Saith that the world hath ending with thy
life 12

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow,
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know 16
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty, 20
Making them red and pale with fresh variety, Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport ' 24

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good 28
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force Courageously to pluck him from his horse

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy, 32
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy,
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire 36

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Numbly she fastens,—O! how quick is love —
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove 40 Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust, [rust.
And govern'd him in strength, though not in

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips 44 Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he
frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips,
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame, she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks,
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks 52
He saith she is immodest, blames her miss,
What follows more she murders with a kiss

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste, 57
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone,
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin 60

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face,
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace, 64 Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers

Look! how a bird lies tangled in a net, 68
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies,
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank. 72

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
 For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale,
 Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
 'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale, 76 Being red, she loves him best, and being white,
 Her best is better'd with a more delight

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love,
 And by her fair immortal hand she swears, 80
 From his soft bosom never to remove,
 Till he take truce with her contending tears,
 Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet,
 And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt 84

Upon this promise did he raise his chin
 Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
 Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in,
 So offers he to give what she did crave, 88
 But when her lips were ready for his pay,
 He winks, and turns his lips another way

Never did passenger in summer's heat
 More thirst for drink than she for this good turn 92
 Her help she sees, but help she cannot get,
 She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn
 'O! pity,' gan she cry, 'faint-hearted boy
 'Tis but a kiss I beg, why art thou coy? 96

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now, Even by the stern and dreadful god of war,
 Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
 Who conquers where he comes in every jar, 100
 Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
 And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
 His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest, 104
 And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
 To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest,
 Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
 Making my arms his field, his tent my bed

'Thus he that overrul'd I oversway'd, 109
 Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd,
 Yet was he servile to my coy disdain 112
 O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
 For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,— Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,—
 The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine 117 What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy
 head
 Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies, Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in
 eyes? 120

'Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again,
 And I will wink, so shall the day seem night,
 Love keeps his revels where there are but twain,
 Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight 124
 These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe, yet mayst thou well be tasted 128
 Make use of time, let not advantage slip,
 Beauty within itself should not be wasted.
 Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime 131
 Rot and consume themselves in little time

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul or wrinkled-old,
 Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
 O'erworn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
 Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice, Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee, 137
 But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow, Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning, 140
 My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
 My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow bura-
 ing,
 My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
 Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear, 14
 Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
 Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
 Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen Love is a spirit all compact of fire, 144
 Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie, These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support
 me, 145
 Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
 From morn till night, even where I list to spor
 me
 Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected
 Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
 Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected, Steal thine own freedom, and complain o' theft 146
 Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
 And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
 Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use, 164
 Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear, Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse
 Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth
 beauty,
 Thou wast begot, to get it is thy duty. 168

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou
feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead,
And so in spite of death thou dost survive, 173
In that thy likeness still is left alive'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook
them, 176
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them,
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side 180

And now Adonis with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky, 184 Souring his cheeks, cries, 'Fie! no more of
love
The sun doth burn my face, I must remove'

'Ay me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind?
What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone, 188
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind Shall cool the heat of this descending sun
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs, If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears 192

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but
warm,
And lo! I lie between that sun and thee
The heat I have from thence doth little harm, Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me,
And were I not immortal, life were done 197
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain re-lenteth. 200
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind. 204

'What am I that thou shouldst condemn me
thus?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair, but speak fair words, or else be mute 208
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead, 212
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
Formen will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue, 217
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause,
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong,
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause And now she weeps, and now she fain would
speak, 221
And now her sobs do her intendments break

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his
hand,
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground, 224
Sometimes her arms unfold him like a band
She would, he will not in her arms be bound,
And when from thence he struggles to be
gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one 228

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee
here
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer,
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry, 233
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain, Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough, 237
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain
Then be my deer, since I am such a park, No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark. 240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple, 244
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie, Why, there Love liv'd and there he could not die

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits, Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking? 250
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing, 254
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing
'Pity,' she cries, 'some favour, some remorse!' 257
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo! from forth a copse that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud, 260
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds, 265
 And now his woven girths he breaks asunder,
 The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds, Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder, 268
 The iron bit he crushes 'tween his teeth, Controlling what he was controlled with

His ears up-prick'd, his braided hanging mane 271
 Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end
 His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
 As from a furnace, vapours doth he send His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
 Shows his hot courage and his high desire

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps, 277
 With gentle majesty and modest pride, Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps, As who should say, 'Lo! thus my strength is tried, 280
 And this I do to captivate the eye
 Of the fair breeder that is standing by'

What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,
 His flattering 'Holla,' or his 'Stand, I say?'" 284
 What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
 For rich caparisons or trapping gay?
 He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
 Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
 In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
 As if the dead the living should exceed, 292
 So did this horse excel a common one,
 In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and
 long,
 Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril
 wide, 296
 High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
 Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide
 Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
 Save a proud rider on so proud a back. 300

Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares, Anon he starts at stirring of a feather,
 To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
 And wher he run or fly they know not whether,
 For through his mane and tail the high wind sings, 305
 Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her,
 She answers him as if she knew his mind; 308
 Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
 She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind,
 Spurns at his love and scorns the heat he feels,
 Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent, 313
 He vails his tail that, like a falling plume
 Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent
 He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume
 His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd, 317
 Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd

His testy master goeth about to take him,
 When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear, 320
 Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
 With her the horse, and left Adonis there As they were mad, unto the wood they hie
 them,
 Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly
 them 324

All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits,
 Banning his boisterous and unruly beast
 And now the happy season once more fits,
 That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest,
 For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
 When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd, Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage
 So of concealed sorrow may be said, 333
 Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage,
 But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
 The client breaks, as desperate in his suit 336

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,—
 Even as a dying coal revives with wind,—
 And with his bonnet hides his angry brow,
 Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
 Taking no notice that she is so nigh, 341
 For all askance he holds her in his eye

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
 How she came stealing to the wayward boy,
 To note the fighting conflict of her hue, 345
 How white and red each other did destroy
 But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
 It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky

Now was she just before him as he sat, 349
 And like a lowly lover down she kneels,
 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
 Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels 352
 His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
 As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O! what a war of looks was then between them,
 Her eyes petitioners to his eyes sung, 356
 His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them, Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the woo-
 ing
 And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
 With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain. 360

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
 A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow,
 Or ivory in an alabaster band,
 So white a friend engirts so white a foe 364
 This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
 Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began
 'O fairest mover on this mortal round, 368
 Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound,
 For one sweet look thy help I would assure
 thee,
 Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee' 372

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'
 'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it,
 O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
 And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it Then love's deep groans I never shall regard, Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go,
 My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, 380
 And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so I pray you hence, and leave me here alone
 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare' 384

Thus she replies 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
 Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire Affection is a coal that must be cool'd,
 Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire 388
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath
 none,
 Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
 Servilely master'd with a leathern rein' 392
 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
 He held such petty bondage in disdain, Throwing the base thong from his bending crest, Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast. 396

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
 His other agents aim at like delight? 400
 Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
 And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee, 404
 To take advantage on presented joy, Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach
 thee
 O learn to love, the lesson is but plain,
 And once made perfect, never lost again' 408

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know
 it,
 Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it,
 'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it,
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it, 412
 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?
 Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
 If springing things be any jot diminish'd, 417
 They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong 420

'You hurt my hand with wringing, let us part,
 And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat
 Remove your siege from my unyielding heart,
 To love's alarms it will not ope the gate 424 Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery,
 For where a heart is hard, they make no battery'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue?'
 O! would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing, Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong, 429
 I had my load before, now press'd with bearing Melodious discord, heavenly tune, harsh-sounding,
 Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding 432

'Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
 That inward beauty and invisible,
 Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
 Each part in me that were but sensible 436 Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor
 see,
 Yet should I be in love by touching thee

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
 And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
 And nothing but the very smell were left me,
 Yet would my love to thee be still as much,
 For from the still'tory of thy face excelling Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling 444

'But O! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
 Being nurse and feeder of the other four,
 Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
 And bid Suspicion double-lock the door, 448
 Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
 Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?'

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
 Which to his speech did honey passage yield,
 Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd 453
 Wrack to the seaman, tempest to the field,
 Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
 Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh' 457
 Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
 Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
 Or as the berry breaks before it stameth, 460
 Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
 His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
 For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth,
 A smile recures the wounding of a frown, 465
 But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
 The silly boy, believing she is dead, Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red, 468

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent,
 For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
 Which cunning love did wittily prevent Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her! 472
 For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
 Till his breath breatheth life in her again

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
 He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard, 476
 He chafes her lips, a thousand ways he seeks To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd
 He kisses her, and she, by her good will,
 Will never rise, so he will kiss her still 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day
 Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
 Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
 He cheers the morn and all the world relieveth 484

And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
 So is her face illumin'd with her eye,

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
 As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine
 Were never four such lamps together mix'd, 489
 Had not his clouded with his brows' repine, But hers, which through the crystal tears gave
 light,
 Shone like the moon in water seen by night

'O! where am I?' quoth she, in earth or
 heaven, 493
 Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
 What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
 Do I delight to die, or life desire? 496
 But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy,
 But now I died, and death was lively joy

'O! thou didst kill me, kill me once again Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine, 500
 Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
 That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine, And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
 queen,
 But for thy piteous lips no more had seen. 504

'Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
 O! never let their crimson liveries wear,
 And as they last, their verdure still endure,
 To drive infection from the dangerous year 508
 That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
 May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted, What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
 To sell myself I can be well contented, 513
 So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing,

Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips 516

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me.
 And pay them at thy leisure, one by one
 What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
 Are they not quickly told and quickly gone? 520 Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
 Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?'

Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me, Measure my strangeness with my unripe
 years 524
 Before I know myself, seek not to know me,
 No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears
 The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
 Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste 528

'Look! the world's comforter, with weary gait,
 His day's hot task hath ended in the west,
 The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 'tis very late,
 The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
 And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's
 light 533
 Do summon us to part and bid good night

'Now let me say good night, and so say you,
 If you will say so, you shall have a kiss' 536
 'Good night,' quoth she, and ere he says adieu,
 The honey fee of parting tender'd is Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace, Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face

Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
 The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth, Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
 Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth, 543
 Their lips together glu'd, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
 And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth, 548
 Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey, Paying what ransom the insulter willet, whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
 That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil, 553
 With blindfold fury she begins to forage,
 Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
 And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage,
 Planting oblivion, beating reason back, 557 Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
 Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling, 560
 Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
 Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
 He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
 While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with temper-
ing, 565
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love whose leave exceeds commission 568
Affection faunts not like a pale-fac'd coward, But then woos best when most his choice is froward

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over, 571
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover, What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast, Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last 576

For pity now she can no more detain him,
The poor fool prays her that he may depart
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him, 579
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast

'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch. 584
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?'
He tells her, no, to-morrow he intends To hunt the boar with certain of his friends

'The boar!' quoth she, whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheeks, she trembles at his tale, 591
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter
All is imaginary she doth prove, 597
He will not manage her, although he mount her,
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy 600

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw The warm effects which she in him finds missing, 605
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing

But all in vain, good queen, it will not be
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd, 609
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee, She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
'Fie, fie!' he says, 'you crush me, let me go,
You have no reason to withhold me so' 612

'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the boar
O! he advis'd, thou know'st not what it is With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore, Whose tusches never sheath'd he whetted
still, 61
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes, 62
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret,
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes,
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way
And whom he strikes his crooked tusches slay 62

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd, Are better proof than thy spear's point car-enter,
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd
Being ireful, on the lion he will venture 62
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes As fearful of him part, through whom he rushes

'Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes, 63
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne Whose full perfection all the world amazes,
But having thee at vantage, wondrous dread Would root these beauties as he roots the mead. 63

'O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still,
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends Come not within his danger by thy will,
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends 64
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white? 64
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? And fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast. 64

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy Doth call himself Affection's sentinel,
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!" 65
Distemp'ring gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy, 65
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye 661
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore, 664 Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang
the head

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination? 668
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow, 671
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me, Uncouple at the tumorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtilty,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare 676
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs, And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare, Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles How he outruns the winds, and with what care 681
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles
The many musits through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes 684

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their
smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell, 688
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer, Danger deviseth shifts, wit waits on fear

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt, 692
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out, Then do they spend their mouths. Echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies. 696

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still Anon their loud alarms he doth hear; 700
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell

'Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way, 704
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch, Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur
stay
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev'd by any 708

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more.
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise

To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize, 712
Applying this to that, and so to so,
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where,' quoth
he,
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends 716
The night is spent,' 'Why, what of that?' quoth
she

'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends,
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.'

'But if thou fall, O! then imagine this, 721
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss Rich preys make true men thieves, so do thy lips 724
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn, Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine, 728
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason, For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's despite, 731
To shame the sun by day and her by night

'And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature, 736
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery,

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood, 740
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attaint Disorder breeds by heating of the blood, Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair

'And not the least of all these maladies 745
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and
done, 749
As mountain-snow melts with the mid-day
sun

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns, 752
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave, 757 Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity? 760
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain, Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Of theirs whose desperate hands themselves do
slay, 765

Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life
Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets

'Nay then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again 769
Into your idle over-handled theme,
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream,
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse, 773
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues, And every tongue more moving than your own, 776
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown,
For know, my heart stands armed in mine
ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there, 780

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run Into the quiet closure of my breast,
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest 784
No, lady, no, my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove'
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger,
I hate not love, but your device in love, 789
That lends embracements unto every stranger
You do it for increase O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse 792

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled, Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name,
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with b'ame, 796 Which the hot tyrant stains and soon be-reaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun, 800
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain, Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies, Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies 804

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say,
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away,
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen 808
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast, 812
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace,

Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye, 816

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend
So did the merciless and pitchy night 821
Fold in the object that did feed her sight

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood, 824
Or 'stomish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood,
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way 828

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans, That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans,
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled 832
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times, 'Woe,
woe!'
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so

She marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty, 836
How love makes young men thrall and old men dote,
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so 840

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight In such like circumstance, with such like sport 844
Their copious stores, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites, 848
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says, 'Tis so' they answer all, 'Tis so',
And would say after her, if she said 'No' 852

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty, 856
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold

Venus salutes him with this fair good morrow
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, 860
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright, There lives a son that suck'd an earthly
mother, 864
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love,
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn
Anon she hears them chant it lustily, 869
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a mulch doe, whoseswelling dugs do ache, Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay, 877
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder, 880
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place, 885
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him
first 888

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart,
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling
part, 892
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,
Till, cheering up her senses sore dismay'd, 896
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid, Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no
more
And with that word she spied the hunted
boar, 900

Whose frothy mouth 'bepainted all with red, Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither 904
Thus way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murder

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways,
She treads the path that she untreads again,
Her more than haste is mated with delays, 909
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain, Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all effect-
ing. 912

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
'And asks the weary cattiff for his master,'

And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster, 916
And here she meets another sadly scowling, To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise, Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim, 920
Against the welkin volleys out his voice,
Another and another answer him, Clapping their proud tails to the ground
below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go 924

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd
At apparitions, signs, and prodiges,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd, Infusing them with dreadful prophecies, 928
So she at these sad sighs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean, Hateful divorce of love,'—thus chides she
Death,— 932
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet? 936

'If he be dead, O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it,
O yes! it may, thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit 940
Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart Mistakes that arm and cleaves an infant's
heart

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his power 944
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke, They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him
dead. 948

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping 951
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is run'd with thy rigour'

Here overcome, as one full of despair, 955
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd, But through the flood-gates breaks the silver
rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O' how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow,
 Her eyes seen in the tears tears in her eye, Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
 Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry,
 But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain, Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet
 again

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
 As striving who should best become her grief,
 All entertain'd, each passion labours so, 969
 That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
 But none is best, then join they all together,
 Like many clouds consulting for foul weather

By this, far off she hears some huntsman holla,
 A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well
 The dure imaginat on she did follow
 This sound of hope doth labour to expel, 976
 For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
 And flatters her it is Adonis' voice

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
 Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass,
 Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside, 981 Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
 To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
 Who is but drunken when she seemeth
 drown'd 984

O hard-believing love! how strange it seems
 Not to believe, and yet too credulous,
 Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes,
 Despair and hope make thee ridiculous 988
 The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
 In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought,
 Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame, 992
 It was not she that call'd him all to naught,
 Now she adds honours to his hateful name She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings,
 Imperious supreme of all mortal things 996

'No, no,' quoth she 'sweet Death, I did but jest, Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear
 Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
 Which knows no pity, but is still severe, 1000 Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess—
 I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease

'Tis not my fault the boar provok'd my tongue,
 Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander, 1004
 'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong,
 I did but act, he's author of my slander Grief hath two tongues and never woman
 yet,
 Could rule them both without ten women's wit' 1008

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
 Her rash suspect she doth extenuate,
 And that his beauty may the better thrive,
 With Death she humbly doth insinuate, 1012 Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories
 His victories, his triumphs, and his glories

'O Jove!' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I,
 To be of such a weak and silly mind 1016
 To wail his death who lives and must not die
 Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind,
 For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
 And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear 1021
 As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves,
 Trifles, unwitnessed with eve or ear,
 Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves'
 Even at this word she hears a merry horn, Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn

As falcon to the lure, away she flies,
 The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light,
 And in her haste unfortunately spies 1029
 The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight, Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
 Like stars asham'd of day, themselves with drew 1032

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit Shrinks backwards in his shelly cave with pain
 And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit Long after fearing to creep forth again, 1031
 So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled Into the deep dark cabins of her head

Where they resign their office and their light
 To the disposing of her troubled brain, 1041
 Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
 And never wound the heart with looks again
 Who, like a king perplex'd in his throne,
 By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes, 1044
 As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground, Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes
 Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound
 This mutiny each part doth so surprise 1046
 That from their dark beds once more leap hei-
 eyes,

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd 1052
 In his soft flank, whose wonted lily white With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd
 No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
 But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed 1056

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth,
 Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
 Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth,
 She thinks he could not die, he is not dead 1060
 Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
 Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly, That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem
 three, 1064
 And then she reprehends her mangling eye, That makes more gashes where no breach should
 be

His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled,
 For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled 1068

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
 And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
 My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
 Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead.
 Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire! 1073
 So shall I die by drops of hot desire

'Alas! poor world, what treasure hast thou lost?
 What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
 Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou
 boast 1077

Of things long since, or anything ensuing?
 The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim,
 But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died with him

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
 Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you Having no fair to lose, you need not fear,
 The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss
 you 1084
 But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
 Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
 Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep,
 The wind would blow it off, and, being gone, 1089
 Play with his locks then would Adonis weep,
 And straight, in pity of his tender years,
 They both would strive who first should dry his tears 1092

'To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear
 him,

To recreate himself when he hath sung,
 The tiger would be tame and gently hear him,
 If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey, 1097
 And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
 The fishes spread on it their golden gills, 1100
 When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
 That some would sing, some other in their bills Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries
 He fed them with his sight, they him with berries 1104

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar, Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
 Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore,
 Witness the entertainment that he gave 1108
 If he did see his face, why then I know
 He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd himso

'Tis true, 'tis true, thus was Adonis slam
 He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear, 1112
 Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
 But by a kiss thought to persuade him there,
 And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine Sheath'd unaware the tusk in his soft groin

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
 With kissing him I should have kill'd him first,
 But he is dead, and never did he bless
 My youth with his, the more am I accurst' 1120
 With this she falleth in the place she stood,
 And stains her face with his congealed blood

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale,
 She takes him by the hand, and that is cold,
 She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, 1125
 As if they heard the woeful words she told,
 She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
 Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lie, 1128

Two glasses where herself herself beheld
 A thousand times, and now no more reflect,
 Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
 And every beauty robb'd of his effect 1132
 'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite, That, you being dead, the day should yet be
 light

'Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy, Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend 1136
 It shall be waited on with jealousy,
 Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end,
 Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
 That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud, 1141 Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while,
 The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
 With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile
 The strongest body shall it make most weak, Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to
 speak 1146

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
 Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures,
 The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet, 1149 Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures
 It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
 Make the young old, the old become a child,

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear, 1153
 It shall not fear where it should most mistrust,
 It shall be merciful, and too severe,
 And most deceiving when it seems most just, Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward, 1157
 Put fear to valour, courage to the coward

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
 And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire, 1160
 Subject and servile to all discontents,
 As dry combustious matter is to fire
 Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
 They that love best their love shall not enjoy;

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd 1165
 Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
 And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd, A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white, 1168
 Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
 Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to
 smell,
 Comparing it to her Adonis' breath, 1172
 And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
 Since he himself is reft from her by death
 She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears 1176

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise,
 Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire
 For every little grief to wet his eyes
 To grow unto himself was his desire, 1180
 And so 'tis thine, but know, it is as good
 To wither in my breast as in his blood

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast, Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right 1185
 Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest, My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
 night
 There shall not be one minute in an hour Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's
 flower' 1188

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
 And yokes her silver doves, by whose swift aid Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies
 In her light chariot quickly is convey'd, 1192 Holding their course to Paphos, where their
 queen
 Means to immure herself and not be seen

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON AND BARON OF TICHFIELD

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours what I have to do is yours being part in all I have devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater, meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with happiness

Your lordship s in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE ARGUMENT

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS—for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus,—after he had caused his own father in law, Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered and contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages had possessed himself of the kingdom went accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched only Collatinus finds his wife—though it were late in the night—spinning amongst her maids the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucretia's beauty yet smothering his passions for the present departed with the rest back to the camp, from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself and was according to his estate royally entertained and lodged by Lucretia at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealth into her chamber violently ravished her and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucretia in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers one to Rome for her father and another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus the other with Publius Valerius and finding Lucretia attired in mourning habit demanded the cause of her sorrow. She first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and the whole manner of his dealing and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins, and bearing the dead body to Rome Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king wherewith the people were so moved that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire 4
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucretia the chaste

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set 8
This bateless edge on his keen appetite, When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight, 12 Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent, Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state; 16
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate,
Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame 21

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done 24
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun,

An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade 29
The eyes of men without an orator,
What needeth then apology be made
To set forth that which is so singular? 32
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucretia's sovereignty 36
Suggested this proud issue of a king,
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting 40
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors want

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-tuneless speed, if none of those 44
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state, Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows
O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold, Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old. 49

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd 52
Which of them both should underproph her fame When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for
shame,
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that o'er with silver
white 56

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field,
Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild 60 Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield,
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen, 64
Argu'd by beauty's red and virtue's white
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right Yet their ambition makes them still to fight, 68
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field, 72
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses, Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go, 76
Rather than triumph in so false a foe

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow
tongue—
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so—
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show 81 Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise, 84
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes

This earthly saint, adored by this devil, Little suspecteth the false worshipper,
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear 88
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd

For that he colour'd with his high estate, 92
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty,
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy, 96
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store, That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for
more

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes, Could pick no meaning from their parling
looks, 100
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks,
Nor could she moralize her wanton sight, 104
More than his eyes were open'd to the light

He stones to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy,
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry 109
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory
Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,
And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success 112

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in this fair welkin once appear, 116
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear, Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the Day

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed, 120
Intending weariness with heavy spright,
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight, 124
And every one to rest themselves betake, Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining, 128
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving, Though weak-built hopes persuade him to ab-staining
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining,
And when great treasure is the meed pro-
pos'd, 132
Though death be adjunct, there's no death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
For what they have not, that which they possess
They scatter and unloose it from their bond, 136
And so, by hoping more, they have but less,
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain. 140

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age,
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage, 144
As life for honour in fell battles' rage, Honour for wealth, and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost,

So that in venturing ill we leave to be 148
 The things we are for that which we expect,
 And this ambitious foul infirmity,
 In having much, torments us with defect
 Of that we have so then we do neglect 152
 The thing we have and, all for want of wit,
 Make something nothing by augmenting it

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
 Pawning his honour to obtain his lust, 156
 And for himself himself he must forsake
 Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
 When shall he think to find a stranger just,
 When he himself himself confounds, betrays
 To slanderous tongues and wretched hateful days? 161

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
 When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes,
 No comfortable star did lend his light, 164
 No noise but owls' and wolves' death boding cries,
 Now serves the season that they may surprise
 The silly lambs, pure thoughts are dead and still,
 While lust and murder wake to stain and kill

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
 Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm,
 Is madly toss'd between desire and dread,
 Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm,
 But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm, 173
 Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
 Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth, 176
 That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly, Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
 Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye,
 And to the flame thus speaks advisedly 180
 'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
 So Lucrece must I force to my desire'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
 The dangers of his loathsome enterprise, 184
 And in his inward mind he doth debate
 What following sorrow may on this arise
 Then looking scornfully, he doth despise 187
 His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
 And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not To darken her whose light excelleth thine, 191
 And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
 With your uncleanness that which is divine, Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine
 Let fair humanity abhor the deed That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed 196

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
 O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
 O impious act, including all foul harms!
 A martial man to be soft fancy's slave! 200 True valour still a true respect should have,
 Then my digression is so vile, so base,
 That it will live engraven in my face,

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive, 204
 And be an eye-sore in my golden coat,
 Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
 To cipher me how fondly I did dote,
 That my posterity sham'd with the note, 208
 Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
 To wish that I their father had not been

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
 A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy 212
 Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
 Or sells eternity to get a toy?
 For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
 Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
 Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down? 217

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
 Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
 Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent? 220
 This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
 This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
 This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
 Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame'

'O! what excuse can my invention make, 225
 When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
 Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
 Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart
 bleed? 228
 The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed,
 And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
 But coward-like with trembling terror die

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire, 232
 Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
 Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
 Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
 As in revenge or quittal of such strife 236
 But as he is my kinsman my dear friend,
 The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is, ay, if the fact be known Hateful it is, there is no hate in loving 240
 I'll beg her love, but she is not her own
 The worst is but demal and reproving
 My will is strong, past reason's weak removing Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
 Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe' 245

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
 'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
 And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
 Urging the worse sense for vantage still, 249
 Which in a moment doth confound and kill
 All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
 That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand, 253
 And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
 Fearing some hard news from the war-like band
 Where her beloved Collatinus lies 256
 O! how her fear did make her colour rise
 First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
 Then white as lawn, the roses took away

'And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd, Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear' 261
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd, Until her husband's welfare she did hear,
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer, 264
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth, 268
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses, Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth,
And when his gaudy banner is display'd, 272
The coward fights and will not be dismay'd

'Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye
Sad pause and deep regard beseech the sage, 277
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize, Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?' 280

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust, 284
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion

Within his thought her heavenly image sits, 288
And in the self-same seat sits Collatine
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits,
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline, 292
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted, takes the worse part,

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours, 297
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow, Paying more slavish tribute than they owe
By reprobate desire thus madly led, 300
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforc'd, retire his ward,
But as they open they all rate his ill, 304
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard
The threshold grates the door to have him heard, Night-wandering weasels shriek to see him
there,
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear

As each unwilling portal yields him way, 309
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face, 312
Extinguishing his conduct in this case,
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch

And being lighted, by the light he spies 316
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gniping it, the needl his finger pricks,
As who should say, 'This glove to wanton tricks 320
Is not murr'd, return again in haste, Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste'

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay
him,
He in the worst sense construes their denial 324
The door, the wind, the glove, that did delay
him,
He takes for accidental things of trial,
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt 329

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime, 332
And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing
Pain pays the income of each precious thing, Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands,
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands' 336

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more, Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought 340
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer, 344
Having solicited the eternal power That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the hour, Even there he starts quoth he, I must de-
flower, 348
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they then assist me in the act?

'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution 352 Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried,
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution,
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night 356
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight'

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch 360
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside, But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting 364

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head 368
By their high treason is his heart misled,
Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon,
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun, 372
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight, Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light
Whether it is that she reflects so bright, 376
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed

O! had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill, 380
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight 384
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss,
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss, 389 Between whose hills her head entombed is Where, like a virtuous monument she lies,
To be admur'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes 392

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet, whose perfect white Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night 396
Her eyes, like margolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath, 400
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify, 404
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered, 408
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred
Who, like a foul usurper, went about 412
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desir'd?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted, 416
And in his will his wilful eye he tur'd
With more than admiration he admur'd
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey, 421
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified, 424
Slack'd, not suppress'd, for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins

And they, like stragglung slaves for pillage fighting, 428
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting, Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting 432
Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand, 436
His hand, as proud of such a dignity, Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land,
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale, 440
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset, 444
And fright her with confusion of their cries
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd 448

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking,
What terror 'tis! but she, in worse taking, 453
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies, 457
She dares not look, yet, winking, there appears Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries,
Who angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall! 464
May feel her heart,—poor citizen,—distress'd Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall, Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity, 468
To make the breach and enter this sweet city

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe,
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chun, 472

The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show,
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill. 476

Thus he replies 'The colour in thy face,—
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,— Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale, 480
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide 484
Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight, Which I to conquer sought with all my
might, 488
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
I think the honey guarded with a sting, 493
All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends
But will is deaf and hears no heedful friends,
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty, 496
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty

'I have debated, even in my soul, What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed,
But nothing can affection's course control, 500
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity,
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy' 504

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade, Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he dies 508
So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells

'Lucretia,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy
thee 512
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay, 516
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him, Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye, 520
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,

Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rimes, 524
And sung by children in succeeding times

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted,
A little harm done to a great good end, 528
For lawful policy remains enacted
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound, being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified 532

'Then for thy husband and thy children's sake, Tender my suit bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot, 536
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot
For marks deserv'd in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye 540
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause,
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's sharp claws, Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws, 544
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get, 549
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing,
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays, 552
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally, While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly, 556
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaming Tears harden lust though marble wear with raining 560

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face,
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace 564
She puts the period often from his place,
And midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove, 568
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire, 573
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality With such black payment as thou hast pretended, 576
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee,
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended,
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended,
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe 581

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare
me,
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave
me,
Myself a weakling, do not, then, ensnare me, 584
Thou look'st not like decent, do not deceive me My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee,
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans 588

'All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wrack-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion,
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert 592
O! if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate,
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee, 596
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me, Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name
Thou art not what thou seem'st, and if the same, 600
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king,
For kings like gods should govern every thing

'How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring! 604
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a king?
O! be remembered no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away, 608
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay

'This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear,
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove 613
If but for fear of this, thy will remove,
For princes are the glass, the school, the book, Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do
look. 616

'And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
Thy privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-hymn'd
land,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd,

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it
thee, 624
From a pure heart command thy rebel will Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil, 628 When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may
say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the
way?

'Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another 632
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear,
Their own transgressions partially they smother This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother
O! how are they wrapp'd in with infamies 636 That from their own misdeeds askance their
eyes

'To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash reler.
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal, 640
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dum mist from thy dotting eyne,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine

'Have done,' quoth he, 'my uncontrolled tide Turns not, but swells the higher by this let Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret 648
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh fall-have
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign
king, 652
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood
If all these petty ills shall change thy good, 656
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hears'd,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave,
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified, 660
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave, Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride
The lesser thing should not the greater hide,
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot, 664
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'—
'No more,' quoth he, 'by heaven, I will not hear
thee
Yield to my love, if not, enforced hate, 668
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear
thee,
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.' 672

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb
cries, 677
Till with her own white fleece her voice con-troll'd
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold

For with the nightly linen that she wears 680
He pens her piteous clamours in her head, Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed
O! that prone lust should stain so pure a bed,
The spots whereof could weeping purify, 685
Her tears should drop on them perpetually

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again,
This forced league doth force a further strife,
This momentary joy breeds months of pain,
This hot desire converts to cold disdain
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store, 692
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before

Look! as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk 696
The prey wherein by nature they delight,
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night
His taste delicious, in digestion souring, Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring

O! deeper sin than bottomless conceit 701
Can comprehend in still imagination,
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination. 704
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire

And then with lank and lean discolour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace, 709
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case
The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace, 712
For there it revels, and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who thus accomplishment so hotly chas'd, 716
For now against himself he sounds his doom,
That through the length of times he stands dis-
grac'd,
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defac'd,
To whose weak runs muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares. 721

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall 725
To living death, and pain perpetual

Which in her prescience she controlled still,
But her foresight could not forestall their will 728

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain,
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain, 732
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain
She bears the load of lust he left behind
And he the burden of a guilty mind

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence, 736
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there,
He scowls and hates himself for his offence,
She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear,
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear, 740
She stays, exclaiming on the dreadful night,
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless castaway, 744
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day,
'For day,' quoth she, 'night's' 'scapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how To cloak offences with a cunning brow 749

'They think not but that every eye can see The same disgrace which they themselves behold,
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold, 753
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest, 757
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence where it may find Some purer chest to close so pure a mind 761 Frenzied with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night

'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell! 764
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sun-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporious, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my curseless crime, 772
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time,
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed, 776 Knut poisonous clouds about his golden
head

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air, Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick

The life of purity, the supreme fair, 780
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick,
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light
May set at noon and make perpetual night

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child, 785

The silver-shining queen he would disdain,
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd, Through Night's black bosom should not peep
again 788

So should I have co-partners in my pain,
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads with
mine, 793

To mask their brows and hide their infamy,
But I alone alone must sit and pine, Seasoning the earth with showers of silver
brine, 796
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans

'O Night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face 800
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place, That all the faults which in thy reign are made 804
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay, 808
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow Yea, the illiterate, that know not how To 'cipher what is writ in learned books, Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks. 812

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name,
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame,
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame, 817
Will tie the hearers to attend each line, How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted 821
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted 824
That is as clear from this attain of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar! 828

Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war
Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them
knows 833

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee, 836
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept 840

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack,
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him,
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him 844
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue O! unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil.

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests? 852
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute

'The aged man that coffers-up his gold Is plagu'd with cramps and gout and painful fits, 856
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits,
Having no other pleasure of his gain 860
But torment that it cannot cure his pain

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young,
Who in their pride do presently abuse it 864
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours
Even in the moment that we call them ours

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring, 869 Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
flowers,
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing,
What virtue breeds iniquity devours, 872
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality,

'O Opportunity! thy guilt is great, 876
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason, Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get,
Whoever plots the sun, thou point'st the season,
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason, 880
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy
him,
Sits Sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath, Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd, 884
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth,
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief! 889

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name, 892
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste Thy violent vanities can never last How comes it, then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's
friend, 897
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd? 900
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for
thee,
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps, 904
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds,
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps,
Advice is sporting while infection breeds Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds 908 Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid 912
They buy thy help, but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He grates comes, and thou art well appaid
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me 916
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, 920
Guilty of incest, that abomination,
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom 924

'Mis shapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight, Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare, 928
Thou nursest all, and murderest all that are,
O! hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time,
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity, 932
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?

Time's office is to fine the hate of foes, 936
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things, 941
To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To rinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers, 945

'To fill with worm holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents, 948
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's
wheel, 952

'To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild, 956
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguill'd, To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor returning minute in an age Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends 964 O! this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack.

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight 968
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances, Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans,
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances 976
To make him moan, but pity not his moans, Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones,
And let mild women to him lose their mild-
ness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair, 981
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave, 984
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort, 989
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport, 992
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wail the abusing of his time

'O Time! thou tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill, 996
At his own shadow let the thief run mad, Himself himself seek every hour to kill Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill, 999
For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous deathsmen to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing 1004
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate,
For greatest scandal wants on greatest state
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire, 1009
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away,
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay 1012 Poor grooms are sightless night kings glorious day
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye

'Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools, 1016 Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools,
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters,
To trembling clients be you mediators 1020
For me, I force not argument a straw, Since that my case is past the help of law

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night,
In vain I cavil with my infamy, 1025
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite,
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good, 1028
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame,
For if I die, my honour lives in thee, 1032
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame, Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.' 1036

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death,
But this no slaughter-house no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath,
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Aetna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life 1045
I fear'd by Tarquim's falchion to be slain, Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife 1048
So am I now O no! that cannot be,
Of that true type hath Tarquim rifed me

'O! that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die 1052
To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery,
A dying life to living infamy
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay? 1057

'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated troth,
I will not wrong thy true affection so, 1060
To flatter thee with an infringed oath,
This bastard graff shall never come to growth,
He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art doting father of his fruit. 1064

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought, Nor laugh with his companions at thy state,
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate 1068
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence

'I will not poison thee with my attainst, 1072
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses,
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses, My tongue shall utter all mine eyes, like sluces, 1076
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale, Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure
tale'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended 1079
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell, when, lo! the blushing morrow Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow'
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd
be 1085

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weep-
ing,
To whom she sobbing speaks, 'O eye of eyes!
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping, 1089
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing
light,
For day's hath nought to do what's done by
night. 1092

- Thus cavils she with everything she sees
True grief is fond and testy as a child, Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild, Continuance tames the one, the other wild, 1097
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill
- So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care, 1100
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare,
No object but her passion's strength renews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues 1104 Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words,
Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords
- The little birds that tune their morning's joy Make her moans mad with their sweet melody
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy,
Sad souls are slain in merry company,
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society 1112
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.
- 'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore,
He ten times pines that pines beholding food,
To see the salve doth make the wound ache
more, 1116
Great grief grieves most at that would do it
good,
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'er-flows,
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows
- 'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb 1121
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests,
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests 1125
Relish your numble notes to pleasing ears, Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.
- 'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair 1129
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear, 1132
For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still, While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.
- 'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart 1137
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument, Shall tune our heart-strings to true languish-
ment. 1141
- 'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
- That knows nor parching heat nor freezing
cold, 1145
We will find out, and there we will unfold To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds ' 1148
- As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze, Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily, 1152
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better, When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor 1155
- 'To kill myself' quoth she, 'alack! what were it
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion
That mother tries a merciless conclusion, 1160 Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none
- 'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine' 1164
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay, 1168
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away
- 'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted, Grossly engirt with daring infamy 1173
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole Through which I may convey this troubled soul 1176
- 'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death,
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine, Revenge on him that made me stop my
breath 1180
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tamed, shall for him be spent,
And as his due went in my testament
- 'Mine honour I'll bequeath unto the knife 1184
That wounds my body so dishonoured
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life,
The one will live, the other being dead
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred, 1188
For in my death I murder shameful scorn
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born
- 'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee? 1192
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be,
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me.
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so

'Thus brief abridgment of my will I make My soul and body to the skies and ground,
My resolution, husband, do thou take, 1200 Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound,

My shame be his that did my fame confound,
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will, 1205
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill,
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "So be
it," 1209
Yield to my hand, my hand shall conquer
thee
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors
be'

This plot of death when sadly she had laid, 1212
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright
eyes,
With untun'd tongue she hoarsely call'd her
maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies,
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies 1216
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow

Her mistress she doth give demure good-
morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, 1221
For why her face wore sorrow's livery,
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe 1225

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy 1229
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy
night 1232

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling,
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling,
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing, 1237 Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will,
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds

Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill
Then call them not the authors of their ill, 1244
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign
plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep, 1248
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain Cave keeping evils that obscurely sleep
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep Though men can cover crimes with bold stern
looks, 1252
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower, But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd
No^t that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame O! let it not be hild 1257
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd With men's abuses those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their
shame 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view, Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong
Such danger to resistance did belong, 1265
That dying fear through all her body spread,
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak To the poor counterfeit of her complaining
'My girl,' quoth she, on what occasion break Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood 1273
If tears could help, mine own would do me
good

'But tell me, girl, when went?'—and there she stay'd Till after a deep groan—"Tarquin from
hence?"— 1276
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense, Myself was stirring ere the break of day, 1280
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness'
'O! peace,' quoth Lucrece, 'if it should be told, 1284
The petition cannot make it less,
For more it is than I can well express
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell, When more is felt than one hath power to tell. 1288

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen'
Yet save that labour, for I have them here
What should I say? One of my husband's men Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear 1292
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it,
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ 1295

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill Concert and grief an eager combat fight,
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will,
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill 1300
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before

At last she thus begins 'Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee, 1304
Health to thy person! next vouchsafe t' afford,
If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see,
Some present speed to come and visit me
So I commend me from our house in grief My woes are tedious, though my words are brief 1309

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly
By this short schedule Collatine may know 1312
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse, Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse 1316

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her,
When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her 1320 From that suspicion which the world might bear her
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better

To see sad sights moves more than hear them
told, 1324
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear, 1328 Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste'
The post attends, and she delivers it, 1333
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems 1336
Extremity still urgeth such extremes

The homely villain curtsies to her low,
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no, 1340
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
shame 1344

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily 1348 Promise more speed, but do it leisurely Even so this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage

His kindled duty kindled their mistrust, 1352
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd, She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquim's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd,
Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish, 1357
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone 1360
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plamts a little while doth stay, Pausing for means to mourn some newer
way 1365

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy,
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy, 1369
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy,
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd

A thousand lamentable objects there, 1373
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life,
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife
The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's strife, 1377
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring plover, 1380
Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust,
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust, Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust 1384 Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look
sad

In great commanders grace and majesty
 You might behold, triumphing in their faces,
 In youth quick bearing and dexterity, 1389
 And here and there the painter interlaces Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces,
 Which heartless peasants did so well resemble, 1392
 That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble

In Ajax and Ulysses, O! what art
 Of physiognomy might one behold,
 The face of either cipher'd either's heart, 1396
 Their face their manners most expressly told
 In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd,
 But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
 Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor
 stand, 1401
 As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight,
 Making such sober action with his hand,
 That it beguild attention, charm'd the sight
 In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white, Wag'd up and down, and from his lips did fly Thin winding breath, which purld up to the sky

About him were a press of gaping faces, 1408
 Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice,
 All jointly listening, but with several graces,
 As if some mermaid did their ears entice,
 Some high, some low, the painter was so nice, 1412
 The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
 To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
 His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear, Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red, 1417
 Another smother'd, seems to pelt and swear,
 And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
 As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, 1420
 It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there,
 Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
 That for Achilles' image stood his spear, 1424 Grip'd in an armed hand, himself behind,
 Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind
 A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
 Stood for the whole to be imagined. 1428

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy, When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
 Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
 To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield, 1432
 And to their hope they such odd action yield,
 That through their light joy seemed to appear,—
 Like bright things stain'd—a kind of heavy
 fear

And, from the strand of Dardan, where they fought, 1436
 To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
 Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
 With swelling ridges, and their ranks began
 To break upon the galled shore, and than 1440
 Retire again, till meeting greater ranks They join and shoot their foam at Simois'
 banks

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
 To find a face where all distress is stell'd 1444
 Many she sees where cares have carved some,
 But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd, Till she despairing Hecuba beheld, Staring on Priam's wounds with her old
 eyes,
 Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot
 lies 1449

In her the painter had anatomiz'd Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign
 Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were dis-gus'd, 1452
 Of what she was no semblance did remain,
 Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein, Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
 Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead. 1456

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
 And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
 Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
 And bitter words to ban her cruel foes 1460
 The painter was no god to lend her those,
 And therefore Lucrece swears he did her
 wrong,
 To give her so much grief and not a tongue

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound, I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
 And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
 And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
 And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long, 1468
 And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
 Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the trumpet that began this stir,
 That with my nails her beauty I may tear 1472
 Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
 This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear

Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here,
 And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
 The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
 Become the public plague of many moe?
 Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1480
 Upon his head that hath transgressed so,
 Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe,
 For one's offence why should so many fall,
 To plague a private sin in general? 1484

'Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here Hector faints, here Troilus wounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire, Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes,
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell, 1493
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes,
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell 1496
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow, She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament
At last she sees a wretched image bound, 1501
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent,
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content,
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes

In him the painter labour'd with his skill 1506
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe,
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have

But, like a constant and confirmed devil, 1513
He entertain'd a show so seeming-just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust 1516
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms. 1519

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew, Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry, 1524
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces

This picture she advis'dly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill, 1528
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd,
So far a form lodg'd not a mind so ill
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was believ'd.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile,'—
She would have said, '—can lurk in such a look,'

But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while, 1536
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'
took
'It cannot be,' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted, 1541
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
And if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed, so beguil'd 1544
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice as Priam hum did cherish,
So did I Tarquin, so my Troy did perish

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds'
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds, Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity, 1553
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell,
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold, 1556
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell,
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter, 1560
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water'

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails
That patience is quite beaten from her breast
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails, Comparing him to that unhappy guest 1565
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er,
'Fool, fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore' 1568

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complain-
ing
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining 1572
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps,
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought, 1576
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought By deep surmise of others' detriment,
Losing her woes in shows of discontent 1580
It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company, 1584
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black,
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky
These water-galls in her dim element 1588
Foretell new storms to those already spent

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazed in her sad face he stares Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw, 1592
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares
He hath no power to ask her how she fares
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance, Met far from home, wondering each other's chance 1596

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins 'What uncouth ill event Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling
stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent? 1600

Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire, Ere once she can discharge one word of woe
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe, 1608
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words

And now this pale swan in her watery nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending 1612
'Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass
best,

Where no excuse can give the fault amending In me more woe than words are now depending,
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue

'Then be this all the task it hath to say
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay 1620
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head,
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free 1624

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature with a flaming light,
And softly cried, "Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love, else lasting shame 1629
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

"For some hard-favour'd groom of thine," quoth he, 1632

"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill 1636

The lechers in their deed this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy"

'With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641
I should not live to speak another word,
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome 1644
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak,
No rightful plea might plead for justice there
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner
dies 1653

'O' teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find,
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind, 1656
That was not forc'd, that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure'

Lo! here the helpless merchant of this loss, 1660 With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with
woe,
With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so 1664
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain,
What he breathes out his breath drinks up
again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride 1669
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast,
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief
draw 1673

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power, no flood by raining slaketh
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh 1678
More feeling-painful let it then suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me
Be suddenly revenged on my foe, Thine, mine, his own suppose thou dost defend me 1684
From what is past the help that thou shalt lend
me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,— Speaking to those that came with Collatine,—
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine,
For 'tis a meritorious fair design 1692
To chase injustice with revengeful arms Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid, 1696
As bound in knighthood to her imposition, Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops 'O! speak,' quoth she,
'How may this forced stain be wip'd from
me? 1701

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declined honour to advance? 1705
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again,
And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say, 1709
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears,
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears 1713
'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break, She throws forth Tarquin's name, 'He, he,' she says, 1717
But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not
speak,
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to
me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheath'd 1724
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breath'd,
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly 1728
Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed, 1
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew,
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed, 1732 Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw,
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase,

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood Circles her body in on every side,

Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood, 1742
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tar-quin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face, 1744
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes, Corrupted blood some watery token shows,
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrified

'Daughter, dear daughter!' old Lucretius cries, That life was mine which thou hast here de-priv'd 1752
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unhiv'd?
Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd
If children predecease progenitors, 1756
We are their offspring, and they none of ours

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born,
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time outworn
O! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was 1764

'O Time! cease thou thy course, and last no
longer,
If thy surcease to be that should survive Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive? 1768
The old bees die, the young possess their hive
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see Thy father die, and not thy father thee!'

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream, 1772
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place,
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space, 1776
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue,
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk, but through his lips do throng Weak words so thick, come in his poor heart's aid, 1784
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain, 1788
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more,
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er
Then son and father weep with equal strife Who should weep most, for daughter or for
wife 1792

The one doth call her his, the other his,
 Yet neither may possess the claim they lay
 The father says, 'She's mine' 'O' mine she is,
 Replies her husband, do not take away 1796
 My sorrow's interest, let no mourner say
 He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
 And only must be wail'd by Collatine'

'O' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life 1800
 Which she too early and too late hath spill'd'
 'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
 I ow'd her, and tis mine that she hath kill'd'
 'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours 1804 fill'd

The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life, Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece'
 side,
 Seeing such emulation in their woe, 1808
 Began to clothe his wit in state and pride, Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show
 He with the Romans was esteemed so
 As silly-jeering idiots are with kings, 1812
 For sportive words and uttering foolish things

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
 Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
 And arm'd his long-hud wits advisedly, 1816
 To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes
 'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise
 Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
 Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?' 1821 Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?

Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
 For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
 Such childish humour from weak minds pro- 1825 ceeds

Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
 To slay herself, that should have slain her foe

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
 In such relenting dew of lamentations, 1829
 But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
 To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
 That they will suffer these abominations, 1832 Since Rome herself in them doth stand dis-
 grac'd,
 By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chas'd

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
 And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
 By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's 1837
 store,
 By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
 And by chaste Lucrece' soul, that late com-plain'd
 Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody 1840
 knife,
 We will revenge the death of this true wife'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
 And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow,
 And to his protestation urg'd the rest, 1844
 Who, wondering at him, did his words allow Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow, And that deep vow, which Brutus made before,
 He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
 They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence,
 To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
 And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence 1852
 Which being done with speedy diligence,
 The Romans plausibly did give consent
 To Tarquin's everlasting banishment

I

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes, Feed'st thy light's flame with self substantial fuel,

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud burnest thy content 11
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee

II

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days, 6
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer, 'This fair child of mine Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,' Proving his beauty by succession thine! 12
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold

III

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another,
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest, Thou dost beguile the world, unless some
mother,
For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry? 6
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime,
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time 12
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee

IV

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give? 6
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave? 12
Thy unuse'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee, Which used, lives th' executor to be

V

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel,
For never-resting time leads summer on 5
To hideous winter, and confounds him there, Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite
gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was 12
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter
meet,
Leese but their show, their substance still lives sweet

VI

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd
Make sweet some vial, treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd

That use is not forbidden usury, 5
Which happies those that pay the willing loan,
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one,
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee,
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst depart,

Leaving thee living in posterity? 12
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir

VII

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty,
And having clumb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age, 6
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage,
But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way 12
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions marned, do offend thine ear, 6
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering,
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing 12 Whose speechless song, being many, seeming
one,
Sings this to thee 'Thou single wilt prove none'

IX

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife,
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind, 6
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind Look! what an unthrif in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it,
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it 12
No love toward others in that bosom sits That on himself such murderous shame commits

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident Grant, if thou wilt, thou art below'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident,
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire, 6

Seeking that bateous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire O! change thy thought, that I may change my mind

Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove 12
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee

XI

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest, And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest
Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase,
Without this, folly, age and cold decay 6
If all were munded so, the times should cease
And threescore year would make the world
away

Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the
more,
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish 12
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy die

XII

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night,
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls, all silver'd o'er with white,
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd, 6
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves, Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow, 12
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee
hence.

XIII

O! that you were yourself, but, love, you are No longer yours than you yourself here live Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give

So should that beauty which you hold in lease Find no determination, then you were 6
Yourself again, after yourself's decease, When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold? 12
O! none but unthrifths Dear my love, you
know
You had a father let your son say so

XIV

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality,
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, 5
Pointing to each his thunder, ram, and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive, 11
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert,'
Or else of thee this I prognosticate 'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date'

XV

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment, That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment,
When I perceive that men as plants increase, 5
Cheered and check'd e'en by the self-same sky, Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their braye state out of memory,
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay, 11
To change your day of youth to sullied night,
And, all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new

XVI

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6
With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men 12
To give away yourself keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill

XVII

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb Which hides your life and shows not half your parts
If I could write the beauty of your eyes 5
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, 'This poet lies,
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age, Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than
tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song 12
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice,—in it and in my rhyme

XVIII

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd 6
And every fair from fair sometime declines, By chance, or nature's changing course untrimm'd,
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st, Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st, 12
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee

XIX

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood,
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood,
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do what'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time, 6
To the wide world and all her fading sweets,
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime
O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair
brow
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen, Him in thy course untainted do allow For beauty's pattern to succeeding men 12 Yet, do thy worst, old Time despite thy
wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young

XX

A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion,
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false women's fashion,

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
 Gliding the object whereupon it gazeth, 6
 A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
 Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth
 And for a woman wert thou first created,
 Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
 And by addition me of thee defeated,
 By adding one thing to my purpose nothing 12 But since she prick'd thee out for women's
 pleasure,
 Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure

XXI

So is it not with me as with that Muse
 Sturr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
 Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
 And every fair with his fair doth rehearse, Making a complement of proud compare,
 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems, 6
 With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
 That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems
 O! let me, true in love, but truly write,
 And then believe me, my love is as fair
 As any mother's child, though not so bright
 As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air 12
 Let them say more that like of hear-say well,
 I will not praise that purpose not to sell

XXII

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
 So long as youth and thou are of one date,
 But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
 Then look I death my days should expiate
 For all that beauty that doth cover thee
 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart, 6
 Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me
 How can I then, be elder than thou art?
 O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
 As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
 As tender nurse her babe from faring ill 12
 Presume not on thy heart when mine is slam, Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again

XXIII

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
 Who with his fear is put besides his part,
 Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage, Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
 heart,
 So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
 The perfect ceremony of love's rite, 6
 And in mine own love's strength seem to decay, O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
 O! let my books be then the eloquence
 And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
 Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
 More than that tongue that more hath more express'd 12
 O! learn to read what silent love hath writ.
 To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
 Thy beauty's form in table of my heart,
 My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
 And perspective it is best painter's art
 For through the painter must you see his skill,
 To find where your true image pictur'd lies, 6
 Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
 That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have
 done
 Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for
 me
 Are windows to my breast where-through the sun
 Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee, 12
 Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art, They draw but what they see, know not the heart

XXV

Let those who are in favour with their stars
 Of public honour and proud titles boast,
 Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars, Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
 But as the marigold at the sun's eye, 6
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die
 The painful warrior famoused for fight,
 After a thousand victories once foil'd Is from the book of honour razed quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd 12
 Then happy I, that love and am belov'd,
 Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

XXVI

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
 Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
 To thee I send this written ambassage,
 To witness duty, not to show my wit
 Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine May make seem bare, in wanting words to show 6
 it,
 But that I hope some good conceit of thine
 In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it, Till whatsoever star that guides my moving Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
 And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
 To show me worthy of thy sweet respect 12
 Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee, Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me

XXVII

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
 But then begins a journey in my head
 To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd For then my thoughts—from far where I abide—
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee, 6
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see.

Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous and her old face new ¹²
Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself no quiet find.

XXXVIII

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day oppress'd,
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me, ⁶
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still further off from thee
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright And dost him grace when clouds do blot the
heaven
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night, When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even ¹²
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger

XXXIX

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope, Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd, ⁶
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least,
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee,—and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate, ¹²
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings

XXX

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste
Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night, ⁶
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd
sight
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before ¹²
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd and sorrows end

XXXI

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
And there reigns Love, and all Love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried
How many a holy and obsequious tear ⁵
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give,
That due of many now is thine alone ¹²
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou—all they—hast all the all of me.

XXXII

If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover, Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen, ⁶
Reserve them for my love, not for their rime,
Exceeded by the height of happier men
O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought 'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage ¹²
But since he died, and poets better prove, Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love'

XXXIII

Full many a glorious morning have I seen Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchymy,
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face, ⁶
And from the forlorn world his visage hide, Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace
Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
With all-triumphant splendour on my brow,
But, out! alack! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now ¹²
Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth, Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth

XXXIV

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face, ⁶
For no man well of such a salve can speak That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace

Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief,
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence a cross 12 Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds

XXXV

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast
done
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud,
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorising thy trespass with compare, 6
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss, Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are,
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,— Thy adverse party is thy advocate,—
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence Such civil war is in my love and hate, 12
That I an accessory needs must be To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me

XXXVI

Let me confess that we two must be twain, Although our undivided loves are one
So shall those blots that do with me remain, Without thy help, by me be borne alone
In our two loves there is but one respect, Though in our lives a separable spite, 6
Which, though it alter not love's sole effect, Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me, 11
Unless thou take that honour from thy name
But do not so, I love thee in such sort
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report

XXXVII

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth,
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit, 6
Or any of these all, or all, or more Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store
So then I am not lame, poor nor despis'd, Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
That I in thy abundance am suffic'd
And by a part of all thy glory live 12
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee
Thus wish I have, then ten times happy me!

XXXVIII

How can my Muse want subject to invent, While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?

O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight, 6
For who so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth Than those old nine which rimmers invoke,
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth Eternal numbers to outlive long date 12
If my slight Muse do please these curious
days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise

XXXIX

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self
bring?
And what is 't but mine own when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one, 6
That by this separation I may give That due to thee, which thou deserv'st alone
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive, 12
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain

XL

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all,
What hast thou then more than thou hadst
before?
No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call,
All mine was thine before thou hadst this more
Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest, 6
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty,
And yet, love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows, Kill me with spites, yet we must not be foes

XLI

Those pretty wrongs that liberty committs,
When I am sometimes absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won, 6
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assai'd, 6
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ay me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold
truth, 12
Here, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly,
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love
her, 6

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me, Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss,
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross 12
But here's the joy, my friend and I are one, Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone

XLIII

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected,
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright, are bright in dark directed Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form form happy show 6

To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth sray! 12

All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me

XLIV

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way,
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay
No matter then although my foot did stand Upon the furthest earth remov'd from thee, 6 For nimble thought can jump both sea and
land,

As soon as think the place where he would be
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art
gone,

But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan, 12
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV

The other two slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee, 6
My life, being made of four, with two alone Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy,

Untill life's composition be recur'd
By those sweet messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me 12
Thus told, I joy, but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight, Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,—

A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,— 6
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies
To 'cide this title is impannelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart,
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part 12
As thus, mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart

XLVII

Between mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,

With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart, 6
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part

So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me,
For thou not further than my thoughts canst
move, 11
And I am still with them and they with thee,
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight

XLVIII

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!

But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief, 6
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest, Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,

Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and
part 12
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX

Against that time, if ever that time come,
 When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
 When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
 Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects, Against that time when thou shalt strangely
 pass,
 And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
 When love, converted from the thing it was,
 Shall reasons find of settled gravity,
 Against that time do I ensconce me here
 Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
 And thus my hand against myself uprear,
 To guard the lawful reasons on thy part 12
 To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
 Since why to love I can allege no cause

L

How heavy do I journey on the way,
 When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
 Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
 'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy
 friend!'
 The beast that bears me, tired with my woe, Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me, 6
 As if by some instinct the wretch did know His rider lov'd not speed, being made from
 thee
 The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
 Which heavily he answers with a groan
 More sharp to me than spurring to his side, 12 For that same groan doth put this in my mind
 My grief lies onward, and my joy behind

LI

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
 Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
 Till I return, of posting is no need
 O! what excuse will my poor beast then find,
 When swift extremity can seem but slow? 6 Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
 In winged speed no motion shall I know
 Then can no horse with my desire keep pace,
 Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
 Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race, 11
 But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade,—
 'Since from thee going he went wilful-slow, Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go'

LII

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
 Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
 The which he will not every hour survey,
 For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure
 Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
 Since, seldom coming, in the long year set, 6
 Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
 Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
 Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
 To make some special instant special blest
 By new unfolding his imprison'd pride 12 Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
 Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope

LIII

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
 That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
 Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
 And you, but one, can every shadow lend Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit Is poorly imitated after you, 6
 On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
 And you in Grecian tires are painted new Speak of the spring and foison of the year,
 The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
 The other as your bounty doth appear,
 And you in every blessed shape we know 12
 In all external grace you have some part,
 But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV

O! how much more doth beauty beauteous seem
 By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
 The rose looks fair, but farrer we it deem For that sweet odour which doth in it live
 The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
 As the perfumed tincture of the roses, 6
 Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
 When summer's breath their masked buds dis-closes
 But, for their virtue only is their show,
 They live unwood'd, and unrespected fade,
 Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so, 11
 Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made—
 And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth, When that shall vade, my verse distils your truth

LV

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
 Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rime,
 But you shall shine more bright in these contents
 Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish
 time
 When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
 And broils root out the work of masonry, 6 Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
 The living record of your memory
 'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth, your praise shall still find room
 Even in the eyes of all posterity
 That wear this world out to the ending doom 12
 So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
 You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI

Sweet love, renew thy force, be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might So, love, be thou, although to-day thou fill Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with ful-
ness,

To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness Let this sad interim like the ocean be Which parts the shore, where two contracted new

Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more bless'd may be the view,¹²
Or call it winter, which, being full of care, Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare

LVII

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for
you,

Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu, Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought, Save, where you are how happy you make those¹²
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do anything, he thinks no ill

LVIII

That god forbid that made me first your slave, I should in thought control your times of
pleasure,
Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer, being at your beck,
The imprison'd absence of your liberty,⁶
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,

Without accusing you of injury
Be where you list, your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime¹²
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child!
O! that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,⁶ Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done!

That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame,
Where we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether revolution be the same¹²
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise

LX

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore
So do our minutes hasten to their end, Each changing place with that which goes
before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend Nativity, once in the main of light, Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,⁶ Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow¹²
And yet to times in hope my verse shall
stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand

LXI

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry,<⁶
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake,
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake¹²
For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near

LXII

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
And all my soul and all my every part,
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,⁶
No shape so true, no truth of such account,
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount
But when my glass shows me myself indeed, Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read,¹²
Self so self-loving were iniquity
'Tis thee, my self,—that for myself I praise, Painting my age with beauty of thy days

LXIII

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
 With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'er-
 worn,
 When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow
 With lines and wrinkles, when his youthful morn

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night,
 And all those beauties whereof now he's king 6
 Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
 Stealing away the treasure of his spring,
 For such a time do I now fortify Against confounding age's cruel knife,
 That he shall never cut from memory
 My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's
 life 12
 His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
 And they shall live, and he in them still green

LXIV

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
 The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age,
 When sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
 And brass eternal slave to mortal rage,
 When I have seen the hungry ocean gain Advantage on the kingdom of the shore, 6
 And the firm soil win of the watery main,
 Increasing store with loss, and loss with store,
 When I have seen such interchange of state,
 Or state itself confounded to decay,
 Runn hath taught me thus to ruminate—
 That Time will come and take my love away 12
 This thought is as a death, which cannot choose But weep to have that which it fears to lose

LXV

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless
 sea,
 But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
 How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
 Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
 O! how shall summer's honey breath hold out Against the wrackful siege of battering days, 6
 When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
 Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
 O fearful meditation! where, alack, Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
 Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot
 back?
 Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid? 12
 O! none, unless this miracle have might,
 That in black ink my love may still shine bright

LXVI

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry
 As to behold desert a beggar born,
 And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
 And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
 And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
 And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
 And right perfection wrongfully disgraced,
 And strength by limping sway disabled,

And art made tongue-tied by authority,
 And folly—doctor-like—controlling skill,
 And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
 And captive good attending captain ill 12 Tir'd with all these, from these would I be
 gone,
 Save that, to die, I leave my love alone

LXVII

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
 And with his presence grace impiety,
 That sin by him advantage should achieve,
 And lace itself with his society?
 Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
 And steal dead seeming of his living hue? 6
 Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
 Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is, Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
 For she hath no exchequer now but his,
 And, proud of many, lives upon his gains 12 O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
 In days long since, before these last so bad

LXVIII

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
 When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do
 now,
 Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
 Or durst inhabit on a living brow,
 Before the golden tresses of the dead,
 The right of sepulchres, were shorn away, 6
 To live a second life on second head,
 Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay
 In him those holy antique hours are seen,
 Without all ornament, itself and true,
 Making no summer of another's green,
 Robbing no old to dress his beauty new, 12
 And him as for a map doth Nature store,
 To show false Art what beauty was of yore

LXIX

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
 Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend,
 All tongues—the voice of souls—give thee that due,
 Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd,
 But those same tongues, that give thee so thine
 own, 6
 In other accents do this praise confound
 By seeing farther than the eye hath shown
 They look into the beauty of thy mind,
 And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds, Then,—churls,—their thoughts, although their eyes were kind, 11
 To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds
 But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
 The soil is this, that thou dost common grow

LXX

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair,
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time, 6
 For sanker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd,
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To tie up envy evermore enlarg'd 12
 If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show, Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe

LXXI

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell Give warning to the world that I am fled
 From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it, for I love you so, 6
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 If thinking on me then should make you woe
 O! if,—I say, you look upon this verse,
 When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay, 12 Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
 And mock you with me after I am gone

LXXII

O! lest the world should task you to recite
 What merit lived in me, that you should love After my death,—dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove,
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie, 6
 To do more for me than mine own desert,
 And hang more praise upon deceased I
 Than niggard truth would willingly impart
 O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
 My name be buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor you 12
 For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
 Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang
 In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
 As after sunset fadeth in the west, 6
 Which by and by black night doth take away, Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
 In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
 That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the death-bed whereon it must expire 11
 Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by

Thus thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
 To love that well which thou must leave ere long

LXXIV

But be contented when that fell arrest
 Without all bail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,
 Which for memorial still with thee shall stay
 When thou reviewest thus, thou dost review 6
 The very part was consecrate to thee
 The earth can have but earth, which is his due,
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead,
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered 12
 The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains

LXXV

So are you to my thoughts as food to life, Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground,
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found,
 Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon 5
 Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure,
 Now counting best to be with you alone, Then better'd that the world may see my
 pleasure
 Sometime, all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by clean starved for a look,
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took 12
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away

LXXVI

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why with the time do I not glance aside To new-found methods and to compounds
 strange?
 Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a noted weed, 6
 That every word doth almost tell my name, Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
 O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument,
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent 12
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear, Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste,
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory, 6
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know Time's thievish progress to eternity.

Look! what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nursed, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind 12
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book

LXXVIII

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse
As every alien pen hath got my use
And under thee their poesy disperse Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing

And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be, 12
 But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace,
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument Deserves the travail of a worthier pen,
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word From thy behaviour, beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek, he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live 12 Then thank him not for that which he doth
 say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay

LXXX

O! how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
But since your worth—wide as the ocean is,—
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear, 6
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride,
Or, being wrack'd, I am a worthless boat, 12
He of tall building and of goodly pride
Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
The worst was this,—my love was my decay

LXXXI

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten,
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.

Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die 6

The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read,
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse, 11
When all the breathers of this world are dead, You still shall live,—such virtue hath my pen,— Where breath most breathes,—even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise, 6
And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days
And do so, love, yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wert truly sympathized 11
In true plain words by thy true-telling friend,
And their gross painting might be better used
Where cheeks need blood, in thee it is abus'd.

LXXXIII

I never saw that you did painting need,
And therefore to your fair no painting set,
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed The barren tender of a poet's debt
And therefore have I slept in your report, That you yourself, being extant, well might show 6
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb,
For I impair not beauty being mute, 11
When others would give life, and bring a tomb
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes Than both your poets can in praise devise

LXXXIV

Who is it that says most? which can say more Than this rich praise,—that you alone are you?
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew Lean penury within that pen doth dwell 5
That to his subject lends not some small glory,
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where. 12
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse, Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
Whilst comments of your praise, richly compild,
Deserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd
I think good thoughts, while others write good
words,

And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry 'Amen' 6
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In polish'd form of well-refined pen
Hearing you praise'd I say, 'Tis so 'tis true,'
And to the most of praise add something more,
But that is in my thought, whose love to you, Though words come hindmost, holds his rank
before 12
Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse, Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead? 6
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night Giving him aid, my verse astonished
He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast,
I was not sick of any fear from thence 12
But when your countenance fill'd up his line, Then lack'd I matter, that enfeebled mine

LXXXVII

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing,
My bonds in thee are all determinate
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving? 6
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking,
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing, 11
Comes home again, on better judgment making Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter

LXXXVIII

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art for-sworn
With mine own weakness, being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story 6
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory

And I by this will be a gainer too,
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me 12
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong

LXXXIX

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt, Against thy reasons making no defence
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change, 6
As I'll myself disgrace, knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange,
Be absent from thy walks, and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell 12
For thee against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate

XC

Then hate me when thou wilt, if ever, now, Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss Ah! do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe, 6
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might, 12
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe, Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so

XCI

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill, Some in their wealth, some in their body's
force,
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill, Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse,
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest 6
But these particulars are not my measure,
All these I better in one general best Thy love is better than high birth to me, Richer than wealth, prouder than garments'
cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be,
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast 12 Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take All this away, and me most wretched make

XCII

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine,
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine

Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end 6
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie
 O! what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die 12
 But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not

XCIII

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband, so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new,
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy change 6
 In many's looks the false heart's history Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles
 strange,
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell, Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings
 be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness
 tell 12
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCIV

They that have power to hurt and will do
 none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,
 Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
 Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow,
 They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
 And husband nature's riches from expense, 6
 They are the lords and owners of their faces, Others but stewards of their excellence
 The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
 Though to itself it only live and die,
 But if that flower with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his dignity 12 For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds,
 Likes that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the
 shame
 Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
 Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
 O! in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose
 That tongue that tells the story of thy days, Making lascivious comments on thy sport, 6
 Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise, Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
 O! what a mansion have those vices got Which for their habitation chose out thee,
 Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
 And all things turn to fair that eyes can see! 12
 Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
 The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge.

XCVI

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness,
 Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
 Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less
 Thou makest faults graces that to thee resort
 As on the finger of a throned queen
 The basest jewel will be well esteem'd, 6
 So are those errors that in thee are seen
 To truths translated and for true things deem'd
 How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
 If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
 How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
 If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy
 state! 12
 But do not so, I love thee in such sort,
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report

XCVII

How like a winter hath my absence been
 From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
 What freezings have I felt, what dark days
 seen!
 What old December's bareness every where!
 And yet this time remov'd was summer's time
 The teeming autumn, big with rich increase, 6 Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
 Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease
 Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
 But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit,
 For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
 And, thou away, the very birds are mute 12
 Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer, That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near

XCVIII

From you have I been absent in the spring,
 When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
 Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
 That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him
 Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
 Of different flowers in odour and in hue, 6
 Could make me any summer's story tell, Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew
 Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
 Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose,
 They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
 Drawn after you, you pattern of all those 12
 Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
 As with your shadow I with these did play

XCIX

The forward violet thus did I chide Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
 If not from my love's breath? The purple pride Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
 In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd 6
 The lily I condemned for thy hand,
 And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair,
 The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
 One blushing shame, another white despair,

A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
 And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath,
 But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth 12
 A vengeful canker eat him up to death
 More flowers I noted, yet I none could see But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee

C

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
 To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
 Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song, Darkening thy power to lend base subjects
 light?

Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
 In gentle numbers time so idly spent, 6
 Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
 And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
 Ruse, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
 If Time have any wrinkle graven there,
 If any, be a satire to decay,
 And make Time's spoils despised every where 12 Give my love fame faster than Time wastes
 life,
 So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked

CI

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd?
 Both truth and beauty on my love depends,
 So doth thou too, and therein dignified
 Make answer, Muse wilt thou not haply say, 5
 'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay,
 But best is best, if never intermix'd?'
 Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
 Excuse not silence so, for 't lies in thee
 To make him much outlive a gilded tomb
 And to be prais'd of ages yet to be 12
 Then do thy office, Muse, I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows now

CII

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming,
 I love not less, though less the show appear
 That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming
 The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere
 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
 When I was wont to greet it with my lays, 6
 As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
 And stops her pipe in growth of ripper days
 Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the
 night,
 But that wild music burthens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear
 delight 12
 Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my
 tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song

CIII

Alack! what poverty my Muse brings forth,
 That having such a scope to show her pride,
 The argument, all bare, is of more worth Than when it hath my added praise beside!
 O! blame me not, if I no more can write!
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face 6
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace
 Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well?
 For to no other pass my verses tend Than of your graces and your gifts to tell, 12
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
 Your own glass shows you when you look in it

CIV

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I ey'd, Such seems your beauty still Three winters
 cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers'
 pride,
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn
 turn'd
 In process of the seasons have I seen, 6
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd, Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green
 Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
 Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd,
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth
 stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd 12
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead

CV

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence, 6
 Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference
 'Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument,
 'Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words,
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords 12
 'Fair, kind, and true,' have often liv'd alone,
 Which three till now never kept seat in one

CVI

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rime,
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow, 6
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.

So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring,
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes, 11
They had not skill enough your worth to sing
For we, which now behold these present
days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise

CVII

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul Of the wide world dreaming on things to
come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage, 6
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age
Now with the drops of this most balmy time My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor time, 11
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII

What's in the brain, that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy, but yet, like prayers
divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same, 6
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine, Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weights not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page, 12
Finding the first conceit of love there bred, Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX

O! never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify
As easy might I from myself depart
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie
That is my home of love if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again, 6
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good, 12
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose, in it thou art my all.

CX

Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view, Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new,
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely, but, by all above, 6
These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love
Now all is done, save what shall have no end Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd 12 Then give me welcome, next my heaven the
best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast

CXI

O! for my sake do you with Fortune chide
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide Than public means which public manners breeds
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd 6
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd, Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection,
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction 12
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye Even that your pity is enough to cure me

CXII

Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow,
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your
tongue, 6
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong
In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of other's voices, that my adder's sense To critic and to flatterer stopped are Mark how with my neglect I do dispense 12
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out,
For it no form delivers to the heart 5
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch,

For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature¹²
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue

CXIV

Or whether doth my mind being crown'd with
you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchymy,
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self i resemble, 6 Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 'tis the first, 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup 12
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin

CXV

Those lines that I before have writ do lie, Even those that said I could not love you dearer
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer
But reckoning Time, whose mullion'd accidents Creep in 'twixt vows, and chaunge decrees of kings, 6
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents, Divert strong minds to the course of altering things,
Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, 'Now I love you best',
When I was certain o'er uncertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest? 12
Love is a babe, then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests and is never shaken, 6
It is the star to every wandering bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come,
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom. 12
If this be error and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

CXVII

Accuse me thus that I have scanted all Wherein I should your great deserts repay, Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereunto all bonds do tie me day by day,
That I have frequent been with unknown
minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchas'd
right, 6
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me furthest from your sight
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate,
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate, 12 Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love

CXVIII

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge,
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge, Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweet-
ness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding, 6
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needings Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state, 12
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd,
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you

CXIX

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears, Distill'd from limbeck fowl as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never! 6 How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better,
And run'd love, when it is built anew, 11 Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gam by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time, 6
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.

O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
 My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd 11
 The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
 But that your trespass now becomes a fee, Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom
 me

CXXI

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
 When not to be receives reproach of being,
 And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd 11
 Not by our feeling, but by others seeing For why should others' false adulterate eyes
 Give salutation to my sportive blood?
 Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
 Which in their wills count bad what I think good?

No, I am that I am, and they that level
 At my abuses reckon up their own I may be straight though they themselves be bevel,
 By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown, 12
 Unless thus general evil they maintain,
 All men are bad and in their badness reign

CXXII

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
 Full character'd with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank remain,
 Beyond all date, even to eternity
 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist, 6
 Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
 Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd
 That poor retention could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tally thy dear love to score,
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
 To trust those tables that receive thee more 12
 To keep an adjunct to remember thee
 Were to import forgetfulness in me

CXXIII

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change
 Thy pyramids built up with newer might
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange,
 They are but dressings of a former sight
 Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old, 6
 And rather make them born to our desire Than think that we before have heard them told.
 Thy registers and thee I both defy,
 Not wondering at the present nor the past,
 For thy records and what we see doth lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste 12
 This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
 I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

CXXIV

If my dear love were but the child of state,
 It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
 As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd

No, it was builded far from accident,
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls 6
 Under the blow of thrall'd discontent, Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls
 It fears not policy, that heretic, Which works on leases of short number'd
 hours,
 But all alone stands hugely politic,
 That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers 12
 To this I witness call the fools of time, Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for cume

CXXV

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
 With my extern the outward honouring,
 Or laid great bases for eternity,
 Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour Lose all and more by paying too much rent, 6
 For compound sweet foregoing simple savour Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
 No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
 And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
 Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no
 art,
 But mutual render, only me for thee 12
 Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul When most impeach'd stands least in thy control

CXXVI

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
 Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle hour,
 Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
 Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st,
 If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack, As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee 6
 back,
 She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
 May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
 She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure
 Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be, 12
 And her quietus is to render thee

CXXVII

In the old age black was not counted fair,
 Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name,
 But now is black beauty's successive heir,
 And beauty slander'd with a bastard's shame For since each hand hath put on Nature's power,
 Faring the foul with Art's false borrow'd face, 6
 Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
 But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace
 Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black,
 Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
 At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack, 12
 Sland'ring creation with a false esteem
 Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
 That every tongue says beauty should look so

CXXVIII

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st

The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickl'd, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips, 10
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait, Making dead wood more bless'd than living

lips
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action, and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame, Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust,
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight,
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had, 6
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so,
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme,
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe,
Before, a joy propos'd, behind, a dream 12
All this the world well knows, yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun,
Coral is far more red than her lips' red
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun,
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white, 6
But no such roses see I in her cheeks,
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know That music hath a far more pleasing sound
I grant I never saw a goddess go,— My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground 12
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare

CXXXI

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel,
For well thou know'st to my dear dotting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold, Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan 6
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.

And to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place 12
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds

CXXXII

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east, 6
Nor that full star that ushers in the even,
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face
O! let it then as well beseech thy heart To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part 12
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack

CXXXIII

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is 't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd 6
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken,
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail,
Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard,
Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail 12
And yet thou wilt, for I, being pent in thee, Perforce am thine, and all that is in me

CXXXIV

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free, 6
For thou art covetous and he is kind,
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that putt'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake,
So him I lose through my unkind abuse 12
Him have I lost, thou hast both him and me
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free

CXXXV

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in over plus,
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine? 6
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?

The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
 And in abundance addeth to his store,
 So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will 11
 One will of mine to make thy large Will more Let no unkind 'No' fair beseechers kill, Think all but one, and me in that one Will

CXXXVI

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
 Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
 And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there,
 Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
 Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one 6
 In things of great receipt with ease we prove Among a number one is reckon'd none
 Then in the number let me pass untold, Though in thy stores' account I one must be,
 For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
 That nothing me, a something sweet to thee 12
 Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
 And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will

CXXXVII

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine
 eyes,
 That they behold, and see not what they see?
 They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
 Yet what the best is take the worst to be If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
 Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride, 6
 Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks, Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
 Why should my heart think that a several plot Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
 Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
 To put fair truth upon so foul a face? 12 In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
 And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

CXXXVIII

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
 I do believe her, though I know she lies,
 That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
 Unlearned in the world's false subtleties
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although she knows my days are past the best, 6
 Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue
 On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
 But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
 And wherefore say not I that I am old?
 O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
 And age in love loves not to have years told 12
 Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
 And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX

O! call not me to justify the wrong
 That thy unkindness lays upon my heart, Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy
 tongue
 Use power with power, and slay me not by art

Tell me thou lovest elsewhere, but in my sight,
 Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside 6 What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
 Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can bide?
 Let me excuse thee ah! my love well knows
 Her pretty looks have been my enemies,
 And therefore from my face she turns my foes, 11
 That they elsewhere might dart their injuries
 Yet do not so, but since I am near slain, Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain

CXL

Be wise as thou art cruel, do not press
 My tongue tied patience with too much dis-dam,
 Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
 The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
 If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
 Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so,— 6
 As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
 No news but health from their physicians
 know,—
 For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
 And in my madness might speak ill of thee
 Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad, Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be 12
 That I may not be so, nor thou belied, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide

CXLI

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
 For they in thee a thousand errors note,
 But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
 Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
 Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone 6
 Nor taste nor smell desire to be invited
 To any sensual feast with thee alone
 But my five wits nor my five senses can Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
 Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man, Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to 12
 be
 Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
 That she that makes me sin awards me pain

CXLI

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate, Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving O! but with mine compare thou thine own
 state,
 And thou shalt find it merits not reproving,
 Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
 That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments 6
 And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine, Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee
 Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
 Thy pity may deserve to pitied be 12
 If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
 By self-example mayst thou be denied!

CXLI

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away, Sets down her babe, and makes all quick dispatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay,
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee, Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind,
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind, 12
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

CXLI

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side, 6
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil, Wooing his purity with her foul pride
And whate'er that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, but not directly tell,
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell, 12
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt, Till my bad angel fire my good one out

CXLI

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate',
To me that languish'd for her sake
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet,
'I hate', she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And sav'd my life, saying—'Not you'

CXLI

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, Fool'd by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend? 6
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store,
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross,
Within be fed, without be rich no more, 12 So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on
men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease,
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except Past cure I am, now Reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest,
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's
are,
At random from the truth vainly express'd, 12
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee
bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII

O me! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight,
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote Love's eye is not so true as all men's no
How can it? O! how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view,
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears, 12
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find

CXLI

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forget Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon? 6
Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes? 12
But, love hate on for now I know thy mind, Those that can see thou lov'st and I am blind

CL

O! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds, 6
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?

Who taught thee how to make me love thee
 more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
 O! though I love what others do abhor, With others thou shouldst not abhor my
 state
 If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be belov'd of thee

CLI

Love is too young to know what conscience is,
 Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?
 Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss, Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove For, thou betraying me, I do betray
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason,
 My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love, flesh stays no further reason,
 But rising at thy name doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride, He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side
 No want of conscience hold it that I call Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall

CLII

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swear-
 ing,
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee, When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most,
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy,
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,

Or made them swear against the thing they
 see,
 For I have sworn thee fair, more perjur'd I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII

Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground,
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new fired,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my breast,
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
 But found no cure the bath for my help lies Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes

CLIV

The little Love-god lying once asleep
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand, Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep
 Came tripping by, but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd,
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseas'd, but I, my mistress' thrall, Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
 A plaintful story from a sisting vale,
 My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
 And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale,
 Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
 Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
 Which fortified her visage from the sun Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
 The carcass of a beauty spent and done
 Time had not scythed all that youth begun, Nor youth all quit, but, spite of heaven's fell
 rage,
 Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Of't did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
 Which on it had conceited characters,
 Laundering the silken figures in the brine
 That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
 And often reading what content it bears,
 As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
 In clamours of all size, both high and low

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
 As they did battery to the spheres intend,
 Sometime diverted, their poor balls are tied To the orb'd earth, sometimes they do extend Their view right on, anon their gazes lend
 To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
 The mind and sight distractedly commix'd

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat, Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride
 For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,

Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside, 32
 Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
 And true to bondage would not break from thence
 Though slackly braided in loose negligence

A thousand favours from a maund she drew 36
 Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
 Which one by one she in a river threw,
 Upon whose weeping margent she was set,
 Like usury, applying wet to wet, 40
 Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall Where want cries some, but where excess begs
 all

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
 Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood, 44
 Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
 Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud,
 Found yet more letters sadly penn'd in blood,
 With sleided silk feat and affectedly 48
 Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
 And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear,
 Cried 'O false blood! thou register of lies, 52
 What unapproved witness dost thou bear, Ink would have seem'd more black and damned
 here

This said, in top of rage the lues she rents,
 Big discontent so breaking their contents 56

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh—Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffie knew Of court, of city, and had let go by The swiftest hours, observed as they flew— 60 Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew,
 And, privileg'd by age, desires to know
 In brief the grounds and motives of her woe

So slides he down upon his grained bat, 64
 And comely-distant sits he by her side,
 When he again desires her, being sat,
 Her grievance with his hearing to divide
 If that from him there may be aught applied 68
 Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
 'Tis promis'd in the charity of age

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
 The injury of many a blasting hour, 72
 Let it not tell your judgment I am old,
 Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power
 I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
 Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied 76 Love to myself and to no love beside

'But woe is me! too early I attended A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace,
 Of one by nature's outwards so commended, 80
 That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place,
 And when in his fair parts she did abide,
 She was new lodg'd and newly deified. 84

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
 And every light occasion of the wind
 Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls
 What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find 88
 Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
 For on his visage was in little drawn
 What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin, 92
 His phoenix down began but to appear Like unshorn velvet on that termless skin Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear,
 Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear, 96
 And nice affections wavering stood in doubt If best were as it was, or best without

'His qualities were beauteous as his form,
 For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof free, 100
 Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
 As oft 'twixt May and April is to see, When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they
 be
 His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth 104
 Did livery falseness in a pride of truth

'Well could he ride, and often men would say "That horse his mettle from his rider takes Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, 108 What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"
 And controversy hence a question takes,
 Whether the horse by him became his deed,
 Or he his manage by the well-doing steed 112

'But quickly on this side the verdict went His real habitude gave life and grace
 To appertainings and to ornament,
 Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case 116
 All aids, themselves made farrer by their place, Came for additions, yet their purpos'd trim Pec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
 All kind of arguments and question deep,
 All replication prompt, and reason strong,
 For his advantage still did wake and sleep
 To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
 He had the dialect and different skill, 125 Catching all passions in his craft of will

'That he did in the general bosom reign
 Of young, of old, and sexes both enchanted, 128
 To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
 In personal duty, following where he haunted Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted,
 And dialogu'd for him what he would say, 132 Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills
 obey

'Many there were that did his picture get,
 To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind,
 Like fools that in the imagination set 136
 The goodly objects which abroad they find
 Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd,

And labouring in more pleasures to bestow
 them
 Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe
 them 140

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
 Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart
 My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
 And was my own fee-simple, not in part, 144
 What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
 Threw my affections in his charmed power,
 Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did, 148
 Demand of him, nor being desired yielded,
 Finding myself in honour so forbid,
 With safest distance I mine honour shielded Experience for me many bulwarks bullded 152 Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
 Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

'But, ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
 The destin'd ill she must herself assay? 156
 Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
 To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
 Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay,
 For when we rage, advice is often seen 160
 By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
 That we must curb it upon others' proof,
 To be forbid the sweets that seem so good, 164
 For fear of harms that preach in our behoof
 O appetite! from judgment stand aloof,
 The one a palate hath that needs will taste, 167 Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last"

'For further I could say "This man's untrue",
 And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling, Heard where his plants in others' orchards
 grew,
 Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling, 172
 Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling,
 Thought characters and words merely but art,
 And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city, 176 Till thus he 'gan besiege me "Gentle maid,
 Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
 And be not of my holy vows afraid
 That's to ye sworn to none was ever said; 180
 For feasts of love I have been call'd unto, Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo

"All my offences that abroad you see
 Are errors of the blood, none of the mind, 184 Love made them not with acture they may be,
 Where neither party is nor true nor kind They sought then shame that so their shame did find,
 And so much less of shame in me remains, 188
 By how much of me their reproach contains.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
 Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd,
 Or my affection put to the smallest teen, 192
 Or any of my leasures ever charm'd Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd,
 Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
 And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy 196

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
 Of paled pearls and rubies red as blood,
 Figuring that they their passions likewise lent
 me
 Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200
 In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood,
 Effects of terror and dear modesty,
 Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly

"And, lo! behold these talents of their hair,
 With twisted metal amorously impleach'd, 205
 I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
 Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
 With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd, 208
 And deep-bran'd sonnets, that did amplify
 Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

"The diamond, why, 'twas beautiful and hard,
 Whereto his invis'd properties did tend, 212
 The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend,
 The heaven-hu'd sapphire and the opal blend
 With objects manifold each several stone, 216 With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

"Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
 Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender, 219
 Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,
 But yield them up where I myself must render,
 That is, to you, my origin and ender,
 For these, of force, must your oblations be,
 Since I their altar, you enpatron me 224

"O! then, advance of yours that phraseless
 hand,
 Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise,
 Take all these similes to your own command, Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise, 228

What me your minister, for you obeys, Works under you, and to your audit comes
 Their distract parcels in combined sums.

"Lo! this device was sent me from a nun, 232
 Or sister sanctified, of holiest note,
 Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
 Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote,
 For she was sought by spirits of richest coat, 236
 But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
 To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet! what labour is 't to leave The thing we have not, mastering what not strives, 240

Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight, 244
And makes her absence valiant, not her might

"O! pardon me, in that my boast is true,
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue, 248
And now she would the caged cloister fly, Religious love put out Religion's eye
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd. 252

"How mighty then you are, O! hear me tell
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among 256
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,

Must for your victory us all congeat,
As compound love to physic your cold breast

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace, 261
Believ'd her eyes when they to assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine

"When thou impresses, what are precepts
worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame, 268
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears 273

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend, Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine,
And supplicant their sighs to you extend, 276
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst
mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my troth " 280

'This said, his watery eyes he did dismount, Whose sights till then were levell'd on my face,
Each cheek a river running from a fount 283
With brimish current downward flow'd apace
O! how the channel to the stream gave grace,

Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses

'O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies 288
In the small orb of one particular tear,
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath, 293
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath

'For, lo! his passion, but an art of craft, Even there resolv'd my reason into tears, 296
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd, Shook off my sober guards and civil fears,
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting, though our drops thus difference bore, 300
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore

'In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water, 304 Or swoounding paleness, and he takes and
leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoond at tragic shows

'That not a heart which in his level came 309
Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame,
And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would marm 312
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim,
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace 316
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd,
That the unexperient gave the tempter place,
Which like a cherubin above them hover'd Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd? 320
Ay me! I fell, and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake

'O! that infected moisture of his eye,
O! that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,
O! that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly,
O! that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd,
O! all that borrow'd motion seeming ow'd,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd, 328
And new pervert a reconciled maid '

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

I

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,

Unskilful in the world's false forgeries
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best, 6
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue, Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?

O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told 12
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me, Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be

II

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still,
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worse spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
Woong his purity with her fair pride
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, but not directly tell,
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell 12
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out

III

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee 6
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love,
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is,
Then thou, fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,

Exhale this vapour vow, in thee it is If broken, then it is no fault of mine 12
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green, Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.

She told him stories to delight his ear,
She show'd him favours to allure his eye, 6
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there,—

Touches so soft still conquer chastity
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer 12
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward He rose and ran away, ah! fool too froward

V

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

O! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove,

Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend 6

o If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice,

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend,

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder,

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire

Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,

Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire, 12

Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong,

To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue

VI

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,

When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing trarriance for Adonis made

Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen 6

Hot was the day, she hotter that did look For his approach, that often there had been.

Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim

The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him 12

He, spying her, bounc'd in, whereas he stood

'O Jove', quoth she, 'why was not I a flood!'

VII

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty,
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle, Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falsier to deface her 6

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd, Between each kiss her oaths of true loves wearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd, Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings, Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings 12

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth, She burn'd out love, as soon as straw outburneth,
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing,
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether? 17 Bad in the best, though excellent in neither

VIII

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me, Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense, 6 Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such As, passing all conceit, needs no defence
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes,
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd Whenas himself to singing he betakes 12
One god is god of both, as poets feign,
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain

IX

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,
* * * * *
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild,
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds, 6
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will, Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds
'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth! 11
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the sore She showed hers, he saw more wounds than
one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded, Fair creature, kull'd too soon by death's sharp stung!

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall should be

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have,
For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave For why I craved nothing of thee still O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee, Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me 12

XI

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him
She told the youngling how god Mars did try
her,
And as he fell to her, so fell she to him
'Even thus', quoth she, 'the war-like god em-brac'd me,
And then she chipp'd Adonis in her arms, 6
'Even thus', quoth she, 'the war-like god unlac'd me',
As if the boy should use like loving charms
'Even thus', quoth she, 'he seized on my lips',
And with her lips on his did act the seizure,
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her
pleasure 12
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clup me till I ran away

XII

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together
Youth is full of pleasure, age is full of care, Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather,
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short,
Youth is numble, age is lame, 6
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold,
Youth is wild, and age is tame
Age, I do abhor thee, youth, I do adore thee, O! my love, my love is young Age, I do defy thee O! sweet shepherd, hie thee, For methinks thou stay'st too long 12

XIII

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly,
A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud,
A brittle glass that's broken presently
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower, Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour 6
And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead he wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty blemish'd once 's for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost 12

XIV

Good night, good rest Ah! neither be my share
She bade good night that kept my rest away,
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay

'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again to-morrow;
 Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn of friendship, nill I construe whether
 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
 'T may be, again to make me wander thither
 'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself, 11
 As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf

Lord! how mine eyes throw gazes to the east,
 My heart doth charge the watch, the morning rise Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
 While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
 And wish her lays were tuned like the lark, 18

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
 And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night
 The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty,
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight,
 Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow,
 For why, she sigh'd and bade me come to-morrow 24

Were I with her, the night would post too soon,
 But now are minutes added to the hours,
 To spite me now, each minute seems a moon, Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
 Pack night, peep day, good day, of night now borrow Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow 30

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC

I

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
 That liked of her master as well as well might be,
 Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
 Her fancy fell a-turning 4
 Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
 To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight
 To put in practice either, alas! it was a spite Unto the silly damsel. 8
 But one must be refused, more mickle was the pain
 That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
 For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain
 Alas! she could not help it. 12
 Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
 Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away, Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay,
 For now my song is ended. 16

II

On a day, alack the day!
 Love, whose month was ever May,
 Spied a blossom passing fair,
 Playing in the wanton air 4
 Through the velvet leaves the wind,
 All unseen, 'gan passage find,
 That the lover, sick to death,
 Wish'd himself the heaven's breath. 8

'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow;
 Air, would I might triumph so!
 But, alas! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn 12
 Vow, alack! for youth unmeet
 Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet Thou for whom Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiop were, 16
 And deny himself for Jove, Turning mortal for thy love'

III

My flocks feed not,
 My ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not,
 All is amiss 4
 Love's denying,
 Faith's defying,
 Heart's renying,
 Causar of this 8
 All my merry jgs are quite forgot,
 All my lady's love is lost, God wot
 Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
 There a nay is plac'd without remove. 12
 One silly cross
 Wrought all my loss,
 O! frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame,
 For now I see 16
 Inconstancy
 More in women than in men remain.
 In black mourn I,
 All fears scorn I, 20
 Love hath forlorn me,
 Living in thrall
 Heart is bleeding,
 All help needing, 24
 O! cruel speeding,
 Fraughted with gall.

- My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell, 28
My curtal dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid,
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep, 32
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground, Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight! 36
- Clear well spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not Forth their dye, 40
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully 44
All our pleasure known to us poor swans,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead. 48
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan
Poor Corydon 52
Must live alone,
Other help for him I see that there is none
- IV
- Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou should'st strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy, partial wight 4
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwed
And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk, 8
Lest she some subtle practice smell,
A cripple soon can find a halt.
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell. 12
What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night,
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight, 16
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away
What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay, 20
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
'Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then.' 24
And to her will frame all thy ways,
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear 28
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.
- Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true, 32
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose anew
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back 36
The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know 40
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?
Think, women love to match with men
And not to live so like a saint 44
Here is no heaven, they holy then Begin when age doth them attaint.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed 48
But, soft! enough! too much, I fear,
For if my mistress hear my song,
She will not stuck to ring my ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long 52
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.
- V
- Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields 4
There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals 8
There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle 12
A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs,
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love 16
- LOVE'S ANSWER
- If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love 20
- VI
- As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made, 4
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring,
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone 8
She, poor bird, as all forlorn, Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity 12
'Fie, fie, fie!' now would she cry,
'Tereu, Tereu!' by and by;

That to hear her so complain, Scarce I could from tears refrain, For her griefs, so lively shown, Made me think upon mine own Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain, None takes pity on thy pain Senseless trees they cannot hear thee, Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee King Pandion he is dead, All thy friends are lapp'd in lead, All thy fellow buds do sing Careless of thy sorrowing Even so, poor bird, like thee, None alive will pity me, Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd, Thou and I were both beguil'd Every one that flatters thee Is no friend in misery Words are easy, like the wind, Faithful friends are hard to find Every man will be thy friend Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend,	16 20 24 28 32 36	But if store of crowns be scant, No man will supply thy want. If that one be prodigal, Bountiful they will him call, And with such-like flattering, 'Fity but he were a king' If he be addict to vice, Quickly him they will entice, If to women he be bent, They have him at commandment But if Fortune once do frown, Then farewell his great renown, They that fawn'd on him before Use his company no more He that is thy friend indeed, He will help thee in thy need If thou sorrow, he will weep, If thou wake, he cannot sleep Thus of every grief in heart He with thee does bear a part These are certain signs to know Faithful friend from flattering foe	40 44 48 52 56

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE

Let the bird of loudest lay, On the sole Arabian tree, Herald sad and trumpet be, To whose sound chaste wings obey	4	Property was thus appall'd, That the self was not the same, Single nature's double name Neither two nor one was call'd	40
But thou shrieking harbinger, Foul precursor of the fiend, Augur of the fever's end, To this troop come thou not near	8	Reason, in itself confounded, Saw division grow together, To themselves yet either neither, Simple were so well compounded,	44
From this session interdict Every fowl of tyrant wing, Save the eagle, feather'd king Keep the obsequy so strict	12	That it cried, 'How true a twain Seemeth this concordant one! Love hath reason, reason none, If what parts can so remain.'	48
Let the priest in surplice white That defunctive music can, Be the death-divining swan, Lest the requiem lack his right	16	Whereupon it made this threne To the phoenix and the dove, Co-supremes and stars of love, As chorus to their tragic scene.	52
And thou treble-dated crow, That thy sable gender mak'st With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st, 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go	20	THRENOS
Here the anthem doth commence Love and constancy is dead, Phoenix and the turtle fled In a mutual flame from hence	24	Beauty, truth, and rarity Grace in all simplicity, Here enclos'd in cinders lie.	55
So they lov'd, as love in twain Had the essence but in one, Two distincts, division none Number there in love was slain	28	Death is now the phoenix' nest, And the turtle's loyal breast To eternity doth rest,	58
Hearts remote, yet not asunder, Distance, and no space was seen 'Twixt the turtle and his queen But in them it were a wonder	32	Leaving no posterity 'Twas not their infirmity, It was married chastity.	61
So between them love did shine, That the turtle saw his right Flaming in the phoenix' sight; Either was the other's mine.	36	Truth may seem, but cannot be; Beauty brag, but 'tis not she; Truth and beauty buri'd be	64
		To this urn let those repair That are either true or fair; For these dead birds sigh a prayer	67

INDEX OF FIRST LINES OF SONGS, ETC.

A cup of wine that s brisk and fine
All that glisters is not gold
An old hare hoar and an old hare hoar
And let me the canakin clink, clink
And will he not come again?
Art thou god to shepherd turn d
Be merry be merry my wife has all Blow blow thou winter wind
But shall I go mourn for that my dear?
Come away come away death
Come thou monarch of the vine
Come unto these yellow sands
Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye
Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer Done to death by slanderous tongues Fear no more the heat o the sun Fie on sinful fantasy
Fill the cup and let it come Flout em and scout em
Fools had ne er less grace in a year
For I the ballad will repeat
From the east to western Ind
Full fathom five thy father lies Full merrily the humble bee doth sing
Get you hence for I must go
Hark! hark! the lark at heaven s gate sings
He that has a little tiny wit
Honour, riches marriage blessing
How should I your true love know
I am gone sir
I may command where I adore
If a hart do lack a hind
If it do come to pass
If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
If she be made of white and red Immortal gods I crave no pelf
In youth when I did love did love
It was a lover and his lass Jog on jog on the footpath way
Jove knows I love
King Stephen was a worthy peer Knocks go and come God s vassals drop and die Lawn as white as driven snow
Love love, nothing but love still more!
My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly
No more dams I ll make for fish
Now my charms are all o erthrown
O heart heavy heart
O mistress mine! where are you roaming?
O sweet Oliver
On a day, alack the day
Orpheus with his lute made tree
Over hill, over dale

Peace ho! I bar confusion Sigh no more, ladies sigh no more
 Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
 So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not Swithold footed thrice the old Take O take those lips away
 Tell me where is fancy bred
 The cod piece that will house
 The fire seven times tried thus
 The god of love
 The master the swabber the boatswain and I
 The ouzel cock so black of hue
 The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree
 The raging rocks
 Then is there mirth in heaven
 Then they for sudden joy did weep
 They bore him barefaced on the bier
 Thine own true knight
 To shallow rivers to whose falls To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day
 Under the greenwood tree Was this fair face the cause quoth she Wedding is great Juno's crown
 What shall he have that kill'd the deer?
 When daffodils begin to peer
 When daisies pied and violets blue
 When gripping grief the heart doth wound
 When icicles hang by the wall
 When that I was and a little tiny boy
 Where the bee sucks there suck I While you here do snoring lie
 Who doth ambition shun
 Who is Silvia? what is she?
 Why should this a desert be Will you buy any tape
 You must sing, & down a down
 You spotted snakes with double tongue
 You that choose not by the view

NOTES ON THE SEQUENCE OF SHAKESPEARE'S PLAYS

Three representative lists are here printed for comparison (1) the order suggested by Malone, the first who handled the problem with wide knowledge and with the insight of a scholar, but who lacked much information which we now possess, (2) that adopted from Delius by Furnivall, based to some extent on metrical tests, (3) that of modern critics, so far as the available evidence when gathered up and carefully considered, leads to definite or probable results

F M

The sources on which scholars draw for their evidence are five in number —

(1) The Dates of Performance Henslowe's Diary records the appearance of 'hary the vj'—i.e. the First Part of King Henry VI, as a new play on March 3, 1592 and of 'titus and ondronicus' on January 23, 1594 John Manningham saw Twelfth Night at the Middle Temple on February 2, 1602 the Revels Accounts note court performances of Othello at Hallowmas (Nov. 1), 1604, Measure for Measure on December 26, 1604, and The Tempest at Hallowmas, 1611 Simon Forman saw Macbeth on April 20, 1610, The Winter's Tale on May 15, 1611, and Cymbeline at some intermediate date A very important date usually ignored is the evidence of a German, Thomas Platter, who saw a play of Julius Caesar in London on September 21, 1599, followed by a jig (Anglia, Band 22, pp. 456-64), there can be little doubt that this was Shakespeare's play But even a definite date such as that of the first performance of Titus Andronicus causes misgivings If the text which has come down to us is Shakespeare's, it looks like poor prentice-work—an exaggerated copy of the style of Kyd such as might have been written at the outset of his career, yet it is difficult to believe that the author of Richard III and Romeo and Juliet failed completely as an artist, but at once recovered himself with Richard II

(2) Literary allusions The most important is Francis Meres's list in Palladis Tamia, 1598 of the plays then written—The Two Gentlemen of Verona, The Comedy of Errors, Love's Labour's Lost, [Love's Labour Won] A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Merchant of Venice, Richard II, Richard III, Henry IV, King John, Titus Andronicus, and Romeo and Juliet The famous note of Gabriel Harvey, suggesting that he had seen Shakespeare's Hamlet in 1598, raises a problem instead of solving it

(3) Allusions in the Plays Unfortunately these are few in number, and more often than not prove deceptive But a clear example is the allusion to Essex in Ireland in the chorus before the last act of King Henry V, which fixes the date of the performance between April 15 and September 28, 1599

(4) The Date of Publication This always gives a downward limit and is sometimes helpful Thus the licensing of Troilus and Cressida for publication in 1603, though no edition earlier than 1609 is now known, is a valuable clue

(5) Style and Versification These are dangerous tests, but certain broad characteristics of Shakespeare's art emerge from them if they are tactfully used The comparative frequency of rhyme and of prose is usually an indication of early and late work respectively, so too the change in modulating blank verse from a form so stereotyped at first that it tends to the couplet, to the perfect freedom of the romantic plays Thus it is a fact of value to note that Shakespeare's use of a weakly stressed ending to the line, carrying over the rhythm to the line which follows, begins as a slight experiment in Macbeth, where two lines (ii. 1. 12, iv. iii. 22) end with 'and' Again, a blind adherence to the rhyme test would make the Midsummer Night's Dream Shakespeare's earliest play, but a sober criticism will note that the fairy setting gave scope for purely poetic writing and justified a lavish use of rhyme

The chronology of Shakespeare's plays is far from certain, and a heavy proportion of the dates assigned to them is conjectural Perhaps what may be called a working order has been established, but even then we cannot be certain that the texts handed down to us are those of the first performance Love's Labour's Lost was stated on the title-page of the 1598 Quarto to have been 'Newly corrected and augmented By W. Shakespere' and the text exhibits clear traces of revision
